PREFACE

THE aim and purport of this edition of the Poems of Samuel Taylor Coleridge is to provide the general reader with an authoritative list of the poems hitherto published, and at the same time to furnish the student with an exhaustive summary of various readings derived from published and unpublished sources, viz. (1) the successive editions issued by the author, (2) holograph MSS., or (3) contemporary transcriptions. Occasion has been taken to include in the Text and Appendices a considerable number of poems, fragments, metrical experiments and first drafts of poems now published for the first time from MSS. in the British Museum, from Coleridge's Notebooks, and from MSS. in the possession of private collectors.

The text of the poems follows that of the last edition of the Poetical Works published in the author's lifetime—the three-volume edition issued by Pickering in the spring and summer of 1834.

I have adopted the text of 1834 in preference to that of 1829, which was selected by James Dykes Campbell for his monumental edition of 1893. I should have deferred to his authority but for the existence of conclusive proof that, here and there, Coleridge altered and emended the text of 1829, with a view to the forthcoming edition of 1834. In the Preface to the 'new edition' of 1852, the editors maintain that the three-volume edition of 1828 (a mistake for 1829) was the last upon which Coleridge was 'able to bestow personal care and attention', while that of 1834 was 'arranged mainly if not entirely at the discretion of his latest editor, H. N. Coleridge'. This, no doubt, was perfectly true with regard to the choice and arrangement of the poems, and the labour of seeing the three volumes through the press; but the fact remains that the text of 1829 differs from that of 1834, and that Coleridge himself, and not his 'latest editor', was responsible for that difference.

I have in my possession the proof of the first page of the 'Destiny of Nations' as it appeared in 1828 and 1829. Line 5 ran thus: 'The Will, the Word, the Breath, the Living God.' This line is erased and line 5 of 1834 substituted: 'To the Will Absolute, the One, the Good' and line 6, 'The I AM, the Word, the Life, the Living God,' is added, and, in 1834, appeared for the first time. Moreover, in the 'Songs of the Pixies', lines 9, 11, 12, 15, 16, as printed in 1834, differ from the readings of 1829 and all previous editions. Again, in 'Christabel' lines 6, 7 as printed in 1834 differ from the versions of 1828, 1829, and revert to the original reading of the MSS. and the First Edition. It is inconceivable that in Coleridge's lifetime and while his pen was still busy, his nephew should have meddled with, or remodelled, the master's handiwork.

The poems have been printed, as far as possible, in chronological order, but when no MS. is extant, or when the MS. authority is a first draft embodied in a notebook, the exact date can only be arrived at by a balance of probabilities. Some of the fragments (vide post, p. 493, n. 1) I have since discovered are not original compositions, but were selected passages from elder poets—amongst them Cartwright's lines, entitled 'The Second Birth', which are printed on p. 362 of the text; but for their insertion in the edition of 1893, for a few misreadings of the MSS., and for their approximate date, I was mainly responsible.

In preparing the textual and bibliographical notes which are now printed as footnotes to the poems I was constantly indebted for information and suggestions to the Notes to the Poems (pp. 561-654) in the edition of 1893. I have taken nothing for granted, but I have followed, for the most part, where Dykes Campbell led, and if I differ from his conclusions or have been able to supply fresh information, it is because fresh information based on fresh material was at my disposal.

No apology is needed for publishing a collation of the text of Coleridge's Poems with that of earlier editions or with the MSS. of first drafts and alternative versions. The first to attempt anything of the kind was Richard Herne Shepherd, the learned and accurate editor of the Poetical Works in four volumes, issued by Basil Montagu Pickering in 1877. Important variants are recorded by Mr. Campbell in his Notes to the edition of 1893; and in a posthumous volume, edited by Mr. Hale White in 1899 (Coleridge's Poems, &c.), the corrected parts of 'Religious Musings', the MSS. of 'Lewti', the 'Introduction to the Dark Ladié', and other poems are reproduced in facsimile. Few poets have altered the text of their poems so often, and so often for the better, as Coleridge. He has been blamed for 'writing so little', for deserting poetry for metaphysics and theology; he has been upbraided for winning only to lose the 'prize of his high calling'. Sir Walter Scott, one of his kindlier censors, rebukes him for 'the caprice and indolence with which he has thrown from him, as if in mere wantonness, those unfinished scraps of poetry, which like the Torso of antiquity defy the skill of his poetical brethren to complete them'. But whatever may be said for or against Coleridge as an 'inventor of harmonies', neither the fineness of his self-criticism nor the laborious diligence which he expended on perfecting his inventions can be gainsaid. His erasures and emendations are not only a lesson in the art of poetry, not only a record of poetical growth and development, but they discover and reveal the hidden springs, the thoughts and passions of the artificer.

But if this be true of a stanza, a line, a word here or there, inserted as an afterthought, is there use or sense in printing a number of trifling or, apparently, accidental variants? Might not a choice have been made, and the jots and tittles ignored or suppressed?

My plea is that it is difficult if not impossible to draw a line above which a variant is important and below which it is negligible; that, to use a word of the poet's own coining, his emendations are rarely if ever 'lightheartednesses'; and that if a collation of the printed text with MSS. is worth studying at all the one must be as decipherable as the other. Facsimiles are rare and costly productions, and an exhaustive table of variants is the nearest approach to a substitute. Many, I know, are the shortcomings, too many, I fear, are the errors in the footnotes to this volume, but now, for the first time, the MSS. of Coleridge's poems which are known to be extant are in a manner reproduced and made available for study and research.

Six poems of some length are now printed and included in the text of the poems for the first time.

The first, 'Easter Holidays' (p. 1), is unquestionably a 'School-boy Poem', and was written some months before the author had completed his fifteenth year. It tends to throw doubt on the alleged date of 'Time, Real and Imaginary'.

The second, 'An Inscription for a Seat,' &c. (p. 349), was first published in the Morning Post, on October 21, 1800, Coleridge's twenty-eighth birthday. It remains an open question whether it was written by Coleridge or by Wordsworth. Both were contributors to the Morning Post. Both wrote 'Inscriptions'. Both had a hand in making the 'seat'. Neither claimed or republished the poem. It favours or, rather, parodies the style and sentiments now of one and now of the other.

The third, 'The Rash Conjuror' (p. 399), must have been read by H. N. Coleridge, who included the last seven lines, the 'Epilogue', in the first volume of Literary Remains, published in 1836. I presume that, even as a fantasia, the subject was regarded as too extravagant, and, it may be, too coarsely worded for publication. It was no doubt in the first instance a 'metrical experiment', but it is to be interpreted allegorically. The 'Rash Conjuror', the âme damnée, is the adept in the black magic of metaphysics. But for that he might have been like his brothers, a 'Devonshire Christian'.

The fourth, 'The Madman and the Lethargist' (p. 414), is an expansion of an epigram in the Greek Anthology. It is possible that it was written in Germany in 1799, and is contemporary with the epigrams published in the Morning Post in 1802, for the Greek original is quoted by Lessing in a critical excursus on the nature of an epigram.

The fifth, 'Faith, Hope, and Charity' (p. 427), was translated from the Italian of Guarini at Calne, in 1815.

Of the sixth, 'The Delinquent Travellers' (p. 443), I know nothing save that the MS., a first copy, is in Coleridge's handwriting. It was probably written for and may have been published in a newspaper or periodical. It was certainly written at Highgate.

Of the first drafts and alternative versions of well-known poems thirteen are now printed for the first time. Two versions of 'The Eolian Harp', preserved in the Library of Rugby School, and the dramatic fragment entitled 'The Triumph of Loyalty', are of especial interest and importance.

An exact reproduction of the text of the 'Ancyent Marinere' as printed in an early copy of the Lyrical Ballads of 1798 which belonged to S. T. Coleridge, and a collation of the text of the 'Introduction to the Tale of the Dark Ladié', as published in the Morning Post, Dec. 21, 1799, with two MSS. preserved in the British Museum, are included in Appendix No. I.

The text of the 'Allegoric Vision' has been collated with the original MS. and with the texts of 1817 and 1829.

A section has been devoted to 'Metrical Experiments'; eleven out of thirteen are now published for the first time. A few critical notes by Professor Saintsbury are, with his kind permission, appended to the text.

The bibliographical record of the successive editions of poems and dramas published by Coleridge himself and of the principal collected and selected editions which have been published since 1834 is long and intricate, but the history of the gradual accretions may be summed up in a few sentences. 'The Fall of Robespierre' was published in 1795. A first edition, entitled 'Poems on Various Subjects', was published in 1796. Second and third editions, with additions and subtractions, followed in 1797 and 1803. Two poems, 'The Rime of the Ancyent Marinere' and 'The Nightingale, a Conversation Poem', and two extracts from an unpublished drama ('Osorio') were included in the Lyrical Ballads of 1798. A quarto pamphlet containing three poems, 'Fears in Solitude,' 'France: An Ode,' 'Frost at Midnight,' was issued in the same year. 'Love' was first published in the second edition of the Lyrical Ballads, 1800. 'The Three Graves,' 'A Hymn before Sunrise, &c.,' and 'Idolo-clastes Satyrane’, were included in the Friend (Sept.–Nov., 1809). ‘Christabel,’ ‘Kubla Khan,’ and ‘The Pains of Sleep’ were published by themselves in 1816. Sibylline Leaves, which appeared in 1817 and was described as ‘A Collection of Poems’, included the contents of the editions of 1797 and 1803, the poems published in the Lyrical Ballads of 1798, 1800, and the quarto pamphlet of 1798, but excluded the contents of the first edition (except the ‘Eolian Harp’), ‘Christabel’, ‘Kubla Khan’, and ‘The Pains of Sleep’. The first collected edition of the Poetical Works (which included a selection of the poems published in the three first editions, a reissue of Sibylline Leaves, the ‘Wanderings of Cain’, a few poems recently contributed to periodicals, and the following dramas—the translation of Schiller’s ‘Piccolomini’, published in 1800, ‘Remorse’—a revised version of ‘Osorio’—published in 1813, and ‘Zapolya’, published in 1817) was issued in three volumes in 1828. A second collected edition in three volumes, a reissue of 1828, with an amended text and the addition of ‘The Improvisatore’ and ‘The Garden of Boccaccio’, followed in 1829.

Finally, in 1834, there was a reissue in three volumes of the contents of 1829 with numerous additional poems then published or collected for the first time. The first volume contained twenty-six juvenilia printed from letters and MS. copybooks which had been preserved by the poet’s family, and the second volume some forty ‘Miscellaneous Poems’, extracted from the Notebooks or reprinted from newspapers. The most important additions were ‘Alice du Clos’, then first published from MS., ‘The Knight’s Tomb’ and the ‘Epitaph’. ‘Love, Hope, and Patience in Education’, which had appeared in the Keepsake of 1830, was printed on the last page of the third volume.

After Coleridge’s death the first attempt to gather up the fragments of his poetry was made by his ‘latest editor’ H. N. Coleridge in 1836. The first volume of Literary Remains contains the first reprint of ‘The Fall of Robespierre’, some thirty-six poems collected from the Watchman, the Morning Post, &c., and a selection of fragments then first printed from a MS. Notebook, now known as ‘the Gutch Memorandum Book’.

H. N. Coleridge died in 1843, and in 1844 his widow prepared a one-volume edition of the Poems, which was published by Pickering. Eleven juvenilia which had first appeared in 1834 were omitted and the poems first collected in Literary Remains were for the first time included in the text. In 1850 Mrs. H. N. Coleridge included in the third volume of the Essays on His Own Times six poems and numerous epigrams and jeux d'esprit which had appeared in the Morning Post and Courier. This was the first reprint of the Epigrams as a whole. A 'new edition' of the Poems which she had prepared in the last year of her life was published immediately after her death (May, 1852) by Edward Moxon. It was based on the one-volume edition of 1844, with unimportant omissions and additions; only one poem, 'The Hymn', was published for the first time from MS.

In the same year (1852) the Dramatic Works (not including 'The Fall of Robespierre'), edited by Derwent Coleridge, were published in a separate volume.

In 1863 and 1870 the 'new edition' of 1852 was reissued by Derwent Coleridge with an appendix containing thirteen poems collected for the first time in 1863. The reissue of 1870 contained a reprint of the first edition of the 'Ancient Mariner'.

The first edition of the Poetical Works, based on all previous editions, and including the contents of Literary Remains (vol. i) and of Essays on His Own Times (vol. iii), was issued by Basil Montagu Pickering in four volumes in 1877. Many poems (including 'Remorse') were collated for the first time with the text of previous editions and newspaper versions by the editor, Richard Herne Shepherd. The four volumes (with a Supplement to vol. ii) were reissued by Messrs. Macmillan in 1880.

Finally, in the one-volume edition of the Poetical Works issued by Messrs. Macmillan in 1893, J. D. Campbell included in the text some twenty poems and in the Appendix a large number of poetical fragments and first drafts then printed for the first time from MS.

The frontispiece of this edition is reproduced from a pencil sketch (circ. 1818) by C. R. Leslie, R.A., in the possession of the Editor. An engraving of the sketch, by Henry Meyer, is dated April, 1819.

I desire to express my thanks to my kinsman Lord Coleridge for opportunity kindly afforded me of collating the text of the fragments first published in 1893 with the original MSS. in his possession, and of making further extracts; to Mr. Gordon Wordsworth for permitting me to print a first draft of the poem addressed to his ancestor on the 'Growth of an Individual Mind'; and to Miss Arnold of Fox How for a copy of the first draft of the lines 'On Revisiting the Sea-shore'.

I have also to acknowledge the kindness and courtesy of the Authorities of Rugby School, who permitted me to publish first drafts of 'The Eolian Harp' and other poems which had formerly belonged to Joseph Cottle and were presented by Mr. Shadworth Hodgson to the School Library.

I am indebted to my friend Mr. Thomas Hutchinson for valuable information with regard to the authorship of some of the fragments, and for advice and assistance in settling the text of the 'Metrical Experiments' and other points of difficulty.

Lastly, I wish to thank Mr. H. S. Milford for the invaluable assistance which he afforded me in revising my collation of the 'Songs of the Pixies' and the 'Introduction to the Tale of the Dark Ladié', and some of the earlier poems, and the Reader of the Oxford University Press for numerous hints and suggestions, and for the infinite care which he has bestowed on the correction of slips of my own or errors of the press.

ERNEST HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

POEMS

VERSE 1ST

HAIL! festal Easter that dost bring
 Approach of sweetly-smiling spring,
     When Nature's clad in green:
 When feather'd songsters through the grove
 With beasts confess the power of love      5
     And brighten all the scene.

VERSE 2ND

Now youths the breaking stages load
 That swiftly rattling o'er the road
     To Greenwich haste away:
 While some with sounding oars divide      10
 Of smoothly-flowing Thames the tide
     All sing the festive lay.

VERSE 3RD

With mirthful dance they beat the ground,
 Their shouts of joy the hills resound
     And catch the jocund noise:      15
 Without a tear, without a sigh
 Their moments all in transports fly
     Till evening ends their joys.

VERSE 4TH

But little think their joyous hearts
 Of dire Misfortune's varied smarts      20
     Which youthful years conceal:
 Thoughtless of bitter-smiling Woe
 Which all mankind are born to know
     And they themselves must feel.

<sup>1</sup> From a hitherto unpublished MS. The lines were sent in a letter to Luke Coleridge, dated May 12, 1787.

VERSE 5TH

Yet he who Wisdom's paths shall keep 25
 And Virtue firm that scorns to weep
     At ills in Fortune's power,
 Through this life's variegated scene
 In raging storms or calm serene
     Shall cheerful spend the hour. 30

VERSE 6TH

While steady Virtue guides his mind
 Heav'n-born Content he still shall find
     That never sheds a tear :
 Without respect to any tide
 His hours away in bliss shall glide 35
     Like Easter all the year.

DURA NAVIS<sup>1</sup>

To tempt the dangerous deep, too venturous youth,
 Why does thy breast with fondest wishes glow?
 No tender parent there thy cares shall sooth,
 No much-lov'd Friend shall share thy every woe.
 Why does thy mind with hopes delusive burn? 5
 Vain are thy Schemes by heated Fancy plann'd:
 Thy promis'd joy thou'lt see to Sorrow turn
 Exil'd from Bliss, and from thy native land.

Hast thou foreseen the Storm's impending rage,
 When to the Clouds the Waves ambitious rise, 10
 And seem with Heaven a doubtful war to wage,
 Whilst total darkness overspreads the skies;
 Save when the lightnings darting wingéd Fate
 Quick bursting from the pitchy clouds between
 In forkéd Terror, and destructive state<sup>2</sup> 15
 Shall shew with double gloom the horrid scene?

<sup>2</sup> State, Grandeur [1792]. This school exercise, written in the 15th year of my age, does not contain a line that any clever schoolboy might not have written, and like most school poetry is a Putting of Thought into Verse; for such Verses as strivings of mind and struggles after the Intense and Vivid are a fair Promise of better things.—S. T. C. acta. suae 51. [1823.]

Shalt thou be at this hour from danger free?
 Perhaps with fearful force some falling Wave
 Shall wash thee in the wild tempestuous Sea,
 And in some monster's belly fix thy grave; 20
 Or (woful hap!) against some wave-worn rock
 Which long a Terror to each Bark had stood
 Shall dash thy mangled limbs with furious shock
 And stain its craggy sides with human blood.

Yet not the Tempest, or the Whirlwind's roar 25
 Equal the horrors of a Naval Fight,
 When thundering Cannons spread a sea of Gore
 And varied deaths now fire and now affright:
 The impatient shout, that longs for closer war,
 Reaches from either side the distant shores; 30
 Whilst frighten'd at His streams ensanguin'd far
 Loud on his troubled bed huge Ocean roars.<sup>1</sup>

What dreadful scenes appear before my eyes!
 Ah! see how each with frequent slaughter red,
 Regardless of his dying fellows' cries 35
 O'er their fresh wounds with impious order tread!
 From the dread place does soft Compassion fly!
 The Furies fell each alter'd breast command;
 Whilst Vengeance drunk with human blood stands by
 And smiling fires each heart and arms each hand. 40

Should'st thou escape the fury of that day
 A fate more cruel still, unhappy, view.
 Opposing winds may stop thy luckless way,
 And spread fell famine through the suffering crew,
 Canst thou endure th' extreme of raging Thirst 45
 Which soon may scorch thy throat, ah! thoughtless Youth!
 Or ravening hunger canst thou bear which erst
 On its own flesh hath fix'd the deadly tooth?

<sup>1</sup> I well remember old Jemmy Bowyer, the plagose Orbilius of Christ's Hospital, but an admirable educer no less than Educator of the Intellect, bade me leave out as many epithets as would turn the whole into eight-syllable lines, and then ask myself if the exercise would not be greatly improved. How often have I thought of the proposal since then, and how many thousand bloated and puffing lines have I read, that, by this process, would have tripped over the tongue excellently. Likewise, I remember that he told me on the same occasion—"Coleridge! the connections of a Declamation are not the transitions of Poetry—bad, however, as they are, they are better than "Apostrophes" and "O thou's", for at the worst they are something like common sense. The others are the grimaces of Lunacy."—S. T. COLERIDGE.

Dubious and fluttering 'twixt hope and fear
 With trembling hands the lot I see thee draw, 50
 Which shall, or sentence thee a victim drear,
 To that ghaunt Plague which savage knows no law:
 Or, deep thy dagger in the friendly heart,
 Whilst each strong passion agitates thy breast,
 Though oft with Horror back I see thee start, 55
 Lo! Hunger drives thee to th' inhuman feast.

These are the ills, that may the course attend—
 Then with the joys of home contented rest—
 Here, meek-eyed Peace with humble Plenty lend
 Their aid united still, to make thee blest. 60
 To ease each pain, and to increase each joy—
 Here mutual Love shall fix thy tender wife,
 Whose offspring shall thy youthful care employ
 And gild with brightest rays the evening of thy Life.

NIL PEJUS EST CAELIBE VITÂ<sup>1</sup>

[IN CHRIST'S HOSPITAL BOOK]

I

WHAT pleasures shall he ever find?
 What joys shall ever glad his heart?
 Or who shall heal his wounded mind,
 If tortur'd by Misfortune's smart?
 Who Hymeneal bliss will never prove, 5
 That more than friendship, friendship mix'd with love.

II

Then without child or tender wife,
 To drive away each care, each sigh,
 Lonely he treads the paths of life
 A stranger to Affection's tye: 10
 And when from Death he meets his final doom
 No mourning wife with tears of love shall wet his tomb.

III

Tho' Fortune, Riches, Honours, Pow'r,
 Had giv'n with every other toy,
 Those gilded trifles of the hour, 15
 Those painted nothings sure to cloy:
 He dies forgot, his name no son shall bear
 To shew the man so blest once breath'd the vital air.

TO THE AUTUMNAL MOON

MILD Splendour of the various-vested Night!
 Mother of wildly-working visions! hail!
 I watch thy gliding, while with watery light
 Thy weak eye glimmers through a fleecy veil;
 And when thou lovest thy pale orb to shroud 5
 Behind the gather'd blackness lost on high;
 And when thou darrest from the wind-rent cloud
 Thy placid lightning o'er the awaken'd sky.
 Ah such is Hope! as changeful and as fair!
 Now dimly peering on the wistful sight; 10
 Now hid behind the dragon-wing'd Despair:
 But soon emerging in her radiant might
 She o'er the sorrow-clouded breast of Care
 Sails, like a meteor kindling in its flight.

ANTHEM<sup>2</sup>

FOR THE CHILDREN OF CHRIST'S HOSPITAL

SERAPHS! around th' Eternal's seat who throng
 With tuneful ecstasies of praise:
 O! teach our feeble tongues like yours the song
 Of fervent gratitude to raise—

 3 yours] you MS. O.

Like you, inspired with holy<sup>1</sup> flame 5
 To dwell on that Almighty name
 Who bade the child of Woe no longer sigh,
 And Joy in tears o'erspread the widow's eye.
 Th' all-gracious Parent hears the wretch's prayer;
 The meek tear strongly pleads on high; 10
 Wan Resignation struggling with despair
 The Lord beholds with pitying eye;
 Sees cheerless Want unpitied pine,
 Disease on earth its head recline,
 And bids Compassion seek the realms of woe 15
 To heal the wounded, and to raise the low.
 She comes! she comes! the meek-eyed Power I see
 With liberal hand that loves to bless;
 The clouds of Sorrow at her presence flee;
 Rejoice! rejoice! ye Children of Distress! 20
 The beams that play around her head
 Thro' Want's dark vale their radiance spread:
 The young uncultur'd mind imbibes the ray,
 And Vice reluctant quits th' expected prey.
 Cease, thou lorn mother! cease thy wailings drear; 25
 Ye babes! the unconscious sob forego;
 Or let full Gratitude now prompt the tear
 Which erst did Sorrow force to flow.
 Unkindly cold and tempest shrill
 In Life's morn oft the traveller chill, 30
 But soon his path the sun of Love shall warm;
 And each glad scene look brighter for the storm!

JULIA<sup>1</sup>

[IN CHRIST'S HOSPITAL BOOK]

Medio de fonte leporum
 Surgit amari aliquid.

JULIA was blest with beauty, wit, and grace:
 Small poets lov'd to sing her blooming face.
 Before her altars, lo! a numerous train
 Preferr'd their vows; yet all preferr'd in vain,

Julia. Medio, &c.] De medio fonte leporum. Trollope.

Till charming Florio, born to conquer, came 5
 And touch'd the fair one with an equal flame.
 The flame she felt, and ill could she conceal
 What every look and action would reveal.
 With boldness then, which seldom fails to move,
 He pleads the cause of Marriage and of Love: 10
 The course of Hymeneal joys he rounds,
 The fair one's eyes danc'd pleasure at the sounds.
 Nought now remain'd but 'Noes'—how little meant!
 And the sweet coyness that endears consent.
 The youth upon his knees enraptur'd fell: 15
 The strange misfortune, oh! what words can tell?
 Tell! ye neglected sylphs! who lap-dogs guard,
 Why snatch'd ye not away your precious ward?
 Why suffer'd ye the lover's weight to fall
 On the ill-fated neck of much-lov'd Ball? 20
 The favourite on his mistress casts his eyes,
 Gives a short melancholy howl, and—dies.
 Sacred his ashes lie, and long his rest!
 Anger and grief divide poor Julia's breast.
 Her eyes she fixt on guilty Florio first: 25
 On him the storm of angry grief must burst.
 That storm he fled: he wooes a kinder fair,
 Whose fond affections no dear puppies share.
 'Twere vain to tell, how Julia pin'd away:
 Unhappy Fair! that in one luckless day— 30
 From future Almanacks the day be crost!—
 At once her Lover and her Lap-dog lost.

QUAE NOCENT DOCENT<sup>1</sup>

[IN CHRIST'S HOSPITAL BOOK]

O! mihi praeteritos referat si Jupiter annos!

OH! might my ill-past hours return again!
 No more, as then, should Sloth around me throw
 Her soul-enslaving, leaden chain!
 No more the precious time would I employ
 In giddy revels, or in thoughtless joy, 5
 A present joy producing future woe.

But o'er the midnight Lamp I'd love to pore,
 I'd seek with care fair Learning's depths to sound,
 And gather scientific Lore:
 Or to mature the embryo thoughts inclin'd,
 That half-conceiv'd lay struggling in my mind,
 The cloisters' solitary gloom I'd round.

'Tis vain to wish, for Time has ta'en his flight—
 For follies past be ceas'd the fruitless tears:

Let follies past to future care incite.

THE NOSE<sup>1</sup>

YE souls unus'd to lofty verse

Who sweep the earth with lowly wing,

Like sand before the blast disperse—

A Nose! a mighty Nose I sing!

As erst Prometheus stole from heaven the fire

To animate the wonder of his hand;

Thus with unhallow'd hands, O Muse, aspire,

And from my subject snatch a burning brand!

So like the Nose I sing—my verse shall glow—

Like Phlegethon my verse in waves of fire shall flow!

Light of this once all darksome spot

Where now their glad course mortals run,

First-born of Sirius begot

Upon the focus of the Sun—

I'll call thee ——! for such thy earthly name—

What name so high, but what too low must be?

Comets, when most they drink the solar flame

Are but faint types and images of thee!

I saw when from the turtle feast
The thick dark smoke in volumes rose !
I saw the darkness of the mist
Encircle thee, O Nose !

Shorn of thy rays thou shott'st a fearful gleam 25
(The turtle quiver'd with prophetic fright)
Gloomy and sullen thro' the night of steam :—
So Satan's Nose when Dunstan urg'd to flight,
Glowing from gripe of red-hot pincers dread
Athwart the smokes of Hell disastrous twilight shed ! 30

The Furies to madness my brain devote—
In robes of ice my body wrap !

On billowy flames of fire I float,

Hear ye my entrails how they snap ?

Some power unseen forbids my lungs to breathe ! 35

What fire-clad meteors round me whizzing fly !

I vitrify thy torrid zone beneath,

Proboscis fierce ! I am calcined ! I die !

Thus, like great Pliny, in Vesuvius' fire,

I perish in the blaze while I the blaze admire. 40

I

HEARD'ST thou yon universal cry,
 And dost thou linger still on Gallia's shore?
 Go, Tyranny! beneath some barbarous sky
 Thy terrors lost and ruin'd power deplore!
 What tho' through many a groaning age 5
 Was felt thy keen suspicious rage,
 Yet Freedom rous'd by fierce Disdain
 Has wildly broke thy triple chain,
 And like the storm which Earth's deep entrails hide,
 At length has burst its way and spread the ruins wide. 10

In sighs their sickly breath was spent; each gleam
 Of Hope had ceas'd the long long day to cheer;
 Or if delusive, in some flitting dream,
 It gave them to their friends and children dear—
 Awaked by lordly Insult's sound 15
 To all the doubled horrors round,
 Oft shrunk they from Oppression's band
 While Anguish rais'd the desperate hand
 For silent death; or lost the mind's controul,

 Shall she alone, O Freedom, boast thy care?

PROGRESS OF VICE<sup>1</sup>

[Nemo repente turpissimus]

DEEP in the gulph of Vice and Woe
 Leaps Man at once with headlong throw?
 Him inborn Truth and Virtue guide,
 Whose guards are Shame and conscious Pride.
 In some gay hour Vice steals into the breast; 5
 Perchance she wears some softer Virtue's vest.
 By unperceiv'd degrees she tempts to stray,
 Till far from Virtue's path she leads the feet away.

Then swift the soul to disenthral
 Will Memory the past recall, 10
 And Fear before the Victim's eyes
 Bid future ills and dangers rise.
 But hark! the Voice, the Lyre, their charms combine—
 Gay sparkles in the cup the generous Wine—
 Th' inebriate dance, the fair frail Nymph inspires, 15
 And Virtue vanquish'd—scorn'd—with hasty flight retires.

But soon to tempt the Pleasures cease;
 Yet Shame forbids return to peace,
 And stern Necessity will force
 Still to urge on the desperate course. 20

MONODY ON THE DEATH OF CHATTERTON<sup>1</sup>

[FIRST VERSION, IN CHRIST'S HOSPITAL BOOK—1790]

Cold penury repress'd his noble rage,
And froze the genial current of his soul.

Now prompts the Muse poetic lays,
And high my bosom beats with love of Praise!
But, Chatterton! methinks I hear thy name,
For cold my Fancy grows, and dead each Hope of Fame.

When Want and cold Neglect had chill'd thy soul, 5
Athirst for Death I see thee drench the bowl!

Thy corpse of many a livid hue
On the bare ground I view,
Whilst various passions all my mind engage;
Now is my breast distended with a sigh, 10
And now a flash of Rage
Darts through the tear, that glistens in my eye.

Is this the land of liberal Hearts!
Is this the land, where Genius ne'er in vain
Pour'd forth her soul-enchancing strain? 15

Ah me! yet Butler 'gainst the bigot foe
Well-skill'd to aim keen Humour's dart,
Yet Butler felt Want's poignant sting;
And Otway, Master of the Tragic art,
Whom Pity's self had taught to sing, 20

14 MONODY ON THE DEATH OF CHATTERTON

Sank beneath a load of Woe;
 This ever can the generous Briton hear,
 And starts not in his eye th' indignant Tear?
 Elate of Heart and confident of Fame,
 From vales where Avon sports, the Minstrel came, 25
 Gay as the Poet hastes along
 He meditates the future song,
 How Ælla battled with his country's foes,
 And whilst Fancy in the air
 Paints him many a vision fair 30
 His eyes dance rapture and his bosom glows.
 With generous joy he views th' ideal gold:
 He listens to many a Widow's prayers,
 And many an Orphan's thanks he hears;
 He soothes to peace the care-worn breast, 35
 He bids the Debtor's eyes know rest,
 And Liberty and Bliss behold:
 And now he punishes the heart of steel,
 And her own iron rod he makes Oppression feel.
 Fated to heave sad Disappointment's sigh, 40
 To feel the Hope now rais'd, and now deprest,
 To feel the burnings of an injur'd breast,
 From all thy Fate's deep sorrow keen
 In vain, O Youth, I turn th' affrighted eye;
 For powerful Fancy evernigh 45
 The hateful picture forces on my sight.
 There, Death of every dear delight,
 Frowns Poverty of Giant mien!
 In vain I seek the charms of youthful grace,
 Thy sunken eye, thy haggard cheeks it shews, 50
 The quick emotions struggling in the Face
 Faint index of thy mental Throes,
 When each strong Passion spurn'd controll,
 And not a Friend was nigh to calm thy stormy soul.
 Such was the sad and gloomy hour 55
 When anguish'd Care of sullen brow
 Prepared the Poison's death-cold power.
 Already to thy lips was rais'd the bowl,
 When filial Pity stood thee by,

And from thy Fate shall such distress ensue?
 Ah! dash the poison'd chalice from thy hand! 70
 And thou had'st dash'd it at her soft command;
 But that Despair and Indignation rose,
 And told again the story of thy Woes,
 Told the keen insult of th' unfeeling Heart,
 The dread dependence on the low-born mind, 75
 Told every Woe, for which thy breast might smart,
 Neglect and grinning scorn and Want combin'd—
 Recoiling back, thou sent'st the friend of Pain
 To roll a tide of Death thro' every freezing vein.

 Grant me, like thee, the lyre to sound,
 Like thee, with fire divine to glow—

SWEET Muse! companion of my every hour!
 Voice of my Joy! Sure soother of the sigh!
 Now plume thy pinions, now exert each power,
 And fly to him who owns the candid eye.
 And if a smile of Praise thy labour hail
 (Well shall thy labours then my mind employ)
 Fly fleetly back, sweet Muse! and with the tale
 O'erspread my Features with a flush of Joy!

ANNA AND HARLAND<sup>2</sup>

WITHIN these wilds was Anna wont to rove
 While Harland told his love in many a sigh,
 But stern on Harland roll'd her brother's eye,
 They fought, they fell—her brother and her love!
 To Death's dark house did grief-worn Anna haste,
 Yet here her pensive ghost delights to stay;
 Oft pouring on the winds the broken lay—
 And hark, I hear her—'twas the passing blast.
 I love to sit upon her tomb's dark grass,
 Then Memory backward rolls Time's shadowy tide;
 The tales of other days before me glide:
 With eager thought I seize them as they pass;
 For fair, tho' faint, the forms of Memory gleam,
 Like Heaven's bright beauteous bow reflected in the stream.

PAIN<sup>1</sup>

ONCE could the Morn's first beams, the healthful breeze,
 All Nature charm, and gay was every hour:—
 But ah! not Music's self, nor fragrant bower
 Can glad the trembling sense of wan Disease.
 Now that the frequent pangs my frame assail, 5
 Now that my sleepless eyes are sunk and dim,
 And seas of Pain seem waving through each limb—
 Ah what can all Life's gilded scenes avail?
 I view the crowd, whom Youth and Health inspire,
 Hear the loud laugh, and catch the sportive lay, 10
 Then sigh and think—I too could laugh and play
 And gaily sport it on the Muse's lyre,
 Ere Tyrant Pain had chas'd away delight,
 Ere the wild pulse throb'd anguish thro' the night!

MONODY ON A TEA-KETTLE<sup>1</sup>

O MUSE who sangest late another's pain,
 To griefs domestic turn thy coal-black steed!
 With slowest steps thy funeral steed must go,
 Nodding his head in all the pomp of woe:
 Wide scatter round each dark and deadly weed, 5
 And let the melancholy dirge complain,
 (Whilst Bats shall shriek and Dogs shall howling run)
 The tea-kettle is spoilt and Coleridge is undone!
 Your cheerful songs, ye unseen crickets, cease!
 Let songs of grief your alter'd minds engage! 10
 For he who sang responsive to your lay,
 What time the joyous bubbles 'gan to play,
 The sooty swain has felt the fire's fierce rage;—
 Yes, he is gone, and all my woes increase;
 I heard the water issuing from the wound— 15
 No more the Tea shall pour its fragrant steams around!
 O Goddess best belov'd! Delightful Tea!
 With thee compar'd what yields the madd'ning Vine?
 Sweet power! who know'st to spread the calm delight,
 And the pure joy prolong to midmost night! 20
 Ah! must I all thy varied sweets resign?
 Enfolded close in grief thy form I see;
 No more wilt thou extend thy willing arms,
 Receive the fervent Jove, and yield him all thy charms!

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Cambridge Intelligencer for Nov. 1, 1794: included in the editions of 1796, 1803, 1823, 1829, and 1834. Three MSS. are extant; (1) an autograph in a copy-book made for the family [MS. O]; (2) an autograph in a copy-book presented to Mrs. Estlin [MS. E]; and (3) a transcript included in a copy-book presented to Sara Coleridge in 1823 [MS. O (c)]. In an unpublished letter dated Dec. 18, 1807, Coleridge invokes the aid of Richard ['Conservation'] Sharp on behalf of a 'Mrs. Brewman, who was elected a nurse to one of the wards of Christ's Hospital at the time that I was a boy there'. He says elsewhere that he spent full half the time from seventeen to eighteen in the sick ward of Christ's Hospital. It is doubtless to this period, 1789-90, that Pain and Genevieve, which, according to a Christ's Hospital tradition, were inspired by his 'Nurse's Daughter', must be assigned.

ON RECEIVING AN ACCOUNT THAT HIS ONLY SISTER'S DEATH WAS INEVITABLE<sup>1</sup>

THE tear which mourn'd a brother's fate scarce dry—
 Pain after pain, and woe succeeding woe—
 Is my heart destin'd for another blow?
 O my sweet sister! and must thou too die?
 Ah! how has Disappointment pour'd the tear
 O'er infant Hope destroy'd by early frost!
 How are ye gone, whom most my soul held dear!
 Scarce had I lov'd you ere I mourn'd you lost;
 Say, is this hollow eye, this heartless pain,
 Fated to rove thro' Life's wide cheerless plain—
 Nor father, brother, sister meet its ken—
 My woes, my joys unshared! Ah! long ere then
 On me thy icy dart, stern Death, be prov'd;—
 Better to die, than live and not be lov'd!

ON SEEING A YOUTH AFFECTIONATELY WELCOMED BY A SISTER.<sup>1</sup>

I too a sister had! too cruel Death!

How sad Remembrance bids my bosom heave!

Tranquil her soul, as sleeping Infant's breath;

Meek were her manners as a vernal Eve.

Knowledge, that frequent lifts the bloated mind, 5

Gave her the treasure of a lowly breast,

And Wit to venom'd Malice oft assign'd,

Dwelt in her bosom in a Turtle's nest.

Cease, busy Memory! cease to urge the dart;

Nor on my soul her love to me impress! 10

For oh I mourn in anguish—and my heart

Feels the keen pang, th' unutterable distress.

Yet wherefore grieve I that her sorrows cease,

For Life was misery, and the Grave is Peace!

A MATHEMATICAL PROBLEM<sup>2</sup>

If Pegasus will let thee only ride him,
Spurning my clumsy efforts to o'erstride him,
Some fresh expedient the Muse will try,
And walk on stilts, although she cannot fly.

TO THE REV. GEORGE COLERIDGE

DEAR BROTHER,

I have often been surprised that Mathematics, the quintessence of Truth, should have found admirers so few and so languid. Frequent consideration and minute scrutiny have at length unravelled the cause; viz. that though Reason is feasted, Imagination is starved; whilst Reason is luxuriating in its proper Paradise, Imagination is wearily travelling on a dreary desert. To assist Reason by the stimulus of Imagination is the design of the following production. In the execution of it much may be objectionable. The verse (particularly in the introduction of the ode) may be accused of unwarrantable liberties, but they are liberties equally homogeneal with the exactness of Mathematical disquisition, and the boldness of Pindarie daring. I have three strong champions to defend me against the attacks of Criticism: the Novelty, the Difficulty, and the Utility of the work. I may justly plume myself that I first have drawn the nymph Mathesis from the visionary caves of abstracted idea, and caused her to unite with Harmony. The first-born of this Union I now present to you; with interested motives indeed—as I expect to receive in return the more valuable offspring of your Muse.

O, curas hominum! O, quantum est in rebus inane!

THE fervid Sun had more than halv'd the day,
 When gloomy on his couch Philedon lay;
 His feeble frame consumptive as his purse,
 His aching head did wine and women curse;
 His fortune ruin'd and his wealth decay'd, 5
 Clamorous his duns, his gaming debts unpaid,
 The youth indignant seiz'd his tailor's bill,
 And on its back thus wrote with moral quill:
 'Various as colours in the rainbow shown,
 Or similar in emptiness alone, 10
 How false, how vain are Man's pursuits below!
 Wealth, Honour, Pleasure—what can ye bestow?
 Yet see, how high and low, and young and old
 Pursue the all-delusive power of Gold.
 Fond man! should all Peru thy empire own, 15
 For thee tho' all Golconda's jewels shone,
 What greater bliss could all this wealth supply?
 What, but to eat and drink and sleep and die?
 Go, tempt the stormy sea, the burning soil—
 Go, waste the night in thought, the day in toil, 20

[Honour] No title, but motto as above MS. O.: Philedon, Eds. 1877, 1893.

Dark frowns the rock, and fierce the tempests rave—
 Thy ingots go the unconscious deep to pave!
 Or thunder at thy door the midnight train,
 Or Death shall knock that never knocks in vain.
 Next Honour's sons come bustling on amain ; 25
 I laugh with pity at the idle train.
 Infirm of soul! who think'st to lift thy name
 Upon the waxen wings of human fame,—
 Who for a sound, articulated breath—
 Gazest undaunted in the face of death! 30
 What art thou but a Meteor's glaring light—
 Blazing a moment and then sunk in night?
 Caprice which rais'd thee high shall hurl thee low,
 Or Envy blast the laurels on thy brow.
 To such poor joys could ancient Honour lead 35
 When empty fame was toiling Merit's meed;
 To Modern Honour other lays belong;
 Profuse of joy and Lord of right and wrong,
 Honour can game, drink, riot in the stew,
 Cut a friend's throat;—what cannot Honour do? 40
 Ah me!—the storm within can Honour still
 For Julio's death, whom Honour made me kill?
 Or will this lordly Honour tell the way
 To pay those debts, which Honour makes me pay?
 Or if with pistol and terrific threats 45
 I make some traveller pay my Honour's debts,
 A medicine for this wound can Honour give?
 Ah, no! my Honour dies to make my Honour live.
 But see! young Pleasure, and her train advance,
 And joy and laughter wake the inebriate dance; 50
 Around my neck she throws her fair white arms,
 I meet her loves, and madden at her charms.
 For the gay grape can joys celestial move,
 And what so sweet below as Woman's love?
 With such high transport every moment flies, 55
 I curse Experience that he makes me wise;
 For at his frown the dear deliriums flew,
 And the changed scene now wears a gloomy hue.
 A hideous hag th' Enchantress Pleasure seems,
 And all her joys appear but feverous dreams. 60

Such lays repentant did the Muse supply; 65
 When as the Sun was hastening down the sky,
 In glittering state twice fifty guineas come,—

ON IMITATION<sup>1</sup>

ALL are not born to soar—and ah! how few
 In tracks where Wisdom leads their paths pursue!
 Contagious when to wit or wealth allied,
 Folly and Vice diffuse their venom wide.
 On Folly every fool his talent tries; 5
 It asks some toil to imitate the wise;
 Tho' few like Fox can speak—like Pitt can think—
 Yet all like Fox can game—like Pitt can drink.

'Tis hard on Bagshot Heath to try
 Unclos'd to keep the weary eye;
 But ah! Oblivion's nod to get
 In rattling coach is harder yet.
 Slumbrous God of half-shut eye! 5
 Who lovest with limbs supine to lie;
 Soother sweet of toil and care
 Listen, listen to my prayer;
 And to thy votary dispense

 Yet lift that drowsy head awhile
 And yawn propitiously a smile;

 O'er the tired inmates of the Coach diffuse;
 And when thou'st charm'd our eyes to rest,
 Pillowing the chin upon the breast,
 Bid many a dream from thy dominions
 Wave its various-painted pinions, 20
 Till ere the splendid visions close
 We snore quartettes in ecstasy of nose.
 While thus we urge our airy course,

 Our fancies from their steeds unhorse, 25
 And call us from thy fairy reign
 To dreary Bagshot Heath again!

HENCE, soul-dissolving Harmony
 That lead'st th' oblivious soul astray—

And oft where Otter sports his stream,
 I hear thy banded offspring scream.

Thou Goddess! thou inspir'st each throat; 25

ON QUITTING SCHOOL FOR COLLEGE

FAREWELL parental scenes! a sad farewell!
 To you my grateful heart still fondly clings,
 Tho' fluttering round on Fancy's burnish'd wings
 Her tales of future Joy Hope loves to tell.
 Adieu, adieu! ye much-lov'd cloisters pale! 5
 Ah! would those happy days return again,
 When 'neath your arches, free from every stain,
 I heard of guilt and wonder'd at the tale!
 Dear haunts! where oft my simple lays I sang,
 Listening meanwhile the echoings of my feet, 10
 Lingering I quit you, with as great a pang,
 As when erewhile, my weeping childhood, torn
 By early sorrow from my native seat,
 Mingled its tears with hers—my widow'd Parent lorn.

ABSENCE<sup>2</sup>A FAREWELL ODE ON QUITTING SCHOOL FOR JESUS
COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE

WHERE graced with many a classic spoil
 CAM rolls his reverend stream along,
 I haste to urge the learned toil
 That sternly chides my love-lorn song:
 Ah me! too mindful of the days 5
 Illumed by Passion's orient rays,
 When Peace, and Cheerfulness and Health
 Enriched me with the best of wealth.
 Ah fair Delights! that o'er my soul
 On Memory's wing, like shadows fly! 10
 Ah Flowers! which Joy from Eden stole
 While Innocence stood smiling by!—
 But cease, fond Heart! this bootless moan:
 Those Hours on rapid Pinions flown
 Shall yet return, by Absence crown'd, 15
 And scatter livelier roses round.

HAPPINESS<sup>1</sup>

ON wide or narrow scale shall Man
 Most happily describe Life's plan?
 Say shall he bloom and wither there,
 Where first his infant buds appear;
 Or upwards dart with soaring force,
 And tempt some more ambitious course?

Obedient now to Hope's command
 I bid each humble wish expand,
 And fair and bright Life's prospects seem,
 While Hope displays her cheering beam,
 And Fancy's vivid colourings stream,
 While Emulation stands me nigh
 The Goddess of the eager eye.

10

With foot advanc'd and anxious heart
 Now for the fancied goal I start:—
 Ah! why will Reason intervene
 Me and my promis'd joys between!
 She stops my course, she chains my speed,
 While thus her forceful words proceed:—
 'Ah! listen, Youth, ere yet too late,
 What evils on thy course may wait!
 To bow the head, to bend the knee,
 A minion of Servility,
 At low Pride's frequent frowns to sigh,

 Behold yon flock which long had trod
 O'er the short grass of Devon's sod,
 To Lincoln's rank rich meads transferr'd,
 And in their fate thy own be fear'd;
 Through every limb contagions fly, 40
 Deform'd and choked they burst and die.
 'When Luxury opens wide her arms,
 And smiling wooes thee to those charms,
 Whose fascination thousands own,
 Shall thy brows wear the stoic frown? 45
 And when her goblet she extends
 Which maddening myriads press around,
 What power divine thy soul befriends
 That thou should'st dash it to the ground?—
 No, thou shalt drink, and thou shalt know 50
 Her transient bliss, her lasting woe,
 Her maniac joys, that know no measure,
 And Riot rude and painted Pleasure;—
 Till (sad reverse!) the Enchantress vile
 To frowns converts her magic smile; 55
 Her train impatient to destroy,
 Observe her frown with gloomy joy;
 On thee with harpy fangs they seize
 The hideous offspring of Disease,
 Swoln Dropsy ignorant of Rest, 60
 And Fever garb'd in scarlet vest,
 Consumption driving the quick hearse,
 And Gout that howls the frequent curse,
 With Apoplex of heavy head
 That surely aims his dart of lead. 65

 And what to thee the sweetest are—
 The setting sun, the Evening Star—
 The tints, which live along the sky,

 Where oft the tear shall grateful start,
 Dear silent pleasures of the Heart!
 Ah! Being blest, for Heaven shall lend

'One blessing more demands thy care:—
 Once more to Heaven address the prayer: 95
 For humble independence pray
 The guardian genius of thy way;
 Whom (sages say) in days of yore
 Meek Competence to Wisdom bore,
 So shall thy little vessel glide 100
 With a fair breeze adown the tide,
 And Hope, if e'er thou 'ginst to sorrow,
 Remind thee of some fair to-morrow,
 Till Death shall close thy tranquil eye
 While Faith proclaims "Thou shalt not die!" 105

WRITTEN IN JESUS WOOD, FEB. 10, 1792

Lo! through the dusky silence of the groves,
 Thro' vales irriguous, and thro' green retreats,
 With languid murmur creeps the placid stream
 And works its secret way.
 Awhile meand'ring round its native fields 5
 It rolls the playful wave and winds its flight:
 Then downward flowing with awaken'd speed
 Embosoms in the Deep!
 Thus thro' its silent tenor may my Life
 Smooth its meek stream by sordid wealth unclogg'd, 10
 Alike unconscious of forensic storms,
 And Glory's blood-stain'd palm!
 And when dark Age shall close Life's little day,
 Sate of sport, and weary of its toils,
 E'en thus may slumbrous Death my decent limbs 15
 Compose with icy hand!

AN ODE IN THE MANNER OF ANACREON<sup>2</sup>

TO DISAPPOINTMENT<sup>1</sup>

HENCE! thou fiend of gloomy sway,
 That lov'st on withering blast to ride
 O'er fond Illusion's air-built pride.
 Sullen Spirit! Hence! Away!

Where Avarice lurks in sordid cell,
 Or mad Ambition builds the dream,
 Or Pleasure plots th' unholy scheme
 There with Guilt and Folly dwell!

But oh! when Hope on Wisdom's wing
 Prophetic whispers pure delight,
 Be distant far thy cank'rous blight,
 Demon of envenom'd sting.

Then haste thee, Nymph of balmy gales!
 Thy poet's prayer, sweet May! attend!
 Oh! place my parent and my friend
 'Mid her lovely native vales.

Peace, that lists the woodlark's strains,
 Health, that breathes divinest treasures,
 Laughing Hours, and Social Pleasures
 Wait my friend in Cambria's plains.

Affection there with mingled ray
 Shall pour at once the raptures high
 Of filial and maternal Joy;

Haste thee then, delightful May!

And oh! may Spring's fair flowerets fade,
 May Summer cease her limbs to lave
 In cooling stream, may Autumn grave
 Yellow o'er the corn-cloath'd glade;

Ere, from sweet retirement torn,
 She seek again the crowded mart:
 Nor thou, my selfish, selfish heart
 Dare her slow return to mourn!

WHERE deep in mud Cam rolls his slumbrous stream,
 And bog and desolation reign supreme;
 Where all Boeotia clouds the misty brain,
 The owl Mathesis pipes her loathsome strain.
 Far, far aloof the frightened Muses fly, 5
 Indignant Genius scowls and passes by:
 The frolic Pleasures start amid their dance,
 And Wit congeal'd stands fix'd in wintry trance.
 But to the sounds with duteous haste repair
 Cold Industry, and wary-footed Care; 10
 And Dulness, dosing on a couch of lead,
 Pleas'd with the song uplifts her heavy head,
 The sympathetic numbers lists awhile,
 Then yawns propitiously a frosty smile. . . .

 To yon poor Pilgrim's wearying Woes
 Your gentle Comfort speak!
 He heard the midnight whirlwind die, 5
 He saw the sun-awaken'd Sky
 Resume its slowly-purpling Blue:
 And ah! he sigh'd—that I might find
 The cloudless Azure of the Mind
 And Fortune's brightning Hue! 10
 Where'er in waving Foliage hid
 The Bird's gay Charm ascends,
 Or by the fretful current chid
 Some giant Rock impends—
 There let the lonely Cares respire 15

WHO DESERTED HIM IN QUEST OF A MORE WEALTHY HUSBAND

THE dubious light sad glimmers o'er the sky :
 'Tis silence all. By lonely anguish torn,

 Shall the wide wat'ry world between us flow ?

WITH FIELDING'S 'AMELIA'<sup>1</sup>

VIRTUES and Woes alike too great for man
 In the soft tale oft claim the useless sigh;
 For vain the attempt to realise the plan,
 On Folly's wings must Imitation fly.
 With other aim has Fielding here display'd 5
 Each social duty and each social care;
 With just yet vivid colouring portray'd
 What every wife should be, what many are.
 And sure the Parent<sup>2</sup> of a race so sweet
 With double pleasure on the page shall dwell, 10
 Each scene with sympathizing breast shall meet,
 While Reason still with smiles delights to tell
 Maternal hope, that her loved progeny
 In all but sorrows shall Amelias be!

SONGS OF THE PIXIES<sup>1</sup>

THE Pixies, in the superstition of Devonshire, are a race of beings invisibly small, and harmless or friendly to man. At a small distance from a village in that county, half-way up a wood-covered hill, is an excavation called the Pixies' Parlour. The roots of old trees form its ceiling; and on its sides are innumerable cyphers, among which the author discovered his own cypher and those of his brothers, cut by the hand of their childhood. At the foot of the hill flows the river Otter.

To this place the Author, during the summer months of the year 1793, conducted a party of young ladies; one of whom, of stature elegantly small, and of complexion colourless yet clear, was proclaimed the Faery Queen. On which occasion the following Irregular Ode was written.

I

WHOM the untaught Shepherds call

Pixies in their madrigal,

Fancy's children, here we dwell:

Welcome, Ladies! to our cell.

Here the wren of softest note

Builds its nest and warbles well;

Here the blackbird strains his throat;

Welcome, Ladies! to our cell.

Songs of the Pixies] This preface appears in all editions. Previous to 1834 the second paragraph read:—To this place the Author conducted a party of young Ladies, during the Summer months of the year 1793, &c.

The Songs of the Pixies, an irregular Ode. The lower orders of the people in Devonshire have a superstition concerning the existence of 'Pixies', a race of beings supposed to be invisibly small, and harmless or friendly to man. At a small village in the county, half-way up a Hill, is a large excavation called the 'Pixies' Parlour. The roots of the trees growing above it form the ceiling—and on its sides are engraved innumerable cyphers, among which the author descried his own and those of his Brothers, cut by the rude hand of their childhood. At the foot of the Hill flows the River Otter. To this place the Author had the Honour of conducting a party of Young Ladies during the Summer months, on which occasion the following Poem was written. MS. E.

When fades the moon to shadowy-pale,
 And scuds the cloud before the gale, 10
 Ere the Morn all gem-bedight
 Hath streak'd the East with rosy light,
 We sip the furze-flower's fragrant dew
 Clad in robes of rainbow hues;
 Or sport amid the shooting gleams 15
 To the tune of distant-tinkling teams,
 While lusty Labour scouting sorrow
 Bids the Dame a glad good-morrow,
 Who jogs the accustom'd road along,
 And paces cheery to her cheering song. 20

Or through the mystic ringlets of the vale
 We flash our faery feet in gamesome prank ;
 Or, silent-sandal'd, pay our defter court,
 Circling the Spirit of the Western Gale,
 Where wearied with his flower-caressing sport, 65
 Supine he slumbers on a violet bank ;
 Then with quaint music hymn the parting gleam
 By lonely Otter's sleep-persuading stream ;
 Or where his wave with loud unquiet song
 Dash'd o'er the rocky channel froths along ; 70
 Or where, his silver waters smooth'd to rest,
 The tall tree's shadow sleeps upon his breast.

Hence thou lingerer, Light !
 Eve saddens into Night.
 Mother of wildly-working dreams ! we view 75
 The sombre hours, that round thee stand
 With down-cast eyes (a duteous band !)
 Their dark robes dripping with the heavy dew.
 Sorceress of the ebon throne !

Welcome, Ladies! to the cell
 Where the blameless Pixies dwell: 90
 But thou, Sweet Nymph! proclaim'd our Faery Queen,
 With what obeisance meet
 Thy presence shall we greet?
 For lo! attendant on thy steps are seen
 Graceful Ease in artless stole, 95
 And white-robed Purity of soul,
 With Honour's softer mien;
 Mirth of the loosely-flowing hair,
 And meek-eyed Pity eloquently fair,
 Whose tearful cheeks are lovely to the view, 100

THE ROSE<sup>1</sup>

As late each flower that sweetest blows
I pluck'd, the Garden's pride!
Within the petals of a Rose
A sleeping Love I spied.

Around his brows a beamy wreath 5
Of many a lucent hue;
All purple glow'd his cheek, beneath,
Inebriate with dew.

I softly seiz'd the unguarded Power,
Nor scared his balmy rest: 10
And placed him, caged within the flower,
On spotless Sara's breast.

But when unweeting of the guile
Awoke the prisoner sweet,
He struggled to escape awhile 15
And stamp'd his faery feet.

Ah! soon the soul-entrancing sight
Subdued the impatient boy!
He gazed! he thrill'd with deep delight!
Then clapp'd his wings for joy. 20

SONNET<sup>2</sup>

TO THE RIVER OTTER

DEAR native Brook! wild Streamlet of the West!

How many various-fated years have past,

What happy and what mournful hours, since last
I skimm'd the smooth thin stone along thy breast,
Numbering its light leaps! yet so deep imprest 5
Sink the sweet scenes of childhood, that mine eyes

I never shut amid the sunny ray,

But straight with all their tints thy waters rise,

Thy crossing plank, thy marge with willows grey,

And bedded sand that vein'd with various dyes 10
Gleam'd through thy bright transparence! On my way,

Visions of Childhood! oft have ye beguil'd

Lone manhood's cares, yet waking fondest sighs:

Ah! that once more I were a careless Child!

FIRST DRAFT

AN EFFUSION AT EVENING

WRITTEN IN AUGUST, 1792

IMAGINATION, Mistress of my Love!
 Where shall mine Eye thy elfin haunt explore?
 Dost thou on yon rich Cloud thy pinions bright
 Embathe in amber-glowing Floods of Light?
 Or, wild of speed, pursue the track of Day 5
 In other worlds to hail the morning Ray?
 'Tis time to bid the faded shadowy Pleasures move
 On shadowy Memory's wings across the Soul of Love;
 And thine o'er Winter's icy plains to fling
 Each flower, that binds the breathing Locks of Spring, 10
 When blushing, like a bride, from primrose Bower
 She starts, awaken'd by the pattering Shower!

Now sheds the setting Sun a purple gleam,
 Aid, lovely Sorc'ress! aid the Poet's dream.
 With faery wand O bid my Love arise, 15
 The dewy brilliance dancing in her Eyes;
 As erst she woke with soul-entrancing Mien
 The thrill of Joy extatic yet serene,
 When link'd with Peace I bounded o'er the Plain
 And Hope itself was all I knew of Pain! 20

Propitious Fancy hears the votive sigh—
 The absent Maiden flashes on mine Eye!
 When first the matin Bird with startling Song
 Salutes the Sun his veiling Clouds among,
 I trace her footsteps on the {<sup>accustom'd</sup> steaming Lawn, 25
 I view her glancing in the gleams of Dawn!
 When the bent Flower beneath the night-dew weeps
 And on the Lake the silver Lustre sleeps,
 Amid the paly Radiance soft and sad
 She meets my lonely path in moonbeams clad. 30
 With her along the streamlet's brink I rove;
 With her I list the warblings of the Grove;
 And seems in each low wind her voice to float,
 Lone-whispering Pity in each soothing Note!

As oft in climes beyond the western Main 35
 Where boundless spreads the wildly-silent Plain,
 The savage Hunter, who his drowsy frame
 Had bask'd beneath the Sun's unclouded Flame,
 Awakes amid the tempest-troubled air,
 The Thunder's Peal and Lightning's lurid glare— 40
 Aghast he hears the rushing Whirlwind's Sweep,
 And sad recalls the sunny hour of Sleep!
 So lost by storms along Life's wild'ring Way
 Mine Eye reverted views that cloudless Day,
 When,—! on thy banks I joy'd to rove 45
 While Hope with kisses nurs'd the infant Love!

Sweet —! where Pleasure's streamlet glides
 Fann'd by soft winds to curl in mimic tides;
 Where Mirth and Peace beguile the blameless Day;
 And where Friendship's fixt star beams a mellow'd Ray; 50
 Where Love a crown of thornless Roses wears;
 Where soften'd Sorrow smiles within her tears;
 And Memory, with a Vestal's meek employ,
 Unceasing feeds the lambent flame of Joy!
 No more thy Sky Larks less'ning from my sight 55
 Shall thrill th' attuned Heartstring with delight;
 No more shall deck thy pensive Pleasures sweet
 With wreaths of sober hue my evening seat!
 Yet dear to [My] Fancy's Eye thy varied scene
 Of Wood, Hill, Dale and sparkling Brook between: 60
 Yet sweet to [My] Fancy's Ear the warbled song,
 That soars on Morning's wing thy fields among!

Scenes of my Hope! the aching Eye ye leave,
 Like those rich Hues that paint the clouds of Eve!
 Tearful and saddening with the sadden'd Blaze 65
 Mine Eye the gleam pursues with wistful Gaze—
 Sees Shades on Shades with deeper tint impend,
 Till chill and damp the moonless Night descend!

LINES<sup>1</sup>

ON AN AUTUMNAL EVENING

O THOU wild Fancy, check thy wing! No more
 Those thin white flakes, those purple clouds explore!
 Nor there with happy spirits speed thy flight
 Bath'd in rich amber-glowing floods of light;
 Nor in yon gleam, where slow descends the day, 5
 With western peasants hail the morning ray!
 Ah! rather bid the perish'd pleasures move,
 A shadowy train, across the soul of Love!
 O'er Disappointment's wintry desert fling
 Each flower that wreath'd the dewy locks of Spring, 10
 When blushing, like a bride, from Hope's trim bower
 She leapt, awaken'd by the pattering shower.

Now sheds the sinking Sun a deeper gleam,
 Aid, lovely Sorceress! aid thy Poet's dream!
 With faery wand O bid the Maid arise, 15
 Chaste Joyance dancing in her bright-blue eyes;
 As erst when from the Muses' calm abode
 I came, with Learning's meed not unbestowed;
 When as she twin'd a laurel round my brow,
 And met my kiss, and half return'd my vow, 20
 O'er all my frame shot rapid my thrill'd heart,
 And every nerve confess'd the electric dart.

O dear Deceit! I see the Maiden rise,
 Chaste Joyance dancing in her bright-blue eyes!
 When first the lark high-soaring swells his throat, 25
 Mocks the tir'd eye, and scatters the loud note,
 I trace her footsteps on the accustom'd lawn,
 I mark her glancing mid the gleam of dawn.

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1796: included in 1797, 1803, 1828, 1829 and 1834. In Social Life at the English Universities, by Christopher Wordsworth, M.A., 1874, it is recorded that this poem was read by Coleridge to a party of college friends on November 7, 1793.

Title] Effusion xxxvi. Written in Early Youth, The Time, An Autumnal Evening 1796: Written in etc. 1803: An Effusion on an Autumnal Evening. Written in Early Youth 1797 (Supplement).

A first draft, headed 'An Effusion at Evening, Written in August, 1792' is included in the MS. volume presented to Mrs. Estlin in April, 1795 (vide ante, pp. 49, 50).

28 gleam] gleams 1796, 1797, 1803, 1893.

When the bent flower beneath the night-dew weeps
 And on the lake the silver lustre sleeps, 30
 Amid the paly radiance soft and sad,
 She meets my lonely path in moon-beams clad.
 With her along the streamlet's brink I rove;
 With her I list the warblings of the grove;
 And seems in each low wind her voice to float 35
 Lone-whispering Pity in each soothing note!

Spirits of Love! ye heard her name! Obey
 The powerful spell, and to my haunt repair.
 Whether on clust'ring pinions ye are there,
 Where rich snows blossom on the Myrtle-trees, 40
 Or with fond languishment around my fair
 Sigh in the loose luxuriance of her hair;
 O heed the spell, and hither wing your way,
 Like far-off music, voyaging the breeze!

Spirits! to you the infant Maid was given 45
 Form'd by the wond'rous Alchemy of Heaven!
 No fairer Maid does Love's wide empire know,
 No fairer Maid e'er heav'd the bosom's snow.
 A thousand Loves around her forehead fly;
 A thousand Loves sit melting in her eye; 50
 Love lights her smile—in Joy's red nectar dips
 His myrtle flower, and plants it on her lips.
 She speaks! and hark that passion-warbled song—
 Still, Fancy! still that voice, those notes prolong.
 As sweet as when that voice with rapturous falls
 Shall wake the soften'd echoes of Heaven's Halls!

 Or mine the power of Proteus, changeful God!

<sup>1</sup> Note to line 57. Poems, 1796, pp. 183-5:—I entreat the Public's pardon for having carelessly suffered to be printed such intolerable stuff as this and the thirteen following lines. They have not the merit even of originality: as every thought is to be found in the Greek Epigrams. The lines in this poem from the 27th to the 36th, I have been told are in Joy's bright nectar dips

 The flamy rose, and plants it on her lips!
 Tender, serene, and all devoid of guile,
 Soft is her soul, as sleeping infants' smile
 She speaks, &c. 1796, 1803.

54 still those mazy notes 1796, 1803.

55-6

Sweet as th' angelic harps, whose rapturous falls
 Awake the soften'd echoes of Heaven's Halls. 1796, 1803.

A flower-entangled Arbour I would seem
 To shield my Love from Noontide's sultry beam: 60
 Or bloom a Myrtle, from whose od'rous boughs
 My Love might weave gay garlands for her brows.
 When Twilight stole across the fading vale,
 To fan my Love I'd be the Evening Gale;
 Mourn in the soft folds of her swelling vest, 65
 And flutter my faint pinions on her breast!
 On Seraph wing I'd float a Dream by night,
 To soothe my Love with shadows of delight:—
 Or soar aloft to be the Spangled Skies,
 And gaze upon her with a thousand eyes! 70

As when the Savage, who his drowsy frame
 Had bask'd beneath the Sun's unclouded flame,
 Awakes amid the troubles of the air,
 The skiey deluge, and white lightning's glare—
 Aghast he scours before the tempest's sweep, 75
 And sad recalls the sunny hour of sleep:—
 So tossed by storms along Life's wild'ring way,
 Mine eye reverted views that cloudless day,

a palpable imitation of the passage from the 355th to the 370th line of the Pleasures of Memory Part 3. I do not perceive so striking a similarity between the two passages; at all events I had written the Effusion several years before I had seen M<sup>r</sup> Rogers' Poem.—It may be proper to remark that the tale of Florio in the 'Pleasures of Memory' is to be found in Lochleven, a poem of great merit by Michael Bruce.—In M<sup>r</sup> Rogers' Poem* the names are Florio and Julia; in the Lochleven Lomond and Levina—and this is all the difference. We seize the opportunity of transcribing from the Lochleven of Bruce the following exquisite passage, expressing the effects of a fine day on the human heart.

Fat on the plain, and mountain's sunny side
 Large droves of oxen and the fleecy flocks
 Feed undisturb'd; and fill the echoing air
 With Music grateful to their [the] Master's ear.
 The Traveller stops and gazes round and round
 O'er all the plains [scenes] that animate his heart
 With mirth and music. Even the mendicant
 Bow-bent with age, that on the old gray stone
 Sole-sitting suns him in the public way,
 Feels his heart leap, and to himself he sings.

When by my native brook I wont to rove,
While Hope with kisses nurs'd the Infant Love. 80

Dear native brook! like Peace, so placidly
Smoothing through fertile fields thy current meek!
Dear native brook! where first young Poesy
Stared wildly-eager in her noontide dream!
Where blameless pleasures dimple Quiet's cheek, 85
As water-lilies ripple thy slow stream!

Dear native haunts! where Virtue still is gay,
Where Friendship's fix'd star sheds a mellow'd ray,
Where Love a crown of thornless Roses wears,
Where soften'd Sorrow smiles within her tears; 90
And Memory, with a Vestal's chaste employ,
Unceasing feeds the lambent flame of joy!

No more your sky-larks melting from the sight
Shall thrill the attuned heart-string with delight—
No more shall deck your pensive Pleasures sweet 95
With wreaths of sober hue my evening seat.

Yet dear to Fancy's eye your varied scene
Of wood, hill, dale, and sparkling brook between!
Yet sweet to Fancy's ear the warbled song,
That soars on Morning's wing your vales among. 100

Scenes of my Hope! the aching eye ye leave
Like yon bright hues that paint the clouds of eve!
Tearful and saddening with the sadden'd blaze
Mine eye the gleam pursues with wistful gaze:
Sees shades on shades with deeper tint impend, 105

TO FORTUNE

On buying a Ticket in the Irish Lottery

Composed during a walk to and from the Queen's Head, Gray's Inn Lane, Holborn, and Hornsby's and Co., Cornhill.

PROMPTRESS of unnumber'd sighs,
O snatch that circling bandage from thine eyes!
O look, and smile! No common prayer
Solicits, Fortune! thy propitious care!
For, not a silken son of dress, 5
I clink the gilded chains of politesse,
Nor ask thy boon what time I scheme
Unholy Pleasure's frail and feverish dream;
Nor yet my view life's dazzle blinds—
Pomp!—Grandeur! Power!—I give you to the winds! 10
Let the little bosom cold
Melt only at the sunbeam ray of gold—
My pale cheeks glow—the big drops start—
The rebel Feeling riots at my heart!
And if in lonely durance pent, 15
Thy poor mite mourn a brief imprisonment—
That mite at Sorrow's faintest sound
Leaps from its scrip with an elastic bound!
But oh! if ever song thine ear
Might soothe, O haste with fost'ring hand to rear 20
One Flower of Hope! At Love's behest,
Trembling, I plac'd it in my secret breast:
And thrice I've view'd the vernal gleam,
Since oft mine eye, with Joy's electric beam,
Illum'd it—and its sadder hue 25
Oft moisten'd with the Tear's ambrosial dew!
Poor wither'd floweret! on its head
Has dark Despair his sickly mildew shed!
But thou, O Fortune! canst relume
Its deaden'd tints—and thou with hardier bloom 30
May'st haply tinge its beauties pale,
And yield the unsunn'd stranger to the western gale!

PERSPIRATION. A TRAVELLING ECLOGUE<sup>1</sup>

THE dust flies smothering, as on clatt'ring wheel
 Loath'd Aristocracy careers along;
 The distant track quick vibrates to the eye,
 And white and dazzling undulates with heat,
 Where scorching to the unwary traveller's touch, 5
 The stone fence flings its narrow slip of shade;
 Or, where the worn sides of the chalky road
 Yield their scant excavations (sultry grots!),
 Emblem of languid patience, we behold
 The fleecy files faint-ruminating lie. 10

[AVE, ATQUE VALE!]<sup>2</sup>

VIVIT sed mihi non vivit—nova forte marita,
 Ah dolor! alterius carâ a cervice pependit.
 Vos, malefida valete accensae insomnia mentis,
 Littora amata valete! Vale, ah! formosa Maria!
 1794.

ON BALA HILL<sup>3</sup>

WITH many a weary step at length I gain
 Thy summit, Bala! and the cool breeze plays
 Cheerily round my brow—as hence the gaze
 Returns to dwell upon the journey'd plain.
 'Twas a long way and tedious!—to the eye 5
 Tho' fair th' extended Vale, and fair to view
 The falling leaves of many a faded hue
 That eddy in the wild gust moaning by!
 Ev'n so it far'd with Life! in discontent
 Restless thro' Fortune's mingled scenes I went, 10

<sup>3</sup> First published (as Coleridge's) in 1893, from an unsigned autograph MS. found among the Evans Papers. The lines are all but identical with Southey's Sonnet to Lansdown Hill (Sonnet viii), dated 1794, and first published in 1797, and were, probably, his composition. See Athenaeum, January 11, 1896.

LINES<sup>1</sup>

WRITTEN AT THE KING'S ARMS, ROSS, FORMERLY THE HOUSE OF THE 'MAN OF ROSS'

RICHER than Miser o'er his countless hoards,
 Nobler than Kings, or king-polluted Lords,
 Here dwelt the MAN OF ROSS! O Traveller, hear!
 Departed Merit claims a reverent tear.
 Friend to the friendless, to the sick man health, 5
 With generous joy he view'd his modest wealth;
 He heard the widow's heaven-breath'd prayer of praise,
 He mark'd the shelter'd orphan's tearful gaze,
 Or where the sorrow-shrivell'd captive lay,
 Pour'd the bright blaze of Freedom's noon-tide ray. 10

In a letter to Southey dated July 13, 1794, Coleridge writes:—'At Ross . . . we took up our quarters at the King's Arms, once the house of Kyrle, the Man of Ross. I gave the window-shutter the following effusion—"Richer than Misers" etc.' J. Hucks, in his Tour, 1795, p. 15, writes to the same effect. There are but slight variations in the text as printed in the Cambridge Intelligencer and in Hucks' Tour. In 1796 lines 5-10 of the text, which were included in A Monody on the Death of Chatterton (1796), are omitted, and the poem numbered only fourteen lines. In 1797 lines 5-10 were restored to the Man of Ross and omitted from the Monody. The poem numbered twenty lines. In 1803 lines 5-10 were again omitted from the Man of Ross, but not included in the Monody. The poem numbered fourteen lines. The text of 1828, 1829 is almost identical with that of 1834.

Four MS. versions are extant, (1) the Letter to Southey, July 13, 1794: (2) the Estlin Copy-book: (3) the Morrison MSS.: (4) the MS. 4° Copy-book.

 Fill to the good man's name one grateful glass:

 And Virtue mingle in the ennobled bowl.
 But if, like me, through Life's distressful scene
 Lonely and sad thy pilgrimage hath been;
 And if thy breast with heart-sick anguish fraught,
 Thou journeyest onward tempest-tossed in thought;
 Here cheat thy cares! in generous visions melt,
 And dream of Goodness, thou hast never felt!

IMITATED FROM THE WELSH<sup>1</sup>

If while my passion I impart,
 You deem my words untrue,
 O place your hand upon my heart—
 Feel how it throbs for you!

Ah no! reject the thoughtless claim
 In pity to your Lover!
 That thrilling touch would aid the flame
 It wishes to discover.

TO A BEAUTIFUL SPRING IN A VILLAGE

ONCE more! sweet Stream! with slow foot wandering near,
 I bless thy milky waters cold and clear.
 Escap'd the flashing of the noontide hours,
 With one fresh garland of Pierian flowers
 (Ere from thy zephyr-haunted brink I turn)
 My languid hand shall wreath thy mossy urn.
 For not through pathless grove with murmur rude
 Thou soothest the sad wood-nymph, Solitude;
 Nor thine unseen in cavern depths to well,
 The Hermit-fountain of some dripping cell!

Pride of the Vale! thy useful streams supply
 The scatter'd cots and peaceful hamlet nigh.
 The elfin tribe around thy friendly banks
 With infant uproar and soul-soothing pranks,
 Releas'd from school, their little hearts at rest, 15
 Launch paper navies on thy waveless breast.
 The rustic here at eve with pensive look
 Whistling lorn ditties leans upon his crook,
 Or, starting, pauses with hope-mingled dread
 To list the much-lov'd maid's accustom'd tread: 20
 She, vainly mindful of her dame's command,
 Loiters, the long-fill'd pitcher in her hand.

Unboastful Stream! thy fount with pebbled falls
 The faded form of past delight recalls,
 What time the morning sun of Hope arose, 25
 And all was joy; save when another's woes
 A transient gloom upon my soul imprest,
 Like passing clouds impictur'd on thy breast.
 Life's current then ran sparkling to the noon,
 Or silvery stole beneath the pensive Moon: 30
 Ah! now it works rude brakes and thorns among,
 Or o'er the rough rock bursts and foams along!

<sup>1</sup> If we except Lucretius and Statius, I know not of any Latin poet, ancient or modern, who has equalled Casimir in boldness of conception, opulence of fancy, or beauty of versification. The Odes of this illustrious Jesuit were translated into English about 150 years ago, by a Thomas Hill, I think. [—by G. H. [G. Hills.] London, 1646. 12mo. Ed. L. R. 1836.] I never saw the translation. A few of the Odes have been translated in a very animated manner by Watts. I have subjoined the third ode of the second book, which, with the exception of the first line, is an effusion of exquisite elegance. In the imitation attempted, I am sensible that I have destroyed the effect of suddenness, by translating into two stanzas what is one in the original.

Each cold restraint, each boding fear
 Of age and all her saws severe.

 Will set,—but 'tis to rise again;—
 But we, when once our mortal light
 Is set, must sleep in endless night.
 Then come, with whom alone I'll live,
 A thousand kisses take and give! 10
 Another thousand!—to the store
 Add hundreds—then a thousand more!
 And when they to a million mount,
 Let confusion take the account,—
 That you, the number never knowing, 15
 May continue still bestowing—
 That I for joys may never pine,
 Which never can again be mine!

I die in faith and honour rich—
 But ah! I leave behind my treasure
 In widowhood and lonely pain;—
 To live were surely then a pleasure!
 My lifeless eyes upon thy face
 Shall never open more to-morrow;
 To-morrow shall thy beauteous eyes
 Be closed to Love, and drown'd in Sorrow;
 To-morrow Death shall freeze this hand,
 And on thy breast, my wedded treasure,
 I never, never more shall live;—
 Alas! I quit a life of pleasure.

MORIENTI SUPERSTES

Yet art thou happier far than she
 Who feels the widow's love for thee!
 For while her days are days of weeping,
 Thou, in peace, in silence sleeping,
 In some still world, unknown, remote,
 The mighty parent's care hast found,
 Without whose tender guardian thought
 No sparrow falleth to the ground.

THE SIGH<sup>1</sup>

When Youth his faery reign began
 Ere Sorrow had proclaim'd me man;
 While Peace the present hour beguil'd,
 And all the lovely Prospect smil'd;
 Then Mary! 'mid my lightsome glee
 I heav'd the painless Sigh for thee.

And when, along the waves of woe,
 My harass'd Heart was doom'd to know
 The frantic burst of Outrage keen,
 And the slow Pang that gnaws unseen;

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1796: included in 1797, 1803, 1823, 1829. Coleridge dated the poem, June 1794, but the verses as sent to Southey, in a letter dated November, 1794 (Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 100, 101), could not have taken shape before the August of that year, after the inception of Pantisocracy and his engagement to Sarah Fricker.

Then shipwreck'd on Life's stormy sea
I heaved an anguish'd Sigh for thee!

But soon Reflection's power imprest
A stiller sadness on my breast;
And sickly Hope with waning eye
Was well content to droop and die: 15
I yielded to the stern decree,
Yet heav'd a languid Sigh for thee!

And though in distant climes to roam,
A wanderer from my native home, 20
I fain would soothe the sense of Care,
And lull to sleep the Joys that were!
Thy Image may not banish'd be—
Still, Mary! still I sigh for thee.

Your scorn the little boon denied.
Ah why refuse the blameless bliss?
Can danger lurk within a kiss?

The Spirit of the Western Gale,
At Morning's break, at Evening's close

 Scatters on the Rose's hue.
 Bashful lo! she bends her head,
 And darts a blush of deeper Red! 15

Too well those lovely lips disclose
 The triumphs of the opening Rose;
 O fair! O graceful! bid them prove
 As passive to the breath of Love. 20

In tender accents, faint and low,
 Well-pleas'd I hear the whisper'd 'No!'
 The whispered 'No'—how little meant!
 Sweet Falsehood that endears Consent!
 For on those lovely lips the while 25

Dawns the soft relenting smile,
 And tempts with feign'd dissuasion coy
 The gentle violence of Joy.

WITH A POEM ON THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

MUCH on my early youth I love to dwell,
 Ere yet I bade that friendly dome farewell,
 Where first, beneath the echoing cloisters pale,
 I heard of guilt and wonder'd at the tale!
 Yet though the hours flew by on careless wing, 5
 Full heavily of Sorrow would I sing.
 Aye as the Star of Evening flung its beam
 In broken radiance on the wavy stream,
 My soul amid the pensive twilight gloom

Thus to sad sympathies I sooth'd my breast, 15
 Calm, as the rainbow in the weeping West:
 When slumbering Freedom roused by high Disdain
 With giant Fury burst her triple chain!
 Fierce on her front the blasting Dog-star glow'd;

 And strode in joy the reeking plains of France!

 Tones more congenial to the sadden'd heart: 10

Thou pourest lone Monimia's tale of woe;
 Or haply clothest with funereal vest
 The bridal loves that wept in Juliet's breast.
 O'er our chill limbs the thrilling Terrors creep, 15
 Th' entrancéd Passions their still vigil keep;
 While the deep sighs, responsive to the song,
 Sound through the silence of the trembling throng.

But purer raptures lighten'd from thy face,
 And spread o'er all thy form an holier grace, 20
 When from the daughter's breasts the father drew
 The life he gave, and mix'd the big tear's dew.
 Nor was it thine th' heroic strain to roll
 With mimic feelings foreign from the soul:
 Bright in thy parent's eye we mark'd the tear; 25
 Methought he said, 'Thou art no Actress here!
 A semblance of thyself the Grecian dame,
 And Brunton and Euphrasia still the same!'

O soon to seek the city's busier scene,
 Pause thee awhile, thou chaste-eyed maid serene, 30
 Till Granta's sons from all her sacred bowers
 With grateful hand shall weave Pierian flowers
 To twine a fragrant chaplet round thy brow,
 Enchanting mistress of virtuous woe!

TO MISS BRUNTON<sup>1</sup>

WITH THE PRECEDING TRANSLATION

THAT darling of the Tragic Muse,
 When Wrangham sung her praise,
 Thalia lost her rosy hues,
 And sicken'd at her lays:
 But transient was th' unwonted sigh; 5
 For soon the Goddess spied
 A sister-form of mirthful eye,
 And danc'd for joy and cried:
 'Meek Pity's sweetest child, proud dame,
 The fates have given to you! 10
 Still bid your Poet boast her name;
 I have my Brunton too.'

EPITAPH ON AN INFANT<sup>1</sup>

ERE Sin could blight or Sorrow fade,
 Death came with friendly care:
 The opening Bud to Heaven convey'd,
 And bade it blossom there.

PANTISOCRACY<sup>2</sup>

No more my visionary soul shall dwell
 On joys that were; no more endure to weigh
 The shame and anguish of the evil day,
 Wisely forgetful! O'er the ocean swell

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Chronicle, September 23, 1794: included in The Watchman, No. IX, May 5, 1796, Poems 1796, 1797, 1803, 1828, 1829, and 1834. These well-known lines, which vexed the soul of Charles Lamb, were probably adapted from 'An Epitaph on an Infant' in the churchyard of Birchington, Kent (A Collection of Epitaphs, 1806, i. 219):—

Ah! why so soon, just as the bloom appears,
 Drops the fair blossom in the vale of tears?
 Death view'd the treasure in the desert given
 And claim'd the right of planting it in Heav'n.

In MS. E a Greek version (possibly a rejected prize epigram) is prefixed with the accompanying footnote.

Ηλυθες εἰς αἰδην, καὶ δὴ τυ ποθεῦσι τοκης*
 Ηλυθες αὖν βρεφος! τοι βραχὺ δυνε φας.
 Ὁμμα μὲν εἰς σεο σῆμα Πατηρ πικρον ποτιβαλλει
 Εὐσεβειας δε Θεῷ δῶρα διδωσιν ἕα!*

* Translation of the Greek Epitaph. 'Thou art gone down into the Grave, and heavily do thy Parents feel the Loss. Thou art gone down into the Grave, sweet Baby! Thy short Light is set! Thy Father casts an Eye of Anguish towards thy Tomb—yet with uncomplaining Piety resigns to God his own Gift!'

Equal or Greater simplicity marks all the writings of the Greek Poets.—The above [i.e. the Greek] Epitaph was written in Imitation of them. [S. T. C.]

<sup>2</sup> First published in the Life and Correspondence of R. Southey, 1849, i. 224. First collected 1852 (Notes). Southey includes the sonnet in a letter to his brother Thomas dated Oct. 19, 1794, and attributes the authorship to Coleridge's friend S. Favell, with whom he had been in correspondence. He had already received the sonnet in a letter from Coleridge (dated Sept. 18, 1794), who claims it for his own and apologizes for the badness of the poetry. The octave was included (ll. 129-36) in the second version of the Monody on the Death of Chatterton, first printed in Lancelot Sharpe's edition of the Poems of Chatterton published at Cambridge in 1794. Mrs. H. N. Coleridge (Poems, 1852, p. 382) prints the sonnet and apologizes for the alleged plagiarism. It is difficult to believe that either the first eight or last six lines of the sonnet were not written by Coleridge. It is included in the MS. volume of Poems which Coleridge presented to Mrs. Estlin in 1795. The text is that of Letter Sept. 18, 1794.

Sublime of Hope, I seek the cottag'd dell 5

 The wizard Passions weave an holy spell.
 Eyes that have ach'd with Sorrow! Ye shall weep
 Tears of doubt-mingled joy, like theirs who start 10
 From Precipices of distemper'd sleep,
 On which the fierce-eyed Fiends their revels keep,
 And see the rising Sun, and feel it dart
 New rays of pleasance trembling to the heart.

ON THE PROSPECT OF ESTABLISHING A PANTISOCRACY IN AMERICA <sup>1</sup>

Whilst pale Anxiety, corrosive Care,
 The tear of Woe, the gloom of sad Despair,
 And deepen'd Anguish generous bosoms rend;—
 Whilst patriot souls their country's fate lament;
 Whilst mad with rage demoniac, foul intent, 5
 Embattled legions Despots vainly send
 To arrest the immortal mind's expanding ray
 Of everlasting Truth;—I other climes
 Where dawns, with hope serene, a brighter day
 Than e'er saw Albion in her happiest times, 10
 With mental eye exulting now explore,
 And soon with kindred minds shall haste to enjoy
 (Free from the ills which here our peace destroy)
 Content and Bliss on Transatlantic shore.

Where 'sleeps the moonlight' on yon verdant bed—
O humbly press that consecrated ground!

For there does Edmund rest, the learned swain! 5
And there his spirit most delights to rove:
Young Edmund! fam'd for each harmonious strain,
And the sore wounds of ill-requited Love.

Like some tall tree that spreads its branches wide,
And loads the West-wind with its soft perfume, 10
His manhood blossom'd; till the faithless pride
Of fair Matilda sank him to the tomb.

But soon did righteous Heaven her Guilt pursue!
Where'er with wilder'd step she wander'd pale,
Still Edmund's image rose to blast her view, 15
Still Edmund's voice accus'd her in each gale.

With keen regret, and conscious Guilt's alarms,
Amid the pomp of Affluence she pined;
Nor all that lur'd her faith from Edmund's arms
Could lull the wakeful horror of her mind. 20

Go, Traveller! tell the tale with sorrow fraught:
Some tearful Maid perchance, or blooming Youth,
May hold it in remembrance; and be taught
That Riches cannot pay for Love or Truth.

Ah! melancholy emblem! had I seen 5

THE OUTCAST<sup>1</sup>

PALE Roamer through the night! thou poor Forlorn!
 Remorse that man on his death-bed possess,
 Who in the credulous hour of tenderness
 Betrayed, then cast thee forth to Want and Scorn!
 The world is pitiless: the chaste one's pride 5
 Mimic of Virtue scowls on thy distress:
 Thy Loves and they that envied thee deride:
 And Vice alone will shelter Wretchedness!
 O! I could weep to think that there should be Cold-bosom'd lewd ones, who endure to place 10
 Foul offerings on the shrine of Misery,
 And force from Famine the caress of Love;
 May He shed healing on the sore disgrace,
 He, the great Comforter that rules above!

ON A DISCOVERY MADE TOO LATE<sup>1</sup>

THOU bleedest, my poor Heart! and thy distress
 Reasoning I ponder with a scornful smile
 And probe thy sore wound sternly, though the while Swoln be mine eye and dim with heaviness.
 Why didst thou listen to Hope's whisper bland?
 Or, listening, why forget the healing tale,
 When Jealousy with feverous fancies pale
 Jarr'd thy fine fibres with a maniac's hand?
 Faint was that Hope, and rayless!—Yet 'twas fair
 And sooth'd with many a dream the hour of rest:
 Thou should'st have lov'd it most, when most opprest,
 And nurs'd it with an agony of care,
 Even as a mother her sweet infant heir
 That wan and sickly droops upon her breast!

whom I had supped, I carelessly took away with me "The Robbers", a drama, the very name of which I had never before heard of:—A Winter midnight—the wind high—and "The Robbers" for the first time!—The readers of Schiller will conceive what I felt. Schiller introduces no supernatural beings; yet his human beings agitate and astonish more than all the goblin rout—even of Shakespeare.' See for another account of the midnight reading of 'The Robbers', Letter to Southey, November [6], 1794, Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 96, 97.

In the Selection of Sonnets, 1796, this note was reduced to one sentence. 'Schiller introduces no Supernatural Beings.' In 1803 the note is omitted, but a footnote to line 4 is appended: 'The Father of Moor in the Play of the Robbers.'

EDMUND! thy grave with aching eye I scan,
 And inly groan for Heaven's poor outcast—Man!
 'Tis tempest all or gloom: in early youth
 If gifted with th' Ithuriel lance of Truth
 We force to start amid her feign'd caress
 Vice, siren-hag! in native ugliness;
 A Brother's fate will haply rouse the tear,
 And on we go in heaviness and fear!
 But if our fond hearts call to Pleasure's bower
 Some pigmy Folly in a careless hour,
 The faithless guest shall stamp the enchanted ground,
 And mingled forms of Misery rise around:
 Heart-fretting Fear, with pallid look aghast,
 That courts the future woe to hide the past;
 Remorse, the poison'd arrow in his side,
 And loud lewd Mirth, to Anguish close allied:

TO A FRIEND<sup>1</sup>

[CHARLES LAMB]

TOGETHER WITH AN UNFINISHED POEM

Thus far my scanty brain hath built the rhyme
Elaborate and swelling: yet the heart
Not owns it. From thy spirit-breathing powers
I ask not now, my friend! the aiding verse,
Tedious to thee, and from thy anxious thought
Of dissonant mood. In fancy (well I know)
From business wandering far and local cares,
Thou creepest round a dear-lov'd Sister's bed
With noiseless step, and watchest the faint look,
Soothing each pang with fond solicitude,
And tenderest tones medicinal of love.
I too a Sister had, an only Sister—
She lov'd me dearly, and I doted on her!
To her I pour'd forth all my puny sorrows
(As a sick Patient in a Nurse's arms)
And of the heart those hidden maladies
That e'en from Friendship's eye will shrink asham'd.

As late I lay in Slumber's shadowy vale,
 With wetted cheek and in a mourner's guise,
 I saw the sainted form of FREEDOM rise:
 She spake! not sadder moans the autumnal gale—

 And JUSTICE wakes to bid th' Oppressor wail 10

 And from her dark retreat by Wisdom won pense his service deserved. Mr. Burke wanting a present supply of money, it was thought that a pension of £2000 per annum for forty years certain, would sell for eighteen years' purchase, and bring him of course £36,000. But this pension must, by the very unfortunate act, of which Mr. Burke was himself the author, have come before Parliament. Instead of this Mr. Pitt suggested the idea of a pension of £2000 a year for three lives, to be charged on the King's Revenue of the West India 4½ per cents. This was tried at the market, but it was found that it would not produce the £36,000 which were wanted. In consequence of this a pension of £2500 per annum, for three lives on the 4½ West India Fund, the lives to be nominated by Mr. Burke, that he may accommodate the purchasers is finally granted to this disinterested patriot. He has thus retir'd from the trade of politics, with pensions to the amount of £3700 a year.' 1796, Note, pp. 177-9.

LA FAYETTE

As when far off the warbled strains are heard
That soar on Morning's wing the vales among;
Within his cage the imprison'd Matin Bird
Swells the full chorus with a generous song:

He bathes no pinion in the dewy light,
No Father's joy, no Lover's bliss he shares,
Yet still the rising radiance cheers his sight—
His fellows' Freedom soothes the Captive's cares!

Thou, FAYETTE! who didst wake with startling voice
Life's better Sun from that long wintry night,
Thus in thy Country's triumphs shalt rejoice
And mock with raptures high the Dungeon's might:

For lo! the Morning struggles into Day,
And Slavery's spectres shriek and vanish from the ray!

TO THE REV. W. L. BOWLES<sup>2</sup>

[FIRST VERSION, PRINTED IN 'MORNING CHRONICLE',
DECEMBER 26, 1794]

My heart has thank'd thee, BOWLES! for those soft strains,
That, on the still air floating, tremblingly
Wak'd in me Fancy, Love, and Sympathy!
For hence, not callous to a Brother's pains

Thro' Youth's gay prime and thornless paths I went;
And, when the darker day of life began,
And I did roam, a thought-bewilder'd man!
Thy kindred Lays an healing solace lent,

Each lonely pang with dreamy joys combin'd,
And stole from vain REGRET her scorpion stings;
While shadowy PLEASURE, with mysterious wings,
Brooded the wavy and tumultuous mind,

Like that great Spirit, who with plastic sweep
Mov'd on the darkness of the formless Deep!

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Chronicle, December 26, 1794. First collected, P. and D. W., 1877, i. 138. The sonnet was sent in a letter to Southey, dated December 11, 1794. Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 111.

<sup>2</sup> Author of Sonnets and other Poems, published by Dilly. To Mr. Bowles's poetry I have always thought the following remarks from Maximus Tyrius peculiarly applicable:—'I am not now treating of that poetry which is estimated by the pleasure it affords to the ear—the ear having been corrupted, and the judgment-seat of the perceptions; but of that which proceeds from the intellectual Helicon, that which is dignified, and appertaining to human feelings, and entering into the soul.'—The 13th Sonnet for exquisite delicacy of painting; the 19th for tender simplicity; and the 25th for manly pathos, are compositions of, perhaps, unrivalled merit. Yet while I am selecting these, I almost accuse myself of causeless partiality; for surely never was a writer so equal in excellence!—S. T. C. [In this note as it first appeared in the Morning Chronicle a Greek sentence preceded the supposed English translation. It is not to be found in the Dissertations of Maximus Tyrius, but the following passage which, for verbal similitudes, may be compared with others (e.g. 20, 8, p. 243: 21, 3, p. 247; 28, 3, p. 336) is to be found in Davies and Markland's edition (Lips. 1725), vol. ii, p. 203:—Οὐ τί τοι λέγω τὴν δι' αὐλῶν καὶ ᾠδῶν καὶ χορῶν καὶ ψαλμάτων, ἀνευ λόγου ἐπὶ τῇ ψυχῇ ἰοῦσαν, τῷ τερπνῷ τῆς ἀκοῆς τιμηθεῖσαν . . . τὴν ἀληθῆ καὶ ἐκ τοῦ Ἑλικῶνος μοῦσαν, . . .]

To the Rev. W. L. Bowles—3 Wak'd] Woke MS. Letter, Dec. 11, 1794.

[SECOND VERSION]<sup>1</sup>

My heart has thank'd thee, BOWLES! for those soft strains
 Whose sadness soothes me, like the murmuring
 Of wild-bees in the sunny showers of spring!
 For hence not callous to the mourner's pains
 Through Youth's gay prime and thornless paths I went: 5
 And when the mightier Throes of mind began,
 And drove me forth, a thought-bewilder'd man,
 Their mild and manliest melancholy lent
 A mingled charm, such as the pang consign'd
 To slumber, though the big tear it renew'd; 10
 Bidding a strange mysterious PLEASURE brood
 Over the wavy and tumultuous mind,
 As the great SPIRIT erst with plastic sweep
 Mov'd on the darkness of the uniform'd deep.

<sup>2</sup> First published in the Morning Chronicle, December 29, 1794, under the signature, S. T. C. : included in 1796 (as C. This sonnet may have been altered by Coleridge, but was no doubt written by Lamb and given by him to Coleridge to make up his tale of sonnets for the Morning Chronicle. In 1796 and 1797 Coleridge acknowledged the sonnet to be Lamb's ; but in 1803, Lamb, who was seeing that volume through the press, once more handed it over to Coleridge.

Mutter'd to wretch by necromantic spell ;
 Or of those hags, who at the witching time
 Of murky Midnight ride the air sublime,
 And mingle foul embrace with fiends of Hell :

Cold Horror drinks its blood ! Anon the tear
 More gentle starts, to hear the Beldame tell
 Of pretty Babes, that lov'd each other dear,
 Murder'd by cruel Uncle's mandate fell :

Even such the shiv'ring joys thy tones impart,
 Even so thou, SIDDONS ! meltest my sad heart !

TO WILLIAM GODWIN<sup>1</sup>

AUTHOR OF 'POLITICAL JUSTICE'

O FORM'D t' illume a sunless world forlorn,
 As o'er the chill and dusky brow of Night,
 In Finland's wintry skies the Mimic Morn<sup>2</sup>
 Electric pours a stream of rosy light,

Pleas'd I have mark'd OPPRESSION, terror-pale,
 Since, thro' the windings of her dark machine,
 Thy steady eye has shot its glances keen—
 And bade th' All-lovely 'scenes at distance hail'.

Nor will I not thy holy guidance bless,
 And hymn thee, GODWIN ! with an ardent lay ;
 For that thy voice, in Passion's stormy day,
 When wild I roam'd the bleak Heath of Distress,

10

Bade the bright form of Justice meet my way—
 And told me that her name was HAPPINESS.

TO ROBERT SOUTHEY

OF BALIOL COLLEGE, OXFORD, AUTHOR OF THE 'RETROSPECT', AND OTHER POEMS

SOUTHEY! thy melodies steal o'er mine ear
 Like far-off joyance, or the murmuring
 Of wild bees in the sunny showers of Spring—
 Sounds of such mingled import as may cheer

The lonely breast, yet rouse a mindful tear: 5
 Wak'd by the Song doth Hope-born FANCY fling
 Rich showers of dewy fragrance from her wing,
 Till sickly PASSION'S drooping Myrtles sear

Blossom anew! But O! more thrill'd, I prize
 Thy sadder strains, that bid in MEMORY'S Dream 10
 The faded forms of past Delight arise;
 Then soft, on Love's pale cheek, the tearful gleam

Of Pleasure smiles—as faint yet beauteous lies
 The imag'd Rainbow on a willowy stream.

TO LORD STANHOPE<sup>1</sup>

ON READING HIS LATE PROTEST IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS

[‘MORNING CHRONICLE,’ JAN. 31, 1795]

STANHOPE! I hail, with ardent Hymn, thy name!

Thou shalt be bless’d and lov’d, when in the dust

Thy corse shall moulder—Patriot pure and just!

And o’er thy tomb the grateful hand of FAME

Shall grave:—‘Here sleeps the Friend of Humankind!’ 5

For thou, untainted by CORRUPTION’S bowl,

Or foul AMBITION, with undaunted soul

Hast spoke the language of a Free-born mind

Pleading the cause of Nature! Still pursue

Thy path of Honour!—To thy Country true, 10

Still watch th’ expiring flame of Liberty!

O Patriot! still pursue thy virtuous way,

As holds his course the splendid Orb of Day,

Or thro’ the stormy or the tranquil sky!

ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

1795.

TO EARL STANHOPE<sup>2</sup>

NOT, STANHOPE! with the Patriot’s doubtful name

I mock thy worth—Friend of the Human Race!

Since scorning Faction’s low and partial aim

Aloof thou wendest in thy stately pace,

Thyself redeeming from that leprous stain, 5

Nobility: and aye unterrify’d

Pourest thine Abdiel warnings on the train

That sit complotting with rebellious pride

<sup>2</sup> First published in 1796: included in 1803, in Cottle’s Early Rec. i. 203, and in Rem. 1848, p. 111. First collected in 1852.

TO A FRIEND IN ANSWER TO A MELANCHOLY LETTER

AWAY, those cloudy looks, that labouring sigh,
 The peevish offspring of a sickly hour!
 Nor meanly thus complain of Fortune's power,
 When the blind Gamester throws a luckless die.

Yon setting Sun flashes a mournful gleam
 Behind those broken clouds, his stormy train:
 To-morrow shall the many-colour'd main
 In brightness roll beneath his orient beam!

Wild, as the autumnal gust, the hand of Time
 Flies o'er his mystic lyre: in shadowy dance
 The alternate groups of Joy and Grief advance
 Responsive to his varying strains sublime!

10

Bears on its wing each hour a load of Fate;
 The swain, who, lull'd by Seine's mild murmurs, led
 His weary oxen to their nightly shed,
 To-day may rule a tempest-troubled State.

15

Nor shall not Fortune with a vengeful smile
 Survey the sanguinary Despot's might,
 And haply hurl the Pageant from his height
 Unwept to wander in some savage isle.

20

There shiv'ring sad beneath the tempest's frown
 Round his tir'd limbs to wrap the purple vest;
 And mix'd with nails and beads, an equal jest!
 Barter for food, the jewels of his crown.

 Nestling thy little face in that fond breast
 Whose anxious heavings lull thee to thy rest!
 Man's breathing Miniature! thou mak'st me sigh— 15
 A Babe art thou—and such a Thing am I!
 To anger rapid and as soon appeas'd,
 For trifles mourning and by trifles pleas'd,

 Yet snatch what coals of fire on Pleasure's altar glow! 20

WHILE TEACHING A YOUNG LADY SOME SONG-TUNES ON HIS FLUTE

I

HUSH! ye clamorous Cares! be mute!
 Again, dear Harmonist! again
 Thro' the hollow of thy flute
 Breathe that passion-warbled strain:
 Till Memory each form shall bring
 The loveliest of her shadowy throng;
 And Hope, that soars on sky-lark wing,
 Carol wild her gladdest song!

II

O skill'd with magic spell to roll
 The thrilling tones, that concentrate the soul!
 Breathe thro' thy flute those tender notes again,
 While near thee sits the chaste-eyed Maiden mild;
 And bid her raise the Poet's kindred strain
 In soft impassion'd voice, correctly wild.

In Freedom's UNDIVIDED dell,
 Where Toil and Health with mellow'd Love shall dwell,
 Far from folly, far from men,
 In the rude romantic glen,
 Up the cliff, and thro' the glade,
 Wandering with the dear-lov'd maid,
 I shall listen to the lay,
 And ponder on thee far away
 Still, as she bids those thrilling notes aspire
 ('Making my fond attuned heart her lyre'),
 Thy honour'd form, my Friend! shall reappear
 And I will thank thee with a raptur'd tear.

PITY<sup>1</sup>

SWEET Mercy! how my very heart has bled
 To see thee, poor Old Man! and thy grey hairs
 Hoar with the snowy blast: while no one cares
 To clothe thy shrivell'd limbs and palsied head.
 My Father! throw away this tatter'd vest 5
 That mocks thy shivering! take my garment—use
 A young man's arm! I'll melt these frozen dews
 That hang from thy white beard and numb thy breast.
 My Sara too shall tend thee, like a child:
 And thou shalt talk, in our fireside's recess, 10
 Of purple Pride, that scowls on Wretchedness —

TO THE NIGHTINGALE<sup>2</sup>

SISTER of love-lorn Poets, Philomel!
 How many Bards in city garret pent,
 While at their window they with downward eye
 Mark the faint lamp-beam on the kennell'd mud,
 And listen to the drowsy cry of Watchmen 5
 (Those hoarse unfeather'd Nightingales of Time!),
 How many wretched Bards address thy name,
 And hers, the full-orb'd Queen that shines above.
 But I do hear thee, and the high bough mark,
 Within whose mild moon-mellow'd foliage hid 10
 Thou warblest sad thy pity-pleading strains.
 O! I have listen'd, till my working soul,
 Waked by those strains to thousand phantasies,
 Absorb'd hath ceas'd to listen! Therefore oft,
 I hymn thy name: and with a proud delight 15

 COOMB, SOMERSETSHIRE, MAY 1795

WITH many a pause and oft reverted eye
 I climb the Coomb's ascent: sweet songsters near Warble in shade their wild wood melody:
 Far off the unvarying Cuckoo soothes my ear.
 Up scour the startling stragglers of the flock 5
 That on green plots o'er precipices browze:
 From the deep fissures of the naked rock
 The Yew-tree bursts! Beneath its dark green boughs
 (Mid which the May-thorn blends its blossoms white)
 Where broad smooth stones jut out in mossy seats, 10
 I rest:—and now have gain'd the topmost site.
 Ah! what a luxury of landscape meets
 My gaze! Proud towers, and Cots more dear to me,
 Elm-shadow'd Fields, and prospect-bounding Sea!
 Deep sighs my lonely heart: I drop the tear: 15
 Enchanting spot! O were my Sara here!

One quill withouten pain ypluck'd might be!
 For O! I wish my Sara's frowns to flee, 5
 And fain to her some soothing song would write,
 Lest she resent my rude discourtesy,
 Who vow'd to meet her ere the morning light,
 But broke my plighted word—ah! false and recreant wight!

Last night as I my weary head did pillow 10
 With thoughts of my dissever'd Fair engross'd,
 Chill Fancy droop'd wreathing herself with willow,
 As though my breast entomb'd a pining ghost.
 'From some blest couch, young Rapture's bridal boast,
 Rejected Slumber! hither wing thy way; 15
 But leave me with the matin hour, at most!
 As night-clos'd floweret to the orient ray,
 My sad heart will expand, when I the Maid survey.'

But Love, who heard the silence of my thought,
 Contriv'd a too successful wile, 20
 And whisper'd to himself, with malice fraught—
 'Too long our Slave the Damsel's smiles hath seen:
 To-morrow shall he ken her alter'd mien!'
 He spake, and ambush'd lay, till on my bed
 The morning shot her dewy glances keen, 25
 When as I 'gan to lift my drowsy head—
 'Now, Bard! I'll work thee woe!' the laughing Elfin said.

Sleep, softly-breathing God! his downy wing
 Was fluttering now, as quickly to depart;
 When twang'd an arrow from Love's mystic string, 30
 With pathless wound it pierc'd him to the heart.
 Was there some magic in the Elfin's dart?
 Or did he strike my couch with wizard lance?
 For straight so fair a Form did upwards start
 (No fairer deck'd the bowers of old Romance) 35
 That Sleep enamour'd grew, nor mov'd from his sweet trance!

My Sara came, with gentlest look divine;
 Bright shone her eye, yet tender was its beam:
 I felt the pressure of her lip to mine!
 Whispering we went, and Love was all our theme— 40
 Love pure and spotless, as at first, I deem,
 He sprang from Heaven! Such joys with Sleep did 'bide,

THE HOUR WHEN WE SHALL MEET AGAIN<sup>1</sup>

(Composed during Illness, and in Absence.)

DIM Hour! that sleep'st on pillowing clouds afar,
 O rise and yoke the Turtles to thy car!
 Bend o'er the traces, blame each lingering Dove,
 And give me to the bosom of my Love!
 My gentle Love, caressing and carest, 5
 With heaving heart shall cradle me to rest!
 Shed the warm tear-drop from her smiling eyes,
 Lull with fond woe, and medicine me with sighs!
 While finely-flushing float her kisses meek,
 Like melted rubies, o'er my pallid cheek. 10
 Chill'd by the night, the drooping Rose of May Mourns the long absence of the lovely Day;
 Young Day returning at her promis'd hour
 Weeps o'er the sorrows of her favourite Flower;
 Weeps the soft dew, the balmy gale she sighs, 15
 And darts a trembling lustre from her eyes.
 New life and joy th' expanding flow'ret feels:
 His pitying Mistress mourns, and mourning heals!

Nor travels my meandering eye

 Nor now with curious sight
 I mark the glow-worm, as I pass,
 Move with 'green radiance'<sup>1</sup> through the grass,      5
 An emerald of light.

O ever present to my view!
 My wafted spirit is with you,
 And soothes your boding fears:
 I see you all oppressed with gloom      10
 Sit lonely in that cheerless room—
 Ah me! You are in tears!

Belovéd Woman! did you fly
 Chill'd Friendship's dark disliking eye,
 Or Mirth's untimely din?      15
 With cruel weight these trifles press
 A temper sore with tenderness,
 When aches the void within.

But why with sable wand unblessed
 Should Fancy rouse within my breast      20
 Dim-visag'd shapes of Dread?
 Untenanting its beauteous clay
 My Sara's soul has wing'd its way,
 And hovers round my head!

[The phrase 'green radiance' occurs in An Evening Walk, ll. 264-8, first published in 1793, and reprinted in 1820. In 1836 the lines were omitted.

Oft has she taught them on her lap to play
 Delighted with the glow-worm's harmless ray,
 Toss'd light from hand to hand; while on the ground
 Small circles of green radiance gleam around.]

1796: Ode to Sara, written at Shurton Bars, &c. 1797, 1803. The motto is omitted in 1797, 1803: The motto is prefixed to the poem in 1828, 1829, and 1834. In 1797 and 1803 a note is appended to the title:—Note. The first stanza alludes to a Passage in the Letter. [The allusions to a 'Passage in the Letter' must surely be contained not in the first but in the second and third stanzas. The reference is, no doubt, to the alienation from Southey, which must have led to a difference of feeling between the two sisters Sarah and Edith Fricker.]

I felt it prompt the tender Dream, 25
 When slowly sank the day's last gleam ;
 You rous'd each gentler sense,
 As sighing o'er the Blossom's bloom
 Meek Evening wakes its soft perfume
 With viewless influence. 30
 And hark, my Love! The sea-breeze moans
 Through yon reft house! O'er rolling stones
 In bold ambitious sweep
 The onward-surfing tides supply
 The silence of the cloudless sky 35
 With mimic thunders deep.
 Dark reddening from the channell'd Isle<sup>1</sup>
 (Where stands one solitary pile Unslated by the blast)
 The Watchfire, like a sullen star 40
 Twinkles to many a dozing Tar
 Rude cradled on the mast.
 Even there—beneath that light-house tower—
 In the tumultuous evil hour
 Ere Peace with Sara came, 45
 Time was, I should have thought it sweet
 To count the echoings of my feet,
 And watch the storm-vex'd flame.
 And there in black soul-jaundie'd fit
 A sad gloom-pamper'd Man to sit, 50
 And listen to the roar:
 When mountain surges bellowing deep
 With an uncouth monster-leap
 Plung'd foaming on the shore.
 Then by the lightning's blaze to mark 55
 Some toiling tempest-shatter'd bark ;
 Her vain distress-guns hear ;
 And when a second sheet of light
 Flash'd o'er the blackness of the night—
 To see no vessel there! 60
 But Fancy now more gaily sings ;
 Or if awhile she droop her wings,
 As skylarks 'mid the corn,

 Blest visitations from above, 70
 Such are the tender woes of Love
 Fostering the heart they bend !

When stormy Midnight howling round
 Beats on our roof with clattering sound,
 To me your arms you'll stretch : 75

 I press you to my heart ! 90

'Tis said, in Summer's evening hour
 Flashes the golden-colour'd flower
 A fair electric flame :<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> LIGHT from plants. In Sweden a very curious phenomenon has been observed on certain flowers, by M. Haggern, lecturer in natural history. One evening he perceived a faint flash of light repeatedly dart from a marigold. Surprised at such an uncommon appearance, he resolved to examine it with attention ; and, to be assured it was no deception of the eye, he placed a man near him, with orders to make a signal at the moment when he observed the light. They both saw it constantly at the same moment.

The light was most brilliant on marigolds of an orange or flame colour ; but scarcely visible on pale ones. The flash was frequently seen on the same flower two or three times in quick succession ; but more commonly at intervals of several minutes ; and when several flowers in the same

 When all the heart's big ecstasy
 Shoots rapid through the frame!

THE EOLIAN HARP<sup>1</sup>

COMPOSED AT CLEVEDON, SOMERSETSHIRE

My pensive Sara! thy soft cheek reclined
 Thus on mine arm, most soothing sweet it is
 To sit beside our Cot, our Cot o'ergrown
 With white-flower'd Jasmin, and the broad-leav'd Myrtle,
 (Meet emblems they of Innocence and Love!) 5
 And watch the clouds, that late were rich with light,
 Slow saddening round, and mark the star of eve
 Serenely brilliant (such should Wisdom be)
 Shine opposite! How exquisite the scents
 Snatch'd from yon bean-field! and the world so hush'd! 10
 The stilly murmur of the distant Sea
 Tells us of silence.

And that simplest Lute,
 Placed length-ways in the clasping casement, hark!

place emitted their light together, it could be observed at a considerable distance.

This phenomenon was remarked in the months of July and August at sun-set, and for half an hour when the atmosphere was clear; but after a rainy day, or when the air was loaded with vapours nothing of it was seen.

The following flowers emitted flashes, more or less vivid, in this order:—

1. The marigold, galendula [sic] officinalis.
2. Monk's-hood, tropaeolum [sic] majus.
3. The orange-lily, lilium bulliferum.
4. The Indian pink, tagetes patula et erecta.

From the rapidity of the flash, and other circumstances, it may be conjectured that there is something of electricity in this phenomenon. Notes to Poems, 1796. Note 13, pp. 186, 188.

In 1797 the above was printed as a footnote on pp. 93, 94. In 1803 the last stanza, lines 91–96, was omitted, and, of course, the note disappeared. In 1828, 1829, and 1834 the last stanza was replaced but the note was not reprinted.

How by the desultory breeze caress'd,
 Like some coy maid half yielding to her lover, 15
 It pours such sweet upbraiding, as must needs
 Tempt to repeat the wrong! And now, its strings
 Boldlier swept, the long sequacious notes
 Over delicious surges sink and rise,
 Such a soft floating witchery of sound 20
 As twilight Elfin's make, when they at eve
 Voyage on gentle gales from Fairy-Land,
 Where Melodies round honey-dropping flowers,
 Footless and wild, like birds of Paradise,
 Nor pause, nor perch, hovering on untam'd wing! 25
 O! the one Life within us and abroad,
 Which meets all motion and becomes its soul,
 A light in sound, a sound-like power in light,
 Rhythm in all thought, and joyance every where—
 Methinks, it should have been impossible 30
 Not to love all things in a world so fill'd;
 Where the breeze warbles, and the mute still air
 Is Music slumbering on her instrument.

And thus, my Love! as on the midway slope
 Of yonder hill I stretch my limbs at noon, 35
 Whilst through my half-clos'd eye-lids I behold
 The sunbeams dance, like diamonds, on the main,
 And tranquil muse upon tranquillity;
 Full many a thought uncall'd and undetain'd,
 And many idle flitting phantasies, 40

 21-33 are om. in 1803, and the text reads:

*Such a soft floating witchery of sound—
 Methinks, it should have been impossible
 Not to love all things in a World like this,
 Where e'en the Breezes of the simple Air
 Possess the power and Spirit of Melody!
 And thus, my Love, &c.*

26-33 are not in 1796, 1797. In Sibylline Leaves, for lines 26-33 of the text, four lines are inserted:

*Methinks it should have been impossible
 Not to love all things in a world like this,
 Where even the breezes, and the common air,
 Contain the power and spirit of Harmony.*

Lines 26-33 were first included in the text in 1828, and reappeared in 1829 and 1834. They are supplied in the Errata, pp. [xi, xii], of Sibylline Leaves, with a single variant (l. 33): Is Music slumbering on its instrument.

Traverse my indolent and passive brain,
As wild and various as the random gales
That swell and flutter on this subject Lute!

And what if all of animated nature
Be but organic Harps diversely fram'd,
That tremble into thought, as o'er them sweeps
Plastic and vast, one intellectual breeze,
At once the Soul of each, and God of all?

45

But thy more serious eye a mild reproof
Darts, O belovéd Woman! nor such thoughts
Dim and unhallow'd dost thou not reject,
And biddest me walk humbly with my God.
Meek Daughter in the family of Christ!

50

Well hast thou said and holily disprais'd
These shapings of the unregenerate mind;
Bubbles that glitter as they rise and break
On vain Philosophy's aye-babbling spring.

55

For never guiltless may I speak of him,
The Incomprehensible! save when with awe
I praise him, and with Faith that inly feels;<sup>1</sup>

60

Who with his saving mercies healéd me,
A sinful and most miserable man,
Wilder'd and dark, and gave me to possess
Peace, and this Cot, and thee, heart-honour'd Maid!

1 Unboastful Bard] My honor'd friend 1797.

May your fame fadeless live, as 'never-sere'
 The Ivy wreathes yon Oak, whose broad defence
 Embowers me from Noon's sultry influence! 5
 For, like that nameless Rivulet stealing by,
 Your modest verse to musing Quiet dear
 Is rich with tints heaven-borrow'd: the charm'd eye
 Shall gaze undazzled there, and love the soften'd sky.

Circling the base of the Poetic mount 10
 A stream there is, which rolls in lazy flow
 Its coal-black waters from Oblivion's fount:
 The vapour-poison'd Birds, that fly too low,
 Fall with dead swoop, and to the bottom go.
 Escaped that heavy stream on pinion fleet 15
 Beneath the Mountain's lofty-frowning brow,
 Ere aught of perilous ascent you meet,
 A mead of mildest charm delays th' unlabouring feet.

Not there the cloud-climb'd rock, sublime and vast,
 That like some giant king, o'er-glooms the hill; 20
 Nor there the Pine-grove to the midnight blast
 Makes solemn music! But th' unceasing rill
 To the soft Wren or Lark's descending trill
 Murmurs sweet undersong 'mid jasmin bowers.
 In this same pleasant meadow, at your will 25
 I ween, you wander'd—there collecting flowers
 Of sober tint, and herbs of med'cinable powers!

There for the monarch-murder'd Soldier's tomb
 You wove th' unfinish'd<sup>1</sup> wreath of saddest hues;
 And to that holier<sup>2</sup> chaplet added bloom 30
 Besprinkling it with Jordan's cleansing dew.
 But lo your Henderson<sup>3</sup> awakes the Muse——
 His Spirit beckon'd from the mountain's height!
 You left the plain and soar'd mid richer views!

'The first in order of the verses which I have thus endeavoured to relieve from immediate oblivion was originally addressed "To the Author of Poems published anonymously at Bristol". A second edition of these poems has lately appeared with the Author's name prefixed: and I could not refuse myself the gratification of seeing the name of that man among my poems without whose kindness they would probably have remained unpublished; and to whom I know myself greatly and variously obliged, as a Poet, a man, and a Christian.' 'Advertisement' to Supplement, 1797, pp. 243, 244.

So Nature mourn'd when sunk the First Day's light, 35
 With stars, unseen before, spangling her robe of night!

Still soar, my Friend, those richer views among,
 Strong, rapid, fervent, flashing Fancy's beam!
 Virtue and Truth shall love your gentler song;
 But Poesy demands th' impassion'd theme: 40
 Waked by Heaven's silent dews at Eve's mild gleam
 What balmy sweets Pomona breathes around!
 But if the vext air rush a stormy stream
 Or Autumn's shrill gust moan in plaintive sound,
 With fruits and flowers she loads the tempest-honor'd ground.

THE SILVER THIMBLE<sup>1</sup>

THE PRODUCTION OF A YOUNG LADY, ADDRESSED TO THE AUTHOR OF THE POEMS ALLUDED TO IN THE PRECEDING EPISTLE

She had lost her Silver Thimble, and her complaint being accidentally overheard by him, her Friend, he immediately sent her four others to take her choice of.

As oft mine eye with careless glance
 Has gallop'd thro' some old romance,
 Of speaking Birds and Steeds with wings,
 Giants and Dwarfs, and Fiends and Kings;
 Beyond the rest with more attentive care 5
 I've lov'd to read of elfin-favour'd Fair——
 How if she long'd for aught beneath the sky
 And suffer'd to escape one votive sigh,
 Wafted along on viewless pinions aery
 It laid itself obsequious at her feet: 10
 Such things, I thought, one might not hope to meet
 Save in the dear delicious land of Faery!
 But now (by proof I know it well)
 There's still some peril in free wishing——
Politeness is a licensed spell, 15
 And you, dear Sir! the Arch-magician.

35 sunk] sank 1797.

The Silver Thimble—Title] Epistle v. The Production of a Young Lady, &c. 1796: From a Young Lady Appendix, 1863.

You much perplex'd me by the various set:
 They were indeed an elegant quartette!
 My mind went to and fro, and waver'd long;
 At length I've chosen (Samuel thinks me wrong) 20
That, around whose azure rim
 Silver figures seem to swim,
 Like fleece-white clouds, that on the skiey Blue,
 Waked by no breeze, the self-same shapes retain;
 Or ocean-Nymphs with limbs of snowy hue 25
 Slow-floating o'er the calm cerulean plain.

Just such a one, mon cher ami,
 (The finger shield of industry)
 Th' inventive Gods, I deem, to Pallas gave
 What time the vain Arachne, madly brave, 30
 Challeng'd the blue-eyed Virgin of the sky
 A duel in embroider'd work to try.
 And hence the thimble'd Finger of grave Pallas
 To th' erring Needle's point was more than callous.
 But ah the poor Arachne! She unarm'd 35
 Blundering thro' hasty eagerness, alarm'd
 With all a Rival's hopes, a Mortal's fears,
 Still miss'd the stitch, and stain'd the web with tears.
 Unnumber'd punctures small yet sore
 Full fretfully the maiden bore, 40
 Till she her lily finger found
 Crimson'd with many a tiny wound;
 And to her eyes, suffus'd with watery woe,
 Her flower-embroider'd web danc'd dim, I wist,
 Like blossom'd shrubs in a quick-moving mist: 45
 Till vanquish'd the despairing Maid sunk low.

O Bard! whom sure no common Muse inspires,
 I heard your Verse that glows with vestal fires!
 And I from unwatch'd needle's erring point
 Had surely suffer'd on each finger-joint 50
 Those wounds, which erst did poor Arachne meet;
 While he, the much-lov'd Object of my choice
 (My bosom thrilling with enthusiast heat),
 Pour'd on mine ear with deep impressive voice,
 How the great Prophet of the Desert stood 55
 And preach'd of Penitence by Jordan's Flood;
 On War; or else the legendary lays
 In simplest measures hymn'd to Alla's praise;

Or what the Bard from his heart's inmost stores
 O'er his Friend's grave in loftier numbers pours: 60
 Yes, Bard polite! you but obey'd the laws
 Of Justice, when the thimble you had sent;
 What wounds your thought-bewildering Muse might cause
 'Tis well your finger-shielding gifts prevent. SARA.

REFLECTIONS ON HAVING LEFT A PLACE OF RETIREMENT<sup>1</sup>

Sermoni propria.—HOR.

Low was our pretty Cot: our tallest Rose
 Peep'd at the chamber-window. We could hear
 At silent noon, and eve, and early morn,
 The Sea's faint murmur. In the open air
 Our Myrtles blossom'd; and across the porch 5
 Thick Jasmins twined: the little landscape round
 Was green and woody, and refresh'd the eye.
 It was a spot which you might aptly call
 The Valley of Seclusion! Once I saw
 (Hallowing his Sabbath-day by quietness) 10
 A wealthy son of Commerce saunter by,
 Bristowa's citizen: methought, it calm'd
 His thirst of idle gold, and made him muse
 With wiser feelings: for he paus'd, and look'd
 With a pleas'd sadness, and gaz'd all around, 15
 Then eyed our Cottage, and gaz'd round again,
 And sigh'd, and said, it was a Blesséd Place.
 And we were bless'd. Oft with patient ear
 Long-listening to the viewless sky-lark's note
 (Viewless, or haply for a moment seen) 20
 Gleaming on sunny wings) in whisper'd tones

21-3 Gleaming on sunny wing,) 'And such,' I said,
 'The inobtrusive song 1803.

I've said to my Belovéd, 'Such, sweet Girl!
 The inobtrusive song of Happiness,
 Unearthly minstrelsy! then only heard
 When the Soul seeks to hear; when all is hush'd, 25
 And the Heart listens!'

But the time, when first
 From that low Dell, steep up the stony Mount
 I climb'd with perilous toil and reach'd the top,
 Oh! what a goodly scene! Here the bleak mount,
 The bare bleak mountain speckled thin with sheep; 30
 Grey clouds, that shadowing spot the sunny fields;
 And river, now with bushy rocks o'er-brow'd,
 Now winding bright and full, with naked banks;
 And seats, and lawns, the Abbey and the wood,
 And cots, and hamlets, and faint city-spire; 35
 The Channel there, the Islands and white sails,
 Dim coasts, and cloud-like hills, and shoreless Ocean—
 It seem'd like Omnipresence! God, methought,
 Had built him there a Temple: the whole World
 Seem'd imag'd in its vast circumference: 40
 No wish profan'd my overwhelméd heart.
 Blest hour! It was a luxury,—to be!

Ah! quiet Dell! dear Cot, and Mount sublime!
 I was constrain'd to quit you. Was it right,
 While my unnumber'd brethren toil'd and bled, 45
 That I should dream away the entrusted hours
 On rose-leaf beds, pampering the coward heart
 With feelings all too delicate for use?
 Sweet is the tear that from some Howard's eye
 Drops on the cheek of one he lifts from earth: 50
 And he that works me good with unmov'd face,
 Does it but half: he chills me while he aids,
 My benefactor, not my brother man!
 Yet even this, this cold beneficence
 Praise, praise it, O my Soul! oft as thou scann'st 55
 The sluggard Pity's vision-weaving tribe!
 Who sigh for Wretchedness, yet shun the Wretched,
 Nursing in some delicious solitude
 Their slothful loves and dainty sympathies!

40 Was imag'd M. M.      46 entrusted] trusted M. M., 1797.      55
 Seizes my Praise, when I reflect on those 1797, 1803, Sibylline Leaves, 1817
 (line as in text supplied in Errata).

I therefore go, and join head, heart, and hand, 60
Active and firm, to fight the bloodless fight
Of Science, Freedom, and the Truth in Christ.

Yet oft when after honourable toil
Rests the tir'd mind, and waking loves to dream,
My spirit shall revisit thee, dear Cot! 65
Thy Jasmin and thy window-peeping Rose,
And Myrtles fearless of the mild sea-air.
And I shall sigh fond wishes—sweet Abode!
Ah!—had none greater! And that all had such!
It might be so—but the time is not yet. 70
Speed it, O Father! Let thy Kingdom come!

A DESULTORY POEM, WRITTEN ON THE CHRISTMAS EVE OF 1794

THIS is the time, when most divine to hear,
The voice of Adoration rouses me,

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1796: included in 1797, 1803, 1828, 1829, and 1834. Lines 260-357 were published in The Watchman, No. II, March 9, 1796, entitled 'The Present State of Society'. In the editions of 1796, 1797, and 1803 the following lines, an adaptation of a passage in the First Book of Akenside's Pleasures of the Imagination, were prefixed as a motto:—

What tho' first,
In years unseason'd, I attun'd the lay
To idle Passion and unreal Woe?
Yet serious Truth her empire o'er my song
Hath now asserted; Falsehood's evil brood,
Vice and deceitful Pleasure, she at once
Excluded, and my Fancy's careless toil
Drew to the better cause!

An 'Argument' followed on a separate page:—

Introduction. Person of Christ. His prayer on the Cross. The process of his Doctrines on the mind of the Individual. Character of the Elect. Superstition. Digression to the present War. Origin and Uses of Government and Property. The present State of Society. The French Revolution. Millenium. Universal Redemption. Conclusion.

Religious Musings—Title] — on Christmas Eve. In the year of Our Lord, 1794.

1-23 This is the time, when most divine to hear,
As with a Cherub's 'loud uplifted' trump
The voice of Adoration my thrill'd heart
Rouses! And with the rushing noise of wings

As with a Cherub's trump: and high upborne,
 Yea, mingling with the Choir, I seem to view
 The vision of the heavenly multitude, 5
 Who hymned the song of Peace o'er Bethlehem's fields!
 Yet thou more bright than all the Angel-blaze,
 That harbingered thy birth, Thou Man of Woes!
 Despiséd Galilaean! For the Great
 Invisible (by symbols only seen) 10
 With a peculiar and surpassing light
 Shines from the visage of the oppressed good man,
 When heedless of himself the scourgéd saint
 Mourns for the oppressor. Fair the vernal mead,
 Fair the high grove, the sea, the sun, the stars; 15
 True impress each of their creating Sire!
 Yet nor high grove, nor many-colour'd mead,
 Nor the green ocean with his thousand isles,

Transports my spirit to the favor'd fields 5
 Of Bethlehem, there in shepherd's guise to sit
 Sublime of extacy, and mark entranc'd
 The glory-streaming VISION throng the night.*
 Ah not more radiant, nor loud harmonies
 Hymning more unimaginably sweet 10
 With choral songs around th' ETERNAL MIND,
 The constellated company of WORLDS
 Danc'd jubilant: what time the startling East
 Saw from her dark womb leap her flamy child!
 Glory to God in the Highest! PEACE on Earth! 15
 Yet thou more bright than all that Angel Blaze,
 Despiséd GALILAEAN! Man of Woes!
 For chiefly in the oppressed Good Man's face
 The Great Invisible (by symbols seen)
 Shines with peculiar and concentred light, 20
 When all of Self regardless the scourg'd Saint Mourns for th' oppressor. O thou meekest Man!
 Meek Man and lowliest of the Sons of Men! 25
 Who thee beheld thy imag'd Father saw,†
 His Power and Wisdom from thy awful eye
 Blended their beams, and loftier Love sat there
 Musing on human weal, and that dread hour 30

Nor the starred azure, nor the sovran sun,
 E'er with such majesty of portraiture 20
 Imaged the supreme beauty uncreate,
 As thou, meek Saviour! at the fearful hour
 When thy insulted anguish winged the prayer
 Harped by Archangels, when they sing of mercy!
 Which when the Almighty heard from forth his throne 25
 Diviner light filled Heaven with ecstasy!
 Heaven's hymnings paused: and Hell her yawning mouth
 Closed a brief moment.

Lovely was the death
 Of Him whose life was Love! Holy with power
 He on the thought-benighted Sceptic beamed 30

God its Identity: God all in all!
We and our Father one!

And blest are they, 45
Who in this fleshly World, the elect of Heaven,
Their strong eye darting through the deeds of men,
Adore with steadfast unpresuming gaze
Him Nature's essence, mind, and energy!
And gazing, trembling, patiently ascend 50
Treading beneath their feet all visible things
As steps, that upward to their Father's throne
Lead gradual—else nor glorified nor loved.
They nor contempt embosom nor revenge:
For they dare know of what may seem deform 55
The Supreme Fair sole operant: in whose sight
All things are pure, his strong controlling love
Alike from all educing perfect good.
Their's too celestial courage, inly armed—
Dwarfing Earth's giant brood, what time they muse 60
On their great Father, great beyond compare!
And marching onwards view high o'er their heads
His waving banners of Omnipotence.

Who the Creator love, created Might
Dread not: within their tents no Terrors walk. 65
For they are holy things before the Lord
Aye unprofaned, though Earth should league with Hell;
God's altar grasping with an eager hand
Fear, the wild-visag'd, pale, eye-starting wretch,
Sure-refug'd hears his hot pursuing fiends 70

64-71 They cannot dread created might, who love
God the Creator! fair and lofty thought!
It lifts and swells my heart! and as I muse,
Behold a Vision gathers in my soul,
Voices and shadowy shapes! In human guise
I seem to see the phantom, FEAR, pass by,
Hotly-pursued, and pale! From rock to rock
He bounds with bleeding feet, and thro' the swamp,
The quicksand and the groaning wilderness,
Struggles with feebler and yet feebler flight.
But lo! an altar in the wilderness,
And eagerly yet feebly lo! he grasps
The altar of the living God! and there
With wan reverted face the trembling wretch
All wildly list'ning to his Hunter-fiends
Stands, till the last faint echo of their yell
Dies in the distance. Soon refresh'd from Heaven &c. 1803.

Yell at vain distance. Soon refresh'd from Heaven
 He calms the throb and tempest of his heart.
 His countenance settles; a soft solemn bliss
 Swims in his eye—his swimming eye uprais'd:
 And Faith's whole armour glitters on his limbs! 75
 And thus transfigured with a dreadless awe,
 A solemn hush of soul, meek he beholds
 All things of terrible seeming: yea, unmoved
 Views e'en the immitigable ministers
 That shower down vengeance on these latter days. 80
 For kindling with intenser Deity
 From the celestial Mercy-seat they come,
 And at the renovating wells of Love
 Have fill'd their vials with salutary wrath,<sup>1</sup>
 To sickly Nature more medicinal 85
 Than what soft balm the weeping good man pours
 Into the lone despoil'd traveller's wounds!

Thus from the Elect, regenerate through faith,
 Pass the dark Passions and what thirsty cares <sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Our evil Passions, under the influence of Religion, become innocent, and may be made to animate our virtue—in the same manner as the thick mist melted by the Sun, increases the light which it had before excluded. In the preceding paragraph, agreeably to this truth, we had allegorically narrated the transfiguration of Fear into holy Awe. Footnote to line 91, 1797: to line 101, 1803.

78-84 Yea, and there,
 Unshudder'd unaghasted, he shall view
 E'en the SEVEN SPIRITS, who in the latter day
 Will shower hot pestilence on the sons of men,
 For he shall know, his heart shall understand,
 That kindling with intenser Deity
 They from the MERCY-SEAT like rosy flames,
 From God's celestial MERCY-SEAT will flash,
 And at the wells of renovating LOVE
 Fill their Seven Vials with salutary wrath. 1796.

Drink up the spirit, and the dim regards 90
 Self-centre. Lo they vanish! or acquire
 New names, new features—by supernal grace
 Enrobed with Light, and naturalised in Heaven.
 As when a shepherd on a vernal morn
 Through some thick fog creeps timorous with slow foot, 95
 Darkling he fixes on the immediate road
 His downward eye: all else of fairest kind
 Hid or deformed. But lo! the bursting Sun!
 Touched by the enchantment of that sudden beam
 Straight the black vapour melteth, and in globes 100
 Of dewy glitter gems each plant and tree;
 On every leaf, on every blade it hangs!
 Dance glad the new-born intermingling rays,
 And wide around the landscape streams with glory!

There is one Mind, one omnipresent Mind, 105
 Omnific. His most holy name is Love.
 Truth of subliming import! with the which
 Who feeds and saturates his constant soul,
 He from his small particular orbit flies
 With blest outstarting! From himself he flies, 110
 Stands in the sun, and with no partial gaze
 Views all creation; and he loves it all,
 And blesses it, and calls it very good!
 This is indeed to dwell with the Most High!
 Cherubs and rapture-trembling Seraphim 115
 Can press no nearer to the Almighty's throne.
 But that we roam unconscious, or with hearts
 Unfeeling of our universal Sire,
 And that in His vast family no Cain
 Injures uninjured (in her best-aimed blow 120 Victorious Murder a blind Suicide)
 Haply for this some younger Angel now
 Looks down on Human Nature: and, behold!
 A sea of blood bestrewed with wrecks, where mad
 Embattling Interests on each other rush 125
 With unhelmed rage!

<sup>1</sup> January 21st, 1794, in the debate on the Address to his Majesty, on the speech from the Throne, the Earl of Guildford (sic) moved an Amendment to the following effect:—‘That the House hoped his Majesty would seize the earliest opportunity to conclude a peace with France,’ &c. This motion was opposed by the Duke of Portland, who ‘considered the war to be merely grounded on one principle—the preservation of the CHRISTIAN RELIGION’. May 30th, 1794, the Duke of Bedford moved a number of Resolutions, with a view to the Establishment of a Peace with France. He was opposed (among others) by Lord Abingdon in these remarkable words: ‘The best road to Peace, my Lords, is WAR! and WAR carried on in the same manner in which we are taught to worship our CREATOR, namely, with all our souls, and with all our minds, and with all our hearts, and with all our strength.’ [Footnote to line 159, 1797, 1803, 1828, 1829, and 1834.]

<sup>1</sup> I deem that the teaching of the gospel for hire is wrong; because it gives the teacher an improper bias in favour of particular opinions on a subject where it is of the last importance that the mind should be perfectly unbiassed. Such is my private opinion; but I mean not to censure all hired teachers, many among whom I know, and venerate as the best and wisest of men—God forbid that I should think of these, when I use the word PRIEST, a name, after which any other term of abhorrence would appear an anti-climax. By a Priest I mean a man who holding the scourge of power in his right hand and a bible (translated by authority) in his left, doth necessarily cause the bible and the scourge to be associated ideas, and so produces that temper of mind which leads to Infidelity—Infidelity which judging of Revelation by the doctrines and practices of established Churches honors God by rejecting Christ. It did not occupy twenty yards in breadth, and was about twelve feet high from the ground.—We all lay flat on the ground, as if dead, till IDRIS told us it was blown over.  Who drank iniquity in cups of gold, 325
 Whose names were many and all blasphemous,
 Hath met the horrible judgment! Whence that cry?
 The mighty army of foul Spirits shrieked
 Disherited of earth! For she hath fallen
 On whose black front was written Mystery; 330
 She that reeled heavily, whose wine was blood;
 She that worked whoredom with the Daemon Power,
 And from the dark embrace all evil things
 Brought forth and nurtured: mitred Atheism!
 And patient Folly who on bended knee 335
 Gives back the steel that stabbed him; and pale Fear
 Haunted by ghastlier shapings than surround
 Moon-blasted Madness when he yells at midnight!
 Return pure Faith! return meek Piety!

MONODY ON THE DEATH OF CHATTERTON<sup>1</sup>

O WHAT a wonder seems the fear of death,
 Seeing how gladly we all sink to sleep,
 Babes, Children, Youths, and Men,
 Night following night for threescore years and ten!
 But doubly strange, where life is but a breath 5
 To sigh and pant with, up Want's rugged steep.

Away, Grim Phantom! Scorpion King, away!
 Reserve thy terrors and thy stings display
 For coward Wealth and Guilt in robes of State!
 Lo! by the grave I stand of one, for whom 10
 A prodigal Nature and a niggard Doom
 (That all bestowing, this withholding all)
 Made each chance knell from distant spire or dome
 Sound like a seeking Mother's anxious call,
 Return, poor Child! Home, weary Truant, home! 15

Coleridge told Cottle, May 27, 1814 that lines 1-4 were written when he was 'a mere boy' (Reminiscences, 1847, p. 348); and, again, April 22, 1819, he told William Worship that they were written 'in his thirteenth

 And bid the heartsick Wanderer's Anguish cease.

[Lines 1-15 of the text were first printed in 1829.]

Thee, Chatterton! these unblest stones protect
 From want, and the bleak freezings of neglect.
 Too long before the vexing Storm-blast driven
 Here hast thou found repose! beneath this sod!
 Thou! O vain word! thou dwell'st not with the clod! 20
 Amid the shining Host of the Forgiven
 Thou at the throne of mercy and thy God
 The triumph of redeeming Love dost hymn
 (Believe it, O my Soul!) to harps of Seraphim.

Yet oft, perforce ('tis suffering Nature's call), 25
 I weep that heaven-born Genius so should fall;
 And oft, in Fancy's saddest hour, my soul
 Averted shudders at the poison'd bowl.
 Now groans my sickening heart, as still I view
 *Thy corse of livid hue; 30
 Now Indignation checks the feeble sigh,
 Or flashes through the tear that glistens in mine eye!

 Is this the land, where Genius ne'er in vain
 Pour'd forth his lofty strain? 35

 His weary limbs in lonely anguish lay'd.

     Light-hearted youth! aye, as he hastes along, 45
     He meditates the future song,
 How dauntless Ælla fray'd the Dacyan foe;
     And while the numbers flowing strong
     In eddies whirl, in surges throng,
 Exulting in the spirits' genial throe 50
 In tides of power his life-blood seems to flow.

And now his cheeks with deeper ardors flame,
 His eyes have glorious meanings, that declare
 More than the light of outward day shines there,
 A holier triumph and a sterner aim! 55
 Wings grow within him; and he soars above
 Or Bard's or Minstrel's lay of war or love.
 Friend to the friendless, to the sufferer health,
 He hears the widow's prayer, the good man's praise;
 To scenes of bliss transmutes his fancied wealth, 60
 And young and old shall now see happy days.
 On many a waste he bids trim gardens rise,
 Gives the blue sky to many a prisoner's eyes;
 And now in wrath he grasps the patriot steel,
 And her own iron rod he makes Oppression feel. 65

Filling the wide air with a rich perfume!
 For thee in vain all heavenly aspects smil'd;
 From the hard world brief respite could they win— 70
 The frost nipp'd sharp without, the canker prey'd within!
 Ah! where are fled the charms of vernal Grace,
 And Joy's wild gleams that lighten'd o'er thy face?
 Youth of tumultuous soul, and haggard eye!
 Thy wasted form, thy hurried steps I view, 75
 On thy wan forehead starts the lethal dew,
 And oh! the anguish of that shuddering sigh!

Such were the struggles of the gloomy hour,
 When Care, of wither'd brow,
 Prepar'd the poison's death-cold power: 80
 Already to thy lips was rais'd the bowl,
 When near thee stood Affection meek
 (Her bosom bare, and wildly pale her cheek)
 Thy sullen gaze she bade thee roll
 On scenes that well might melt thy soul; 85
 Thy native cot she flash'd upon thy view.

Clad in Nature's rich array,
 And bright in all her tender hues, 10
 Sweet Tree of Hope! thou loveliest child of Spring!
 How fair didst thou disclose thine early bloom,
 Loading the west winds with its soft perfume!
 And Fancy, elfin form of gorgeous wing,
 [And Fancy hovering round on shadowy wing, 1794.]
 On every blossom hung her fostering dew, 15
 That, changeful, wanton'd to the orient Day!
 But soon upon thy poor unshelter'd Head
 [Ah! soon, &c. 1794.]
 Did Penury her sickly mildew shed:

     Her silent agony of woe!
 Ah! dash the poison'd chalice from thy hand!

And thou hadst dashed it, at her soft command,
 But that Despair and Indignation rose, 95
 And told again the story of thy woes;
 Told the keen insult of the unfeeling heart,
 The dread dependence on the low-born mind;
 Told every pang, with which thy soul must smart,

 Grant me, like thee, the lyre to sound,
 Like thee with fire divine to glow;— 110
 But ah! when rage the waves of woe,
 Grant me with firmer breast to meet their hate,
 And soar beyond the storm with upright eye elate!

Ye woods! that wave o'er Avon's rocky steep,
 To Fancy's ear sweet is your murmuring deep! 115
 For here she loves the cypress wreath to weave;
 Watching with wistful eye, the saddening tints of eve.
 Here, far from men, amid this pathless grove,
 In solemn thought the Minstrel went to rove,
 Like star-beam on the slow sequester'd tide 120

And here, in Inspiration's eager hour,
 When most the big soul feels the mastering power,
     These wilds, these caverns roaming o'er,
     Round which the screaming sea-gulls soar, 125
 With wild unequal steps he pass'd along,
 Oft pouring on the winds a broken song:
 Anon, upon some rough rock's fearful brow
 Would pause abrupt—and gaze upon the waves below.

Poor Chatterton! he sorrows for thy fate 130
 Who would have prais'd and lov'd thee, ere too late.
 Poor Chatterton! farewell! of darkest hues
 This chaplet cast I on thy unshaped tomb;
 But dare no longer on the sad theme muse,
 Lest kindred woes persuade a kindred doom: 135
 For oh! big gall-drops, shook from Folly's wing,
 Have blacken'd the fair promise of my spring;
 And the stern Fate transpierc'd with viewless dart
 The last pale Hope that shiver'd at my heart!

Hence, gloomy thoughts! no more my soul shall dwell 140
 On joys that were! no more endure to weigh
 The shame and anguish of the evil day,
 Wisely forgetful! O'er the ocean swell
 Sublime of Hope I seek the cottag'd dell
 Where Virtue calm with careless step may stray; 145
 And, dancing to the moon-light roundelay,
 The wizard Passions weave an holy spell!

O Chatterton! that thou wert yet alive!
 Sure thou would'st spread the canvass to the gale,
 And love with us the tinkling team to drive 150
 O'er peaceful Freedom's undivided dale;
 And we, at sober eve, would round thee throng,
 Would hang, enraptur'd, on thy stately song,

A VISION

Auspicious Reverence! Hush all meaner song,
 Ere we the deep preluding strain have poured
 To the Great Father, only Rightful King,
 Eternal Father! King Omnipotent!
 To the Will Absolute, the One, the Good! 5
 The I AM, the Word, the Life, the Living God!

<sup>1</sup> First published, in its entirety, in Sibylline Leaves, 1817: included in 1828, 1829, and 1834. Two hundred and fifty-five lines were included in Book II of Joan of Arc, An Epic Poem, by Robert Southey, Bristol and London, 1796, 4°. The greater part of the remaining 212 lines were written in 1796, and formed part of an unpublished poem entitled The Progress of Liberty or The Vision of the Maid of Orleans, or Visions of the Maid of Orleans, or Visions of the Maid of Arc, or The Vision of the Patriot Maiden. (See letter to Poole, Dec. 13, and letter to J. Thelwall, Dec. 17, 1796, Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 192, 206. See, too, Cottle's Early Recollections, 1837, i. 230; and, for Lamb's criticism of a first draft of the poem, his letters to Coleridge, dated Jan. 5 and Feb. 12, 1797.) For a reprint of Joan of Arc. Book the Second (Preternatural Agency), see Cottle's Early Recollections, 1837, ii. 241-62.

The texts of 1828, 1829 (almost but not quite identical) vary slightly from that of the Sibylline Leaves, 1817, and, again, the text of 1834 varies from that of 1828 and 1829. These variants (on a proof-sheet of the edition of 1828) are in Coleridge's own handwriting, and afford convincing evidence that he did take some part in the preparation of the text of his poems for the last edition issued in his own lifetime.

Such symphony requires best instrument.
 Seize, then, my soul! from Freedom's trophied dome
 The Harp which hangeth high between the Shields
 Of Brutus and Leonidas! With that 10
 Strong music, that soliciting spell, force back
 Man's free and stirring spirit that lies entranced.
 For what is Freedom, but the unfettered use
 Of all the powers which God for use had given?
 But chiefly this, him First, him Last to view 15
 Through meaner powers and secondary things
 Effulgent, as through clouds that veil his blaze.
 For all that meets the bodily sense I deem Symbolical, one mighty alphabet
 For infant minds; and we in this low world 20
 Placed with our backs to bright Reality,
 That we may learn with young unwounded ken
 The substance from its shadow. Infinite Love,
 Whose latence is the plenitude of All,
 Thou with retracted beams, and self-eclipse 25
 Veiling, revealest thine eternal Sun.

But some there are who deem themselves most free
 When they within this gross and visible sphere
 Chain down the wingéd thought, scoffing ascent,
 Proud in their meanness: and themselves they cheat 30
 With noisy emptiness of learned phrase,
 Their subtle fluids, impacts, essences,
 Self-working tools, uncaused effects, and all
 Those blind Omniscients, those Almighty Slaves,
 Untenanting creation of its God. 35

 Of Brutus and Leonidas oft gives
 A fitful music to the breezy touch
 Of patriot spirits that demand their fame. 4°.

 Confirm'd thy strength, thy pinions fledged for flight
 Bursting this shell and leaving next thy nest
 Soon upward soaring shalt thou fix intense

But Properties are God: the naked mass
 (If mass there be, fantastic guess or ghost)
 Acts only by its inactivity.
 Here we pause humbly. Others boldlier think
 That as one body seems the aggregate 40
 Of atoms numberless, each organized;
 So by a strange and dim similitude
 Infinite myriads of self-conscious minds
 Are one all-conscious Spirit, which informs
 With absolute ubiquity of thought 45
 (His one eternal self-affirming act!)
 All his involv'd Monads, that yet seem
 With various province and apt agency
 Each to pursue its own self-centering end.
 Some nurse the infant diamond in the mine; 50
 Some roll the genial juices through the oak;
 Some drive the mutinous clouds to clash in air,
 And rushing on the storm with whirlwind speed,
 Yoke the red lightnings to their volleying car.
 Thus these pursue their never-varying course, 55
 No eddy in their stream. Others, more wild,
 With complex interests weaving human fates,
 Duteous or proud, alike obedient all,
 Evolve the process of eternal good.

And what if some rebellious, o'er dark realms 60
 Arrogate power? yet these train up to God,
 And on the rude eye, unconfirmed for day,
 Flash meteor-lights better than total gloom.
 As ere from Lieule-Oaive's vapoury head
 The Laplander beholds the far-off Sun 65
 Dart his slant beam on unobeying snows,
 While yet the stern and solitary Night
 Brooks no alternate sway, the Boreal Morn

 Thinking himself those happy spirits shall join

 That first unsensualises the dark mind,
 Giving it new delights; and bids it swell
 With wild activity; and peopling air,
 By obscure fears of Beings invisible,
 Emancipates it from the grosser thrall 85
 Of the present impulse, teaching Self-control,
 Till Superstition with unconscious hand

 Nor yet without permitted power impressed,
 I deem those legends terrible, with which 90

The other great but malignant spirit a nameless female; she dwells under the sea in a great house where she can detain in captivity all the animals of the ocean by her magic power. When a dearth befalls the Greenlanders, an Angekok or magician must undertake a journey thither: he passes through the kingdom of souls, over an horrible abyss into the palace of this phantom, and by his enchantments causes the captive creatures to ascend directly to the surface of the ocean. See Crantz, History of Greenland, vol. i. 206.

Till from Bethabrah northward, heavenly Truth
 With gradual steps, winning her difficult way,
 Transfer their rude Faith perfected and pure. 125

If there be Beings of higher class than Man,
 I deem no nobler province they possess,
 Than by disposal of apt circumstance
 To rear up kingdoms: and the deeds they prompt, 130
 Distinguishing from mortal agency,
 They choose their human ministers from such states
 As still the Epic song half fears to name,
 Repelled from all the minstrelsies that strike
 The palace-roof and soothe the monarch's pride. 135
 And such, perhaps, the Spirit, who (if words Witnessed by answering deeds may claim our faith)

130 foll. To rear some realm with patient discipline,
 Aye bidding PAIN, dark ERROR's uncouth child,
 Blameless Parenticide! his snakey scourge 125
 Lift fierce against his Mother! Thus they make Themselves probationary, and denied

 Confess'd to view by preternatural deed
 To o'erwhelm the will, save on some fated day 130
 Headstrong, or with petition'd might from God.
 And such perhaps the guardian Power whose ken
 Still dwelt on France. He from the invisible World
 Burst on the MAIDEN's eye, impregning Air
 With Voices and strange Shapes, illusions apt 135
 Shadowy of Truth. [And first a landscape rose
 More wild and waste and desolate, than where
 The white bear drifting on a field of ice
 Howls to her sunder'd cubs with piteous rage
 And savage agony.] Mid the drear scene 140
 A craggy mass uprear'd its misty brow,
 Untouch'd by breath of Spring, unwont to know
 Red Summer's influence, or the chearful face
 Of Autumn; yet its fragments many and huge
 Astounded ocean with the dreadful dance 145
 Of whirlpools numberless, absorbing oft
 The blameless fisher at his perilous toil. 40.

Note—Lines 148–223 of the Second Book of Joan of Arc are by Southey. Coleridge's unpublished poem of 1796 (The Visions of the Maid of Orleans) begins at line 127 of the text, ending at line 277. The remaining portion of the Destiny of Nations is taken from lines contributed to the Second Book. Lines 136–40 of variant 130 foll. form the concluding fragment of the Destiny of Nations. Lines 141–3 of the variant are by Southey. (See his Preface to Joan of Arc, 1796, p. vi.) The remaining lines of the variant were never reprinted.

132 human] mortal Sibylline Leaves (correction made in Errata, p. [xii]).

Held commune with that warrior-maid of France
 Who scourged the Invader. From her infant days,
 With Wisdom, mother of retired thoughts, 140
 Her soul had dwelt; and she was quick to mark
 The good and evil thing, in human lore
 Undisciplined. For lowly was her birth,
 And Heaven had doomed her early years to toil
 That pure from Tyranny's least deed, herself 145
 Unfeared by Fellow-natures, she might wait
 On the poor labouring man with kindly looks,
 And minister refreshment to the tired
 Way-wanderer, when along the rough-hewn bench
 The sweltry man had stretched him, and aloft 150
 Vacantly watched the rudely-pictured board
 Which on the Mulberry-bough with welcome creak
 Swung to the pleasant breeze. Here, too, the Maid
 Learnt more than Schools could teach: Man's shifting mind,
 His vices and his sorrows! And full oft 155
 At tales of cruel wrong and strange distress
 Had wept and shivered. To the tottering Eld
 Still as a daughter would she run: she placed
 His cold limbs at the sunny door, and loved
 To hear him story, in his garrulous sort, 160
 Of his eventful years, all come and gone.

So twenty seasons past. The Virgin's form,
 Active and tall, nor Sloth nor Luxury
 Had shrunk or paled. Her front sublime and broad,
 Her flexile eye-brows wildly haired and low, 165
 And her full eye, now bright, now unillumed,
 Spake more than Woman's thought; and all her face
 Was moulded to such features as declared
 That Pity there had oft and strongly worked,
 And sometimes Indignation. Bold her mien, 170
 And like an haughty huntress of the woods
 She moved: yet sure she was a gentle maid!
 And in each motion her most innocent soul
 Beamed forth so brightly, that who saw would say
 Guilt was a thing impossible in her! 175
 Nor idly would have said—for she had lived
 In this bad World, as in a place of Tombs,
 And touched not the pollutions of the Dead.

'Twas the cold season when the Rustic's eye
 From the drear desolate whiteness of his fields 180
 Rolls for relief to watch the skiey tints
 And clouds slow-varying their huge imagery;
 When now, as she was wont, the healthful Maid
 Had left her pallet ere one beam of day
 Slanted the fog-smoke. She went forth alone 185
 Urged by the indwelling angel-guide, that oft,
 With dim inexplicable sympathies
 Disquieting the heart, shapes out Man's course
 To the predoomed adventure. Now the ascent
 She climbs of that steep upland, on whose top 190
 The Pilgrim-man, who long since eve had watched
 The alien shine of unconcerning stars,
 Shouts to himself, there first the Abbey-lights
 Seen in Neufchâtel's vale; now slopes adown
 The winding sheep-track vale-ward: when, behold 195
 In the first entrance of the level road
 An unattended team! The foremost horse
 Lay with stretched limbs; the others, yet alive
 But stiff and cold, stood motionless, their manes
 Hoar with the frozen night-dews. Dismally 200
 The dark-red dawn now glimmered; but its gleams
 Disclosed no face of man. The maiden paused,
 Then hailed who might be near. No voice replied.
 From the thwart wain at length there reached her ear
 A sound so feeble that it almost seemed 205
 Distant: and feebly, with slow effort pushed,
 A miserable man crept forth: his limbs
 The silent frost had eat, scathing like fire.
 Faint on the shafts he rested. She, meantime,
 Saw crowded close beneath the coverture 210
 A mother and her children—lifeless all,
 Yet lovely! not a lineament was marred—
 Death had put on so slumber-like a form!
 It was a piteous sight; and one, a babe,
 The crisp milk frozen on its innocent lips, 215
 Lay on the woman's arm, its little hand
 Stretched on her bosom.

Mutely questioning;
 The Maid gazed wildly at the living wretch.

He, his head feebly turning, on the group
 Looked with a vacant stare, and his eye spoke 220
 The drowsy calm that steals on worn-out anguish.
 She shuddered; but, each vainer pang subdued,
 Quick disentangling from the foremost horse
 The rustic bands, with difficulty and toil
 The stiff cramped team forced homeward. There arrived, 225
 Anxiously tends him she with healing herbs,
 And weeps and prays—but the numb power of Death
 Spreads o'er his limbs; and ere the noon-tide hour,
 The hovering spirits of his Wife and Babes
 Hail him immortal! Yet amid his pangs, 230
 With interruptions long from ghastly throes,
 His voice had faltered out this simple tale.

The Village, where he dwelt an husbandman,
 By sudden inroad had been seized and fired
 Late on the yester-evening. With his wife 235
 And little ones he hurried his escape.
 They saw the neighbouring hamlets flame, they heard
 Up roar and shrieks! and terror-struck drove on Through unfrequented roads, a weary way!
 But saw nor house nor cottage. All had quenched 240
 Their evening hearth-fire: for the alarm had spread.
 The air clipt keen, the night was fanged with frost,
 And they provisionless! The weeping wife
 Ill hushed her children's moans; and still they moaned,
 Till Fright and Cold and Hunger drank their life. 245
 They closed their eyes in sleep, nor knew 'twas Death.
 He only, lashing his o'er-wearied team,
 Gained a sad respite, till beside the base
 Of the high hill his foremost horse dropped dead.
 Then hopeless, strengthless, sick for lack of food, 250
 He crept beneath the coverture, entranced,
 Till wakened by the maiden.—Such his tale.

Ah! suffering to the height of what was suffered,
 Stung with too keen a sympathy, the Maid
 Brooded with moving lips, mute, startful, dark! 255
 And now her flushed tumultuous features shot
 Such strange vivacity, as fires the eye
 Of Misery fancy-crazed! and now once more
 Naked, and void, and fixed, and all within
 The unquiet silence of confused thought 260

And shapeless feelings. For a mighty hand
 Was strong upon her, till in the heat of soul
 To the high hill-top tracing back her steps,
 Aside the beacon, up whose smouldered stones
 The tender ivy-trails crept thinly, there, 265
 Unconscious of the driving element,
 Yea, swallowed up in the ominous dream, she sate
 Ghastly as broad-eyed Slumber! a dim anguish
 Breathed from her look! and still with pant and sob,
 Inly she toiled to flee, and still subdued, 270
 Felt an inevitable Presence near.

Thus as she toiled in troublous ecstasy,
 A horror of great darkness wrapt her round,
 And a voice uttered forth unearthly tones,
 Calming her soul,—‘O Thou of the Most High 275
 Chosen, whom all the perfected in Heaven
 Behold expectant——’

[The following fragments were intended to form part of the poem when finished.]

330 calmest] calmy 4°.

At length awakening slow, she gazed around :
 And through a mist, the relict of that trance 340
 Still thinning as she gazed, an Isle appeared,
 Its high, o'er-hanging, white, broad-breasted cliffs,
 Glassed on the subject ocean. A vast plain
 Stretched opposite, where ever and anon
 The plough-man following sad his meagre team 345
 Turned up fresh sculls unstartled, and the bones
 Of fierce hate-breathing combatants, who there
 All mingled lay beneath the common earth,
 Death's gloomy reconciliation! O'er the fields
 Stept a fair Form, repairing all she might, 350
 Her temples olive-wreathed; and where she trod,
 Fresh flowerets rose, and many a foodful herb.
 But wan her cheek, her footsteps insecure,
 And anxious pleasure beamed in her faint eye,
 As she had newly left a couch of pain, 355
 Pale Convalescent! (Yet some time to rule
 With power exclusive o'er the willing world,
 That blessed prophetic mandate then fulfilled—
 Peace be on Earth!) An happy while, but brief,
 She seemed to wander with assiduous feet, 360
 And healed the recent harm of chill and blight,
 And nursed each plant that fair and virtuous grew.

But soon a deep precursive sound moaned hollow:
 Black rose the clouds, and now, (as in a dream)
 Their reddening shapes, transformed to Warrior-hosts, 365
 Coursed o'er the sky, and battled in mid-air.
 Nor did not the large blood-drops fall from Heaven
 Portentous! while aloft were seen to float,
 Like hideous features looming on the mist,
 Wan stains of ominous light! Resigned, yet sad, 370
 The fair Form bowed her olive-crownéd brow,
 Then o'er the plain with oft-reverted eye

339-40 But lo! no more was seen the ice-pil'd mount

Fled till a place of Tombs she reached, and there
 Within a ruined Sepulchre obscure
 Found hiding-place.

The delegated Maid 375

Gazed through her tears, then in sad tones exclaimed;—
 ‘Thou mild-eyed Form! wherefore, ah! wherefore fled?
 The Power of Justice like a name all light,
 Shone from thy brow; but all they, who unblamed
 Dwelt in thy dwellings, call thee Happiness. 380
 Ah! why, uninjured and unprofited,
 Should multitudes against their brethren rush?
 Why sow they guilt, still reaping misery?
 Lenient of care, thy songs, O Peace! are sweet,<sup>1</sup>
 As after showers the perfumed gale of eve, 385
 That flings the cool drops on a feverous cheek;
 And gay thy grassy altar piled with fruits.
 But boasts the shrine of Dæmon War one charm,<sup>2</sup>
 Save that with many an orgie strange and foul,<sup>3</sup>
 Dancing around with interwoven arms, 390
 The Maniac Suicide and Giant Murder
 Exult in their fierce union! I am sad,
 And know not why the simple peasants crowd
 Beneath the Chieftains’ standard!’ Thus the Maid.

To her the tutelary Spirit said: 395
 ‘When Luxury and Lust’s exhausted stores
 No more can rouse the appetites of kings;
 When the low flattery of their reptile lords
 Falls flat and heavy on the accustomed ear;
 When eunuchs sing, and fools buffoonery make, 400
 And dancers writhe their harlot-limbs in vain;
 Then War and all its dread vicissitudes
 Pleasingly agitate their stagnant hearts;

Sweet are thy Songs, O Peace! lenient of care.

Its hopes, its fears, its victories, its defeats,
 Insipid Royalty's keen condiment! 405
Therefore uninjured and unprofited
 (Victims at once and executioners),
 The congregated Husbandmen lay waste
 The vineyard and the harvest. As along
 The Bothnic coast, or southward of the Line, 410
 Though hushed the winds and cloudless the high noon,
 Yet if Leviathan, weary of ease,
 In sports unwieldy toss his island-bulk,
 Ocean behind him billows, and before
 A storm of waves breaks foamy on the strand. 415
 And hence, for times and seasons bloody and dark,
 Short Peace shall skin the wounds of causeless War,
 And War, his strained sinews knit anew,
 Still violate the unfinished works of Peace.
 But yonder look! for more demands thy view! 420
 He said: and straightway from the opposite Isle
 A vapour sailed, as when a cloud, exhaled
 From Egypt's fields that steam hot pestilence,
 Travels the sky for many a trackless league,
 Till o'er some death-doomed land, distant in vain, 425
 It broods incumbent. Forthwith from the plain,
 Facing the Isle, a brighter cloud arose,
 And steered its course which way the vapour went.

The Maiden paused, musing what this might mean.

Between lines 421 and 423 of the text, the text of Joan of Arc, Book II, inserts:—

A Vapor rose, pierc'd by the MAIDEN's eye.
 Guiding its course OPPRESSION sate within,*
 With terror pale and rage, yet laugh'd at times
 Musing on Vengeance: trembled in his hand
 A Sceptre fiercely-grasp'd. O'er Ocean westward
 The Vapor sail'd 4°.

* These images imageless, these Small-Capitals constituting themselves Personifications, I despised even at that time; but was forced to introduce them, to preserve the connection with the machinery of the Poem, previously adopted by Southey. S. T. C.

After 429 of the text, the text of Joan of Arc inserts:—

ENVY sate guiding—ENVY, hag-abhorr'd!
 Like JUSTICE mask'd, and doom'd to aid the fight 410
 Victorious 'gainst oppression. Hush'd awhile 4°.

[These lines were assigned by Coleridge to Southey.]

But long time passed not, ere that brighter cloud 430
 Returned more bright; along the plain it swept;
 And soon from forth its bursting sides emerged
 A dazzling form, broad-bosomed, bold of eye,
 And wild her hair, save where with laurels bound.
 Not more majestic stood the healing God,<sup>1</sup> 435
 When from his bow the arrow sped that slew
 Huge Python. Shriek'd Ambition's giant throng,
 And with them hissed the locust-fiends that crawled
 And glittered in Corruption's slimy track.
 Great was their wrath, for short they knew their reign; 440
 And such commotion made they, and uproar,
 As when the mad Tornado bellows through
 The guilty islands of the western main,
 What time departing from their native shores,<sup>2</sup>
 Eboe, or Koromantyn's plain of palms, 445
 The infuriate spirits of the murdered make
 Fierce merriment, and vengeance ask of Heaven.
 Warmed with new influence, the unwholesome plain
 Sent up its foulest fogs to meet the morn:
 The Sun that rose on Freedom, rose in Blood! 450

'Maiden beloved, and Delegate of Heaven!
 (To her the tutelary Spirit said)
 Soon shall the Morning struggle into Day,
 The stormy Morning into cloudless Noon.
 Much hast thou seen, nor all canst understand— 455
 But this be thy best omen—Save thy Country!
 Thus saying, from the answering Maid he passed,
 And with him disappeared the heavenly Vision.

'Glory to Thee, Father of Earth and Heaven!
 All-conscious Presence of the Universe! 460

LITERAL TRANSLATION.

Leaving the gates of Darkness, O Death! hasten thou to a Race yoked to Misery! Thou wilt not be received with lacerations of Cheeks, nor with funereal ululation, but with circling Dances and the joy of Songs. Thou art terrible indeed, yet thou dwellest with LIBERTY, stern GENIUS! Borne on thy dark pinions over the swelling of Ocean they return to their native country. There by the side of fountains beneath Citron groves, the Lovers tell to their Beloved, what horrors, being Men, they had endured from Men.

<sup>1</sup> Tho' these Lines may bear a sane sense, yet they are easily, and more naturally interpreted with a very false and dangerous one. But I was at that time one of the Mongrels, the Josephidites [Josephides = the Son of Joseph], a proper name of distinction from those who believe in, as well as believe Christ the only begotten Son of the Living God before all Time. MS. Note by S. T. O.

Fit instruments and best, of perfect end:
 Glory to Thee, Father of Earth and Heaven!

And first a landscape rose 470

More wild and waste and desolate than where
 The white bear, drifting on a field of ice,
 Howls to her sundered cubs with piteous rage
 And savage agony.

FRAGMENT

From an unpublished poem.

THE early Year's fast-flying vapours stray
 In shadowing trains across the orb of day:
 And we, poor Insects of a few short hours,
     Deem it a world of Gloom.
 Were it not better hope a nobler doom, 5
 Proud to believe that with more active powers
     On rapid many-coloured wing
     We thro' one bright perpetual Spring
 Shall hover round the fruits and flowers,
 Screen'd by those clouds and cherish'd by those showers! 10

 These are but flatteries of the faithless year.
 Perchance, escaped its unknown polar cave,
 Even now the keen North-East is on its way.
 Flower that must perish! shall I liken thee
 To some sweet girl of too too rapid growth 10
 Nipp'd by consumption mid untimely charms?
 Or to Bristowa's bard,<sup>1</sup> the wondrous boy!
 An amaranth, which earth scarce seem'd to own,
 Till disappointment came, and pelting wrong
 Beat it to earth? or with indignant grief 15
 Shall I compare thee to poor Poland's hope,
 Bright flower of hope killed in the opening bud?
 Farewell, sweet blossom! better fate be thine
 And mock my boding! Dim similitudes
 Weaving in moral strains, I've stolen one hour 20
 From anxious Self, Life's cruel taskmaster!
 And the warm wooings of this sunny day
 Tremble along my frame and harmonize
 The attempered organ, that even saddest thoughts
 Mix with some sweet sensations, like harsh tunes 25
 Played deftly on a soft-toned instrument.

But, tender blossom, why so pale? 5

Such the wan lustre Sickness wears
 When Health's first feeble beam appears; 10
 So languid are the smiles that seek
 To settle on the care-worn cheek,

When timorous Hope the head uprears,
 Still drooping and still moist with tears,

 Than (Comfort's riper season come)
 Are full-blown joys and Pleasure's gaudy bloom. 20

VERSES<sup>1</sup>

ADDRESSED TO J. HORNE TOOKE AND THE COMPANY WHO MET ON JUNE 28TH, 1796, TO CELEBRATE HIS POLL AT THE WEST-MINSTER ELECTION

BRITONS! when last ye met, with distant streak
 So faintly promis'd the pale Dawn to break;
 So dim it stain'd the precincts of the Sky
 E'en Expectation gaz'd with doubtful Eye.
 But now such fair Varieties of Light 5
 Overtake the heavy sailing Clouds of Night;
 Th' Horizon kindles with so rich a red,
 That tho' the Sun still hides his glorious head
 'Th' impatient Matin-bird, assur'd of Day,
 Leaves his low nest to meet its earliest ray; 10
 Loud the sweet song of Gratulation sings,
 And high in air claps his rejoicing wings!
 Patriot and Sage! whose breeze-like Spirit first
 The lazy mists of Pedantry dispers'd

<sup>1</sup> First printed in the Transactions of the Philobiblon Society. First published in P. W., 1893. The verses (without the title) were sent by Coleridge in a letter to the Rev. J. P. Estlin, dated July 4, [1796].

(Mists in which Superstition's pigmy band Seem'd Giant Forms, the Genii of the Land!),
Thy struggles soon shall wak'ning Britain bless,
And Truth and Freedom hail thy wish'd success.
Yes Tooke! tho' foul Corruption's wolfish throng
Outmalice Calumny's imposthum'd Tongue,
Thy Country's noblest and determin'd Choice,
Soon shalt thou thrill the Senate with thy voice;
With gradual Dawn bid Error's phantoms flit,
Or wither with the lightning's flash of Wit;
Or with sublimer mien and tones more deep,
Charm sworded Justice from mysterious Sleep,
'By violated Freedom's loud Lament,
Her Lamps extinguish'd and her Temple rent;
By the forc'd tears her captive Martyrs shed;
By each pale Orphan's feeble cry for bread;
By ravag'd Belgium's corse-impeded Flood,
And Vendee steaming still with brothers' blood!'
And if amid the strong impassion'd Tale,
Thy Tongue should falter and thy Lips turn pale;
If transient Darkness film thy awful Eye,
And thy tir'd Bosom struggle with a sigh:
Science and Freedom shall demand to hear
Who practis'd on a Life so doubly dear;
Infus'd the unwholesome anguish drop by drop,
Pois'ning the sacred stream they could not stop!
Shall bid thee with recover'd strength relate
How dark and deadly is a Coward's Hate:
What seeds of death by wan Confinement sown,
When Prison-echoes mock'd Disease's groan!
Shall bid th' indignant Father flash dismay,
And drag the unnatural Villain into Day
Who<sup>1</sup> to the sports of his flesh'd Ruffians left
Two lovely Mourners of their Sire bereft!
'Twas wrong, like this, which Rome's first Consul bore,
So by th' insulted Female's name he swore Ruin (and rais'd her reeking dagger high)
Not to the Tyrants but the Tyranny!

ON A LATE CONNUBIAL RUPTURE IN HIGH
LIFE<sup>1</sup>

[PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES]

I SIGH, fair injur'd stranger! for thy fate;

But what shall sighs avail thee? thy poor heart,
'Mid all the 'pomp and circumstance' of state,
Shivers in nakedness. Unbidden, start

Sad recollections of Hope's garish dream,

That shaped a seraph form, and named it Love,
Its hues gay-varying, as the orient beam
Varies the neck of Cytherea's dove.

To one soft accent of domestic joy

Poor are the shouts that shake the high-arch'd dome; 10
Those plaudits that thy public path annoy,
Alas! they tell thee—Thou'rt a wretch at home!

O then retire, and weep! Their very woesSolace the guiltless. Drop the pearly flood

On thy sweet infant, as the full-blown rose,

Surcharg'd with dew, bends o'er its neighbouring bud. 15

And ah! that Truth some holy spell might lend

To lure thy Wanderer from the Syren's power;

Then bid your souls inseparably blend

Like two bright dew-drops meeting in a flower.

SONNET<sup>2</sup>

TO A FRIEND WHO ASKED, HOW I FELT WHEN THE NURSE
FIRST PRESENTED MY INFANT TO ME

CHARLES! my slow heart was only sad, when first
I scann'd that face of feeble infancy:

For dimly on my thoughtful spirit burst

All I had been, and all my child might be!

But when I saw it on its mother's arm,

And hanging at her bosom (she the while Bent o'er its features with a tearful smile)

Then I was thrill'd and melted, and most warm
Impress'd a father's kiss: and all beguil'd

Of dark remembrance and presageful fear,

10

I seem'd to see an angel-form appear—

'Twas even thine, belovéd woman mild!

So for the mother's sake the child was dear,
And dearer was the mother for the child.

[TO CHARLES LLOYD]

THE piteous sobs that choke the Virgin's breath
 For him, the fair betrothéd Youth, who lies
 Cold in the narrow dwelling, or the cries
 With which a Mother wails her darling's death,
 These from our nature's common impulse spring, 5
 Unblam'd, unprais'd; but o'er the piléd earth
 Which hides the sheeted corse of grey-hair'd Worth,
 If droops the soaring Youth with slacken'd wing;
 If he recall in saddest minstrelsy
 Each tenderness bestow'd, each truth imprest, 10
 Such grief is Reason, Virtue, Piety!
 And from the Almighty Father shall descend
 Comforts on his late evening, whose young breast
 Mourns with no transient love the Agéd Friend.

TO A YOUNG FRIEND <sup>2</sup>

ON HIS PROPOSING TO DOMESTICATE WITH THE AUTHOR

Composed in 1796

A MOUNT, not wearisome and bare and steep,
 But a green mountain variously up-piled,
 Where o'er the jutting rocks soft mosses creep,
 Or colour'd lichens with slow oozing weep;
 Where cypress and the darker yew start wild; 5
 And, 'mid the summer torrent's gentle dash
 Dance brighten'd the red clusters of the ash;
 Beneath whose boughs, by those still sounds beguil'd,
 Calm Pensiveness might muse herself to sleep;
 Till haply startled by some fleecy dam, 10

That rustling on the bushy cliff above
 With melancholy bleat of anxious love,
     Made meek enquiry for her wandering lamb :
 Such a green mountain 'twere most sweet to climb,
 E'en while the bosom ach'd with loneliness— 15
 How more than sweet, if some dear friend should bless
     The adventurous toil, and up the path sublime
 Now lead, now follow : the glad landscape round,
 Wide and more wide, increasing without bound !

O then 'twere loveliest sympathy, to mark 20
 The berries of the half-uprooted ash
 Dripping and bright ; and list the torrent's dash,—
     Beneath the cypress, or the yew more dark,
 Seated at ease, on some smooth mossy rock ;
 In social silence now, and now to unlock 25
 The treasur'd heart ; arm linked in friendly arm,
 Save if the one, his muse's witching charm
 Muttering brow-bent, at unwatch'd distance lag ;
     Till high o'er head his beckoning friend appears,
 And from the forehead of the topmost crag 30
     Shouts eagerly : for haply there uprears
 That shadowing Pine its old romantic limbs,
     Which latest shall detain the enamour'd sight
 Seen from below, when eve the valley dims,
     Tinged yellow with the rich departing light ; 35
 And haply, bason'd in some unsunn'd cleft,
 A beauteous spring, the rock's collected tears,
 Sleeps shelter'd there, scarce wrinkled by the gale !
     Together thus, the world's vain turmoil left,
 Stretch'd on the crag, and shadow'd by the pine, 40
     And bending o'er the clear delicious fount,
 Ah ! dearest youth ! it were a lot divine
 To cheat our noons in moralising mood,
 While west-winds fann'd our temples toil-bedew'd :
     Then downwards slope, oft pausing, from the mount, 45
 To some lone mansion, in some woody dale,
 Where smiling with blue eye, Domestic Bliss
 Gives this the Husband's, that the Brother's kiss !

 And many a fancy-blest and holy sod 55
 Where Inspiration, his diviner strains
 Low-murmuring, lay; and starting from the rock's
 Stiff evergreens, (whose spreading foliage mocks
 Want's barren soil, and the bleak frosts of age,
 And Bigotry's mad fire-invoking rage!) 60
 O meek retiring spirit! we will climb,
 Cheering and cheered, this lovely hill sublime;
 And from the stirring world up-lifted high
 (Whose noises, faintly wafted on the wind,
 To quiet musings shall attune the mind, 65
 And oft the melancholy theme supply),
 There, while the prospect through the gazing eye
 Pours all its healthful greenness on the soul,
 We'll smile at wealth, and learn to smile at fame,
 Our hopes, our knowledge, and our joys the same, 70
 As neighbouring fountains image each the whole:
 Then when the mind hath drunk its fill of truth
 We'll discipline the heart to pure delight,
 Rekindling sober joy's domestic flame.
 They whom I love shall love thee, honour'd youth! 75
 Now may Heaven realise this vision bright!

The flocking flesh-birds scream'd ! Then, while thy heart 10

Yes—thou wert plung'd, but with forgetful hand
 Held, as by Thetis erst her warrior son : 10
 And with those recreant unbaptizèd heels
 Thou'rt flying from thy bounden ministeries—
 So sore it seems and burthensome a task
 To weave unwithering flowers! But take thou heed:
 For thou art vulnerable, wild-eyed boy, 15
 And I have arrows<sup>1</sup> mystically dipped
 Such as may stop thy speed. Is thy Burns dead?
 And shall he die unwept, and sink to earth

Oh! for shame return! 25
 On a bleak rock, midway the Aonian mount,
 There stands a lone and melancholy tree,
 Whose agéd branches to the midnight blast
 Make solemn music: pluck its darkest bough,
 Ere yet the unwholesome night-dew be exhaled, 30
 And weeping wreath it round thy Poet's tomb.
 Then in the outskirts, where pollutions grow,
 Pick the rank henbane and the dusky flowers
 Of night-shade, or its red and tempting fruit,
 These with stopped nostril and glove-guarded hand 35
 Knit in nice intertexture, so to twine,
 The illustrious brow of Scotch Nobility!

ARGUMENT

THE Ode<sup>2</sup> commences with an address to the Divine Providence that regulates into one vast harmony all the events of time, however calamitous some of them may appear to mortals. The second Strophe calls on men to suspend their private joys and sorrows, and devote them for a while to the cause of human nature in general. The first Epode speaks of the Empress of Russia, who died of an apoplexy on the 17th of November 1796; having just concluded a subsidiary treaty with the Kings combined against France. The first and second Antistrophe describe the Image of the Departing Year, etc., as in a vision. The second Epode prophesies, in anguish of spirit, the downfall of this country.

SPIRIT who sweepst the wild Harp of Time!

It is most hard, with an untroubled ear

Thy dark inwoven harmonies to hear!

Yet, mine eye fix'd on Heaven's unchanging clime

Long had I listen'd, free from mortal fear,

With inward stillness, and a bowéd mind;

When lo! its folds far waving on the wind,

 Yet still I gasp'd and reel'd with dread.
 And ever, when the dream of night

 Cold sweat-drops gather on my limbs;
 My ears throb hot; my eye-balls start;
 My brain with horrid tumult swims;
 Wild is the tempest of my heart;

 Imitates the toil of death!
 No stranger agony confounds.
 The Soldier on the war-field spread,
 When all foredone with toil and wounds,

<sup>1</sup> 'Disclaim'd of Heaven !'—The Poet from having considered the peculiar advantages, which this country has enjoyed, passes in rapid transition to the uses, which we have made of these advantages. We have been preserved by our insular situation, from suffering the actual horrors of War ourselves, and we have shewn our gratitude to Providence for this immunity by our eagerness to spread those horrors over nations less happily situated. In the midst of plenty and safety we have raised or joined the yell for famine and blood. Of the one hundred and seven last years, fifty have been years of War. Such wickedness cannot pass unpunished. We have been proud and confident in our alliances and our fleets—but God has prepared the canker-worm, and will smite the gourds of our pride. 'Art thou better than populous No, that was situate among the rivers, that had the waters round about it, whose rampart was the Sea? Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength and it was infinite : Put and Lubim were her helpers. Yet she was carried away, she went into captivity : and they cast lots for her honourable men, and all her great men were bound in chains. Thou also shalt be drunken : all thy strongholds shall be like fig trees with the first ripe figs ; if they be shaken, they shall even fall into the mouth of the eater. Thou hast multiplied thy merchants above the stars of heaven. Thy crowned are as the locusts ; and thy captains as the great grasshoppers which camp in the hedges in the cool-day ; but when the Sun ariseth they flee away, and their place is not known where they are. There is no healing of thy bruise ; thy wound is grievous : all, that hear the report of thee, shall clap hands over thee : for upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually ?' Nahum, chap. iii. 4<sup>o</sup>, 1797, 1803.

THE RAVEN<sup>1</sup>

A CHRISTMAS TALE, TOLD BY A SCHOOL-BOY TO HIS LITTLE BROTHERS AND SISTERS

UNDERNEATH an old oak tree
There was of swine a huge company,
That grunted as they crunched the mast:
For that was ripe, and fell full fast.
Then they trotted away, for the wind grew high: 5
One acorn they left, and no more might you spy.
Next came a Raven, that liked not such folly:
He belonged, they did say, to the witch Melancholy!
Blacker was he than blackest jet,
Flew low in the rain, and his feathers not wet. 10

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Post, March 10, 1798 (with an introductory letter, vide infra): included (with the letter, and except line 15 the same text) in the Annual Anthology, 1800, in Sibylline Leaves, 1817 (pp. vi-viii), 1828, 1829, and 1834.

[To the editor of the Morning Post.]

'Sir,—I am not absolutely certain that the following Poem was written by EDMUND SPENSER, and found by an Angler buried in a fishing-box :—

'Under the foot of Mole, that mountain hoar,
Mid the green alders, by the Mulla's shore.'

But a learned Antiquarian of my acquaintance has given it as his opinion that it resembles SPENSER's minor Poems as nearly as Vortigern and Rowena the Tragedies of WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.—The Poem must be read in recitative, in the same manner as the Aegloga Secunda of the Shepherd's Calendar.

CUDDY.'

M. P., An. Anth.

The Raven—Title] 'A Christmas Tale,' &c., was first prefixed in S. L. 1817. The letter introduced the poem in the Morning Post. In the Annual Anthology the 'Letter' is headed 'The Raven'. Lamb in a letter to Coleridge, dated Feb. 5, 1797, alludes to this poem as 'Your Dream'.

1-8 Under the arms of a goodly oak-tree
There was of Swine a large company.
They were making a rude repast,
Grunting as they crunch'd the mast.
Then they trotted away: for the wind blew high— 5
One acorn they left, ne more mote you spy.
Next came a Raven, who lik'd not such folly:
He belong'd, I believe, to the witch MELANCHOLY!

He picked up the acorn and buried it straight
By the side of a river both deep and great.

Where then did the Raven go?

He went high and low,

Over hill, over dale, did the black Raven go.

15

Many Autumns, many Springs

Travelled<sup>1</sup> he with wandering wings:

Many Summers, many Winters—

I can't tell half his adventures.

At length he came back, and with him a She,

20

And the acorn was grown to a tall oak tree.

They built them a nest in the topmost bough,

And young ones they had, and were happy enow.

But soon came a Woodman in leathern guise,

His brow, like a pent-house, hung over his eyes.

25

He'd an axe in his hand, not a word he spoke,

But with many a hem! and a sturdy stroke,

At length he brought down the poor Raven's own oak.

His young ones were killed; for they could not depart,

And their mother did die of a broken heart.

30

The boughs from the trunk the Woodman did sever;

And they floated it down on the course of the river.

They sawed it in planks, and its bark they did strip,

And with this tree and others they made a good ship.

The ship, it was launched; but in sight of the land

35

Such a storm there did rise as no ship could withstand.

It bulged on a rock, and the waves rush'd in fast:

Round and round flew the raven, and cawed to the blast.

<sup>1</sup> Seventeen or eighteen years ago an artist of some celebrity was so pleased with this doggerel that he amused himself with the thought of making a Child's Picture Book of it; but he could not hit on a picture for these four lines. And haply views his tottering little ones
 Embrace those agéd knees and climb that lap,
 On which first kneeling his own infancy
 Lisp'd its brief prayer. Such, O my earliest Friend! 10
 Thy lot, and such thy brothers too enjoy.
 At distance did ye climb Life's upland road,
 Yet cheer'd and cheering: now fraternal love
 Hath drawn you to one centre. Be your days
 Holy, and blest and blessing may ye live!

To me the Eternal Wisdom hath dispens'd 15
 A different fortune and more different mind—
 Me from the spot where first I sprang to light
 Too soon transplanted, ere my soul had fix'd
 Its first domestic loves; and hence through life
 Chasing chance-started friendships. A brief while 20
 Some have preserv'd me from life's pelting ills;
 But, like a tree with leaves of feeble stem,
 If the clouds lasted, and a sudden breeze
 Ruffled the boughs, they on my head at once
 Dropped the collected shower; and some most false, 25
 False and fair-foliag'd as the Manchineel,
 Have tempted me to slumber in their shade
 E'en mid the storm; then breathing subtlest damps,
 Mix'd their own venom with the rain from Heaven,
 That I woke poison'd! But, all praise to Him 30
 Who gives us all things, more have yielded me
 Permanent shelter; and beside one Friend,
 Beneath the impervious covert of one oak,
 I've rais'd a lowly shed, and know the names
 Of Husband and of Father; not unhearing 35
 Of that divine and nightly-whispering Voice,
 Which from my childhood to maturer years
 Spake to me of predestinated wreaths,
 Bright with no fading colours!

Yet at times
 My soul is sad, that I have roam'd through life 40

At mine own home and birth-place: chiefly then,
 When I remember thee, my earliest Friend!
 Thee, who didst watch my boyhood and my youth;
 Didst trace my wanderings with a father's eye; 45
 And boding evil yet still hoping good,
 Rebuk'd each fault, and over all my woes
 Sorrow'd in silence! He who counts alone
 The beatings of the solitary heart,
 That Being knows, how I have lov'd thee ever, 50
 Lov'd as a brother, as a son rever'd thee!
 Oh! 'tis to me an ever new delight,
 To talk of thee and thine: or when the blast
 Of the shrill winter, rattling our rude sash,
 Endears the cleanly hearth and social bowl; 55
 Or when, as now, on some delicious eve,
 We in our sweet sequester'd orchard-plot
 Sit on the tree crook'd earth-ward; whose old boughs,
 That hang above us in an arborous roof,
 Stirr'd by the faint gale of departing May, 60
 Send their loose blossoms slanting o'er our heads!

Nor dost not thou sometimes recall those hours,
 When with the joy of hope thou gavest thine ear
 To my wild firstling-lays. Since then my song
 Hath sounded deeper notes, such as beseem 65
 Or that sad wisdom folly leaves behind,
 Or such as, tuned to these tumultuous times,
 Cope with the tempest's swell!

These various strains,
 Which I have fram'd in many a various mood,
 Accept, my Brother! and (for some perchance 70
 Will strike discordant on thy milder mind)
 If aught of error or intemperate truth
 Should meet thine ear, think thou that riper Age
 Will calm it down, and let thy love forgive it!

ON THE CHRISTENING OF A FRIEND'S CHILD<sup>1</sup>

THIS day among the faithful plac'd
 And fed with fontal manna,
 O with maternal title grac'd,
 Dear Anna's dearest Anna!

While others wish thee wise and fair, 5
 A maid of spotless fame,
 I'll breathe this more compendious prayer—
 May'st thou deserve thy name!

Thy mother's name, a potent spell,
 That bids the Virtues hie 10
 From mystic grove and living cell,
 Confess'd to Fancy's eye;

Meek Quietness without offence;
 Content in homespun kirtle;
 True Love; and True Love's Innocence, 15
 White Blossom of the Myrtle!

Associates of thy name, sweet Child!
 These Virtues may'st thou win;
 With face as eloquently mild
 To say, they lodge within. 20

So, when her tale of days all flown,
 Thy mother shall be miss'd here;
 When Heaven at length shall claim its own
 And Angels snatch their Sister;

Some hoary-headed friend, perchance, 25
 May gaze with stifled breath;
 And oft, in momentary trance,
 Forget the waste of death.

Even thus a lovely rose I've view'd
 In summer-swelling pride; 30
 Nor mark'd the bud, that green and rude
 Peep'd at the rose's side.

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Supplement to Poems, 1797: reprinted in Literary Remains, 1836, i. 48, 49: included in 1844 and 1852. The lines were addressed to Anna Cruickshank, the wife of John Cruickshank, who was a neighbour of Coleridge at Nether-Stowey.

It chanc'd I pass'd again that way
 In Autumn's latest hour,
 And wond'ring saw the selfsame spray 35
 Rich with the selfsame flower.

Ah fond deceit! the rude green bud
 Alike in shape, place, name,
 Had bloom'd where bloom'd its parent stud,
 Another and the same! 40

OF A LATIN INSCRIPTION BY THE REV. W. L. BOWLES IN NETHER-STOWEY CHURCH

DEPART in joy from this world's noise and strife
 To the deep quiet of celestial life!
 Depart!—Affection's self reproves the tear
 Which falls, O honour'd Parent! on thy bier;—
 Yet Nature will be heard, the heart will swell, 5
 And the voice tremble with a last Farewell!

THIS LIME-TREE BOWER MY PRISON<sup>1</sup>

[ADDRESSED TO CHARLES LAMB, OF THE INDIA HOUSE, LONDON]

In the June of 1797 some long-expected friends paid a visit to the author's cottage; and on the morning of their arrival, he met with an accident, which disabled him from walking during the whole time of their stay. One evening, when they had left him for a few hours, he composed the following lines in the garden-bower.<sup>2</sup>

WELL, they are gone, and here must I remain,
This lime-tree bower my prison! I have lost
Beauties and feelings, such as would have been <sup>1</sup> First published in the Annual Anthology, 1800, reprinted in Mylius' Poetical Classbook, 1810: included in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, in 1828, 1829, and 1834. The poem was sent in a letter to Southey, July 9, 1797, and in a letter to C. Lloyd, [July, 1797]. See Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 225-7 and P. W., 1893, p. 591.

<sup>2</sup> 'Ch. and Mary Lamb—dear to my heart, yea, as it were my Heart.—S. T. C. Æt. 63; 1834—1797—1834 = 37 years!' (Marginal note written by S. T. Coleridge over against the introductory note to 'This Lime-Tree Bower my Prison', in a copy of the Poetical Works, 1834.)

This Lime-Tree, &c.—Title] This Lime-Tree Bower my Prison. A Poem Addressed, &c. An. Anth.: the words 'Addressed to', &c., are omitted in Sibylline Leaves, 1828, 1829, and 1834.

They, meantime, My Friends, whom I may never meet again, On springy heath, along the hill-top edge Wander delighted, and look down, perchance, On that same rifted dell, where many an ash Twists its wild limbs beside the ferny rock Whose plummy* ferns forever nod and drip Spray'd by the waterfall. 3 Such beauties and such feelings, as had been An. Anth., S. L.

Most sweet to my remembrance even when age
 Had dimm'd mine eyes to blindness! They, meanwhile, 5
 Friends, whom I never more may meet again,
 On springy<sup>1</sup> heath, along the hill-top edge,
 Wander in gladness, and wind down, perchance,
 To that still roaring dell, of which I told;
 The roaring dell, o'erwooded, narrow, deep, 10
 And only speckled by the mid-day sun;
 Where its slim trunk the ash from rock to rock
 Flings arching like a bridge;—that branchless ash,
 Unsunn'd and damp, whose few poor yellow leaves
 Ne'er tremble in the gale, yet tremble still, 15
 Fann'd by the water-fall! and there my friends
 Behold the dark green file of long lank weeds,<sup>2</sup>
 That all at once (a most fantastic sight!)
 Still nod and drip beneath the dripping edge
 Of the blue clay-stone.

Now, my friends emerge 20
 Beneath the wide wide Heaven—and view again
 The many-steeped tract magnificent
 Of hilly fields and meadows, and the sea,
 With some fair bark, perhaps, whose sails light up
 The slip of smooth clear blue betwixt two Isles 25
 Of purple shadow! Yes! they wander on
 In gladness all; but thou, methinks, most glad,
 My gentle-hearted Charles! for thou hast pined
 And hunger'd after Nature, many a year,
 In the great City pent, winning thy way 30
 With sad yet patient soul, through evil and pain
 And strange calamity! Ah! slowly sink
 Behind the western ridge, thou glorious Sun!
 Shine in the slant beams of the sinking orb,

<sup>1</sup> 'Elastic, I mean.' MS. Letter to Southey.

Ye purple heath-flowers! richlier burn, ye clouds!    35
 Live in the yellow light, ye distant groves!
 And kindle, thou blue Ocean! So my friend
 Struck with deep joy may stand, as I have stood,
 Silent with swimming sense; yea, gazing round
 On the wide landscape, gaze till all doth seem    40
 Less gross than bodily; and of such hues
 As veil the Almighty Spirit, when yet he makes Spirits perceive his presence.

A delight

Comes sudden on my heart, and I am glad
 As I myself were there! Nor in this bower,    45
 This little lime-tree bower, have I not mark'd
 Much that has sooth'd me. Pale beneath the blaze
 Hung the transparent foliage; and I watch'd
 Some broad and sunny leaf, and lov'd to see
 The shadow of the leaf and stem above    50
 Dappling its sunshine! And that walnut-tree
 Was richly ting'd, and a deep radiance lay
 Full on the ancient ivy, which usurps
 Those fronting elms, and now, with blackest mass

38 foll. Struck with joy's deepest calm, and gazing round

Makes their dark branches gleam a lighter hue 55
 Through the late twilight: and though now the bat
 Wheels silent by, and not a swallow twitters,
 Yet still the solitary humble-bee
 Sings in the bean-flower! Henceforth I shall know
 That Nature ne'er deserts the wise and pure; 60
 No plot so narrow, be but Nature there,
 No waste so vacant, but may well employ
 Each faculty of sense, and keep the heart
 Awake to Love and Beauty! and sometimes
 'Tis well to be bereft of promis'd good, 65
 That we may lift the soul, and contemplate
 With lively joy the joys we cannot share.
 My gentle-hearted Charles! when the last rook
 Beat its straight path along the dusky air
 Homewards, I blest it! deeming its black wing 70
 (Now a dim speck, now vanishing in light)
 Had cross'd the mighty Orb's dilated glory,
 While thou stood'st gazing; or, when all was still,
 Flew creaking o'er thy head, and had a charm<sup>1</sup>
 For thee, my gentle-hearted Charles, to whom 75
 No sound is dissonant which tells of Life.

1797.

<sup>1</sup> Some months after I had written this line, it gave me pleasure to find [to observe An. Anth., S. L. 1828] that Bartram had observed the same circumstance of the Savanna Crane. 'When these Birds move their wings in flight, their strokes are slow, moderate and regular; and even when at a considerable distance or high above us, we plainly hear the quill-feathers: their shafts and webs upon one another creek as the joints or working of a vessel in a tempestuous sea.'

THE FOSTER-MOTHER'S TALE<sup>1</sup>

A DRAMATIC FRAGMENT

[From Osorio, Act IV. The title and text are here printed from Lyrical Ballads, 1798.]

Foster-Mother. I never saw the man whom you describe.

Maria. 'Tis strange! he spake of you familiarly
As mine and Albert's common Foster-mother.

Foster-Mother. Now blessings on the man, whoe'er he be,
That joined your names with mine! O my sweet lady, 5
As often as I think of those dear times
When you two little ones would stand at eve
On each side of my chair, and make me learn
All you had learnt in the day; and how to talk
In gentle phrase, then bid me sing to you— 10
'Tis more like heaven to come than what has been!

Maria. O my dear Mother! this strange man has left me
Troubled with wilder fancies, than the moon

<sup>1</sup> First published in the first edition of the Lyrical Ballads, 1798, and reprinted in the editions of 1800, 1803, and 1805. The 'dramatic fragment' was excluded from the acting version of Remorse, but was printed in an Appendix, p. 75, to the Second Edition of the Play, 1813. It is included in the body of the work in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, and again in 1852, and in the Appendix to Remorse in the editions of 1828, 1829, and 1834. It is omitted from 1844. 'The "Foster-Mother's Tale," (From Mr. C.'s own handwriting)' was published in Cottle's Early Recollections, i. 235.

'The following scene as unfit for the stage was taken from the Tragedy in 1797, and published in the Lyrical Ballads. But this work having been long out of print, and it having been determined, that this with my other poems in that collection (the Nightingale, Love, and the Ancient Mariner) should be omitted in any future edition, I have been advised to reprint it as a Note to the Second Scene of Act the Fourth, p. 55.' App. to Remorse, Ed. 2, 1813. [This note is reprinted in 1828 and 1829, but in 1834 only the first sentence is prefixed to the scene.]

The Foster-Mother's Tale—Title] Foster-Mother's Tale. (Scene—Spain) Cottle, 1837: The, &c. A Narration in Dramatic Blank Verse L.B. 1800. In Remorse, App., 1813 and in 1828, 1829, 1834, the dramatis personae are respectively Teresa and Selma. The fragment opens thus:—Enter Teresa and Selma.

Ter. 'Tis said, he spake of you familiarly
As mine and Alvar's common foster-mother.

In Cottle's version, the scene begins at line 4.

Breeds in the love-sick maid who gazes at it,
Till lost in inward vision, with wet eye 15
She gazes idly!—But that entrance, Mother!

Foster-Mother. Can no one hear? It is a perilous tale!

Maria. No one.

Foster-Mother. My husband's father told it me,
Poor old Leoni!—Angels rest his soul!
He was a woodman, and could fell and saw 20
With lusty arm. You know that huge round beam
Which props the hanging wall of the old Chapel?

Beneath that tree, while yet it was a tree,
He found a baby wrapt in mosses, lined
With thistle-beards, and such small locks of wool 25
As hang on brambles. Well, he brought him home,
And rear'd him at the then Lord Velez' cost.

And so the babe grew up a pretty boy,
A pretty boy, but most unteachable—
And never learnt a prayer, nor told a bead, 30
But knew the names of birds, and mock'd their notes,
And whistled, as he were a bird himself:

And all the autumn 'twas his only play
To get the seeds of wild flowers, and to plant them
With earth and water, on the stumps of trees. 35

A Friar, who gather'd simples in the wood,
A grey-haired man—he lov'd this little boy,
The boy lov'd him—and, when the Friar taught him,
He soon could write with the pen: and from that time,
Lived chiefly at the Convent or the Castle. 40

So he became a very learnéd youth.
But Oh! poor wretch!—he read, and read, and read,
Till his brain turn'd—and ere his twentieth year,
He had unlawful thoughts of many things:
And though he prayed, he never lov'd to pray 45
With holy men, nor in a holy place—

But yet his speech, it was so soft and sweet,
The late Lord Velez ne'er was wearied with him.

16 In Lyrical Ballads, 1800, the scene begins with the words: 'But that entrance'. But that entrance, Selma? 1813. 19 Leoni] Sesina 1813, 1828, 1829, 1834. 27 Velez'] Valdez' 1813, 1828, 1829, 1834: Valez' S. L. 1817.

And once, as by the north side of the Chapel
 They stood together, chain'd in deep discourse, 50
 The earth heav'd under them with such a groan,
 That the wall totter'd, and had well-nigh fallen
 Right on their heads. My Lord was sorely frighten'd;
 A fever seiz'd him, and he made confession
 Of all the heretical and lawless talk 55
 Which brought this judgment: so the youth was seiz'd
 And cast into that hole. My husband's father
 Sobb'd like a child—it almost broke his heart:
 And once as he was working in the cellar,
 He heard a voice distinctly; 'twas the youth's, 60
 Who sung a doleful song about green fields,
 How sweet it were on lake or wild savannah,
 To hunt for food, and be a naked man,
 And wander up and down at liberty.
 He always doted on the youth, and now 65
 His love grew desperate; and defying death,
 He made that cunning entrance I describ'd:
 And the young man escap'd.

Maria.

'Tis a sweet tale:

Such as would lull a listening child to sleep,
 His rosy face besoil'd with unwiped tears.— 70
 And what became of him?

Foster-Mother.

He went on shipboard

With those bold voyagers, who made discovery
 Of golden lands. Leoni's younger brother
 Went likewise, and when he return'd to Spain,
 He told Leoni, that the poor mad youth, 75
 Soon after they arriv'd in that new world,
 In spite of his dissuasion, seiz'd a boat,
 And all alone, set sail by silent moonlight
 Up a great river, great as any sea,
 And ne'er was heard of more: but 'tis suppos'd, 80
 He liv'd and died among the savage men.

THE DUNGEON <sup>1</sup>

[From Osorio. Act V; and Remorse, Act V, Scene i. The title and text are here printed from Lyrical Ballads, 1798.]

AND this place our forefathers made for man!
 This is the process of our love and wisdom,
 To each poor brother who offends against us—
 Most innocent, perhaps—and what if guilty?
 Is this the only cure? Merciful God! 5
 Each pore and natural outlet shrivell'd up
 By Ignorance and parching Poverty,
 His energies roll back upon his heart,
 And stagnate and corrupt; till chang'd to poison,
 They break out on him, like a loathsome plague-spot; 10
 Then we call in our pamper'd mountebanks—
 And this is their best cure! uncomforted
 And friendless solitude, groaning and tears,
 And savage faces, at the clanking hour,
 Seen through the steams and vapour of his dungeon, 15
 By the lamp's dismal twilight! So he lies
 Circled with evil, till his very soul
 Unmoulds its essence, hopelessly deform'd
 By sights of ever more deformity!

With other ministrations thou, O Nature! 20
 Healest thy wandering and distemper'd child:
 Thou pourest on him thy soft influences,
 Thy sunny hues, fair forms, and breathing sweets,
 Thy melodies of woods, and winds, and waters,
 Till he relent, and can no more endure 25
 To be a jarring and a dissonant thing,
 Amid this general dance and minstrelsy;
 But, bursting into tears, wins back his way,
 His angry spirit heal'd and harmoniz'd
 By the benignant touch of Love and Beauty. 30

THE RIME OF THE ANCIENT MARINER<sup>1</sup>

IN SEVEN PARTS

Facile credo, plures esse Naturas invisibiles quam visibiles in rerum universitate. Sed horum omnium familiam quis nobis enarrabit? et gradus et cognationes et discrimina et singulorum munera? Quid agunt? quae loca habitant? Harum rerum notitiam semper ambivit ingenium humanum, nunquam attigit. Juvat, interea, non diffiteor, quandoque in animo, tanquam in tabulâ, majoris et melioris mundi imaginem contemplari: ne mens assuefacta hodiernae vitae minutiis se contrahat nimis, et tota subsidat in pusillas cogitationes. Sed veritati interea invigilandum est, modusque servandus, ut certa ab incertis, diem a nocte, distinguamus.—T. BURNER, Archaeol. Phil. p. 68.<sup>2</sup>

ARGUMENT

How a Ship having passed the Line was driven by storms to the cold Country towards the South Pole; and how from thence she made her course to the tropical Latitude of the Great Pacific Ocean; and of the strange things that befell; and in what manner the Ancyent Marinere came back to his own Country. [L. B. 1798.]<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The Ancient Mariner was first published in the Lyrical Ballads, 1798. It was reprinted in the succeeding editions of 1800, 1802, and 1805. It was first published under the Author's name in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, and included in 1828, 1829, and 1834. For the full text of the poem as published in 1798, vide Appendices. The marginal glosses were added in 1815–1816, when a collected edition of Coleridge's poems was being prepared for the press, and were first published in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, but it is possible that they were the work of a much earlier period. The text of the Ancient Mariner as reprinted in Lyrical Ballads, 1802, 1805 follows that of 1800.

An ancient Mariner meeteth three Gal-
lants bidden to a wedding-feast, and detaineth one.

It is an ancient Mariner,
And he stoppeth one of three.
'By thy long grey beard and glittering eye,
Now wherefore stopp'st thou me?

The Bridegroom's doors are opened wide, 5
And I am next of kin;
The guests are met, the feast is set:
May'st hear the merry din.'

He holds him with his skinny hand,
'There was a ship,' quoth he.
'Hold off! unhand me, grey-beard loon!' <sup>19</sup> archaic
Eftsoons, his hand dropt he.

The Wedding-
Guest is spellbound by the eye of the old
seafaring man,
and constrained to hear his tale.

He holds him with his glittering eye—
The Wedding-Guest stood still,
And listens like a three years' child: 15
The Mariner hath his will.

The Wedding-Guest sat on a stone:
He cannot choose but hear;
And thus spake on that ancient man,
The bright-eyed Mariner. 20

The Mariner
tells how the ship sailed southward with a good wind and fair weather, till it reached the line.

'The ship was cheered, the harbour cleared,
Merrily did we drop
Below the kirk, below the hill,
Below the lighthouse top.

The Sun came up upon the left, 25
Out of the sea came he!
And he shone bright, and on the right
Went down into the sea.

PART I] I L. B. 1798, 1800. The Rime of the Ancient Mariner. In Seven Parts. S. L., 1828, 1829. 1 It is an ancyeut Marinere L. B. 1798 [ancient is spelled 'ancyeut' and Mariner 'Marinere' throughout L. B. 1798]. 3 thy

Between 8 and 13

But still he holds the wedding guest—
There was a Ship, quoth he—
'Nay, if thou'st got a laughsome tale,
'Marinere, [Mariner! 1800] come with me.'

He holds him with his skinny hand—
Quoth he, there was a Ship—
Now get thee hence thou greybeard Loon!
Or my Staff shall make thee skip. L. B. 1798, 1800.

Higher and higher every day,
Till over the mast at noon—
The Wedding-Guest here beat his breast,
For he heard the loud bassoon. 30

The Wedding-Guest heareth the bridal music; but the Mariner continueth his tale.

The bride hath paced into the hall,
Red as a rose is she;
Nodding their heads before her goes
The merry minstrelsy. 35

The Wedding-Guest he beat his breast,
Yet he cannot choose but hear;
And thus spake on that ancient man,
The bright-eyed Mariner. 40

The ship driven by a storm toward the south pole.

'And now, the STORM-BLAST came, and he
Was tyrannous and strong:
He struck with his o'ertaking wings,
And chased us south along.

With sloping masts and dipping prow,
As who pursued with yell and blow
Still treads the shadow of his foe,
And forward bends his head,
The ship drove fast, loud roared the blast,
And southward aye we fled. 45 50

And now there came both mist and snow,
And it grew wondrous cold:
And ice, mast-high, came floating by,
As green as emerald.

Between 40 and 55

Listen, Stranger! Storm and Wind,
A Wind and Tempest strong!
For days and weeks it play'd us freaks—
Like chaff we drove along.

Listen Stranger! Mist and Snow,
And it grew wondrous cold;
And Ice mast-high came floating by
As green as Emerald. L. B. 1798.

Between 40 and 51

But now the Northwind came more fierce,
There came a Tempest strong!
And Southward still for days and weeks
Like Chaff we drove along. L. B. 1800.

Lines 41-50 of the text were added in Sibylline Leaves, 1817. [Note. The emendation in the marginal gloss, 'driven' for 'drawn' first appears in 1893.]

The land of ice, and of fearful sounds where no living thing was to be seen. And through the drifts the snowy clifts Did send a dismal sheen: Nor shapes of men nor beasts we ken— The ice was all between. 55

The ice was here, the ice was there,
The ice was all around: 60
It cracked and growled, and roared and howled,
Like noises in a swound!

Till a great sea-bird, called the Albatross, came through the snow-fog, and was received with great joy and hospitality. At length did cross an Albatross, Thorough the fog it came; As if it had been a Christian soul, We hailed it in God's name. 65

It ate the food it ne'er had eat,
And round and round it flew.
The ice did split with a thunder-fit;
The helmsman steered us through! 70

And lo! the Albatross proveth a bird of good omen, and followeth the ship as it returned northward through fog and floating ice. And a good south wind sprung up behind; The Albatross did follow, And every day, for food or play, Came to the mariner's hollo!

In mist or cloud, on mast or shroud, 75
It perched for vespers nine;
Whiles all the night, through fog-smoke white,
Glimmered the white Moon-shine.'

The ancient Mariner inhospitably killeth the pious bird of good omen. 'God save thee, ancient Mariner! From the fiends, that plague thee thus!— 80 Why look'st thou so?'—With my cross-bow I shot the ALBATROSS.

The Sun now rose upon the right:
Out of the sea came he,
Still hid in mist, and on the left 85
Went down into the sea.

His shipmates cry out against the ancient Mariner, for killing the bird of good luck.

And I had done a hellish thing,
 And it would work 'em woe:
 * For all averred, I had killed the bird
 That made the breeze to blow.
 Ah wretch! said they, the bird to slay,
 That made the breeze to blow!

 fog cleared off, they continues;

The fair breeze blew, the white foam flew,
 The furrow followed free;
 We were the first, that ever burst
 Into that silent sea.

The ship hath been suddenly becalmed.

Down dropt the breeze, the sails dropt down,
 'Twas sad as sad could be;
 And we did speak only to break
 The silence of the sea!

110

All in a hot and copper sky,
 The bloody Sun, at noon,
 Right up above the mast did stand,
 No bigger than the Moon.

PART III

There passed a weary time. Each throat
 Was parched, and glazed each eye.
 A weary time! a weary time! 145
 How glazed each weary eye,
 When looking westward, I beheld
 A something in the sky.

The ancient
 Mariner beholdeth a sign
 in the element
 afar off.

At first it seemed a little speck,
 And then it seemed a mist; 150
 It moved and moved, and took at last
 A certain shape, I wist.

A speck, a mist, a shape, I wist!
 And still it neared and neared:
 As if it dodged a water-sprite, 155
 It plunged and tacked and veered.

At its nearer approach, it
 seemeth him
 to be a ship;
 and at a dear
 ransom he freeth his speech from the bonds of thirst.

With throats unslaked, with black lips baked,
 We could nor laugh nor wail;
 Through utter drought all dumb we stood!
 I bit my arm, I sucked the blood, 160
 And cried, A sail! a sail!

With throats unslaked, with black lips baked,
 Agape they heard me call:

 is talking to
 him;

 And thy skinny hand, so brown.'—
 Fear not, fear not, thou Wedding-Guest! 230

But the ancient Mariner assureth him of his bodily life, and proceedeth to relate his horrible penance.
 Alone, alone, all, all alone,
 Alone on a wide wide sea!
 And never a saint took pity on
 My soul in agony. 235

He despiseth
 the creatures
 of the calm,
 The many men, so beautiful!
 And they all dead did lie:

<sup>1</sup> For the last two lines of this stanza, I am indebted to Mr. WORDSWORTH. It was on a delightful walk from Nether Stowey to Dulverton, with him and his sister, in the Autumn of 1797, that this Poem was planned, and in part composed. [Note by S. T. I looked upon the rotting sea,
And drew my eyes away;
I looked upon the rotting deck,
And there the dead men lay. 240

I looked to heaven, and tried to pray;
But or ever a prayer had gusht,
A wicked whisper came, and made 245
My heart as dry as dust.

I closed my lids, and kept them close,
And the balls like pulses beat;
For the sky and the sea, and the sea and the sky 250
Lay like a load on my weary eye,
And the dead were at my feet.

But the curse
liveth for him
in the eye of the dead men.

The cold sweat melted from their limbs,
Nor rot nor reek did they:
The look with which they looked on me 255
Had never passed away.

An orphan's curse would drag to hell
A spirit from on high;
But oh! more horrible than that
Is the curse in a dead man's eye! 260
Seven days, seven nights, I saw that curse,
And yet I could not die.

By the light of the Moon he beholdeth God's creatures of the great calm.
 Beyond the shadow of the ship,
 I watched the water-snakes:
 They moved in tracks of shining white,
 And when they reared, the elfish light
 Fell off in hoary flakes. 275

Within the shadow of the ship
 I watched their rich attire:
 Blue, glossy green, and velvet black,
 They coiled and swam; and every track 280
 Was a flash of golden fire.

Their beauty and their happiness.
 O happy living things! no tongue
 Their beauty might declare:
 A spring of love gushed from my heart,
 And I blessed them unaware: 285
 He blesseth them in his heart.
 Sure my kind saint took pity on me,
 And I blessed them unaware.

The spell begins to break.
 The self-same moment I could pray;
 And from my neck so free
 The Albatross fell off, and sank 290
 Like lead into the sea.

Oh sleep! it is a gentle thing,
 Beloved from pole to pole!
 To Mary Queen the praise be given!
 She sent the gentle sleep from Heaven, 295
 That slid into my soul.

By grace of the holy Mother, the ancient Mariner is refreshed with rain.
 The silly buckets on the deck,
 That had so long remained,
 I dreamt that they were filled with dew;
 And when I awoke, it rained. 300

My lips were wet, my throat was cold,
 My garments all were dank;
 Sure I had drunken in my dreams,
 And still my body drank.

I moved, and could not feel my limbs: 305
 I was so light—almost
 I thought that I had died in sleep,
 And was a blesséd ghost.

He heareth
 sounds and seeth strange sights and commotions in the sky and the element.

And soon I heard a roaring wind:
 It did not come anear; 310
 But with its sound it shook the sails,
 That were so thin and sere.

The upper air burst into life!
 And a hundred fire-flags sheen,
 To and fro they were hurried about! 315
 And to and fro, and in and out,
 The wan stars danced between.

And the coming wind did roar more loud,
 And the sails did sigh like sedge;
 And the rain poured down from one black cloud; 320
 The Moon was at its edge.

The thick black cloud was cleft, and still
 The Moon was at its side:
 Like waters shot from some high crag,
 The lightning fell with never a jag, 325
 A river steep and wide.

The bodies of the ship's crew

The loud wind never reached the ship,
 Yet now the ship moved on!
 Beneath the lightning and the Moon
 The dead men gave a groan. 330

It had been strange, even in a dream,
To have seen those dead men rise.

The helmsman steered, the ship moved on ; 335
Yet never a breeze up-blew ;
The mariners all 'gan work the ropes,
Where they were wont to do ;
They raised their limbs like lifeless tools—
We were a ghastly crew. 340

The body of my brother's son
Stood by me, knee to knee :
The body and I pulled at one rope,
But he said nought to me.

But not by the souls of the men, nor by dæmons of earth or middle air, but by a blessed troop of angelic spirits,
sent down by the invocation
of the guardian saint.

'I fear thee, ancient Mariner !' 345
Be calm, thou Wedding-Guest !
'Twas not those souls that fled in pain,
Which to their corpses came again,
But a troop of spirits blest :

For when it dawned—they dropped their arms,
And clustered round the mast ; 351
Sweet sounds rose slowly through their mouths,
And from their bodies passed.

Around, around, flew each sweet sound,
Then darted to the Sun ; 355
Slowly the sounds came back again,
Now mixed, now one by one.

Sometimes a-dropping from the sky
I heard the sky-lark sing ;
Sometimes all little birds that are, 360
How they seemed to fill the sea and air
With their sweet jargoning !

And now 'twas like all instruments,
Now like a lonely flute ;
And now it is an angel's song, 365
That makes the heavens be mute.

Between 344-5

And I quak'd to think of my own voice
How frightful it would be ! L. B. 1798.

It ceased ; yet still the sails made on
 A pleasant noise till noon,
 A noise like of a hidden brook
 In the leafy month of June, 370
 That to the sleeping woods all night
 Singeth a quiet tune. ✕

Till noon we quietly sailed on,
 Yet never a breeze did breathe:
 Slowly and smoothly went the ship, 375
 Moved onward from beneath.

The lonesome Spirit from the south-pole carries on the ship as far as the Line, in obedience to the angelic
 troop, but still requireth
 vengeance.

Under the keel nine fathom deep,
 From the land of mist and snow,
 The spirit slid: and it was he
 That made the ship to go. 380
 The sails at noon left off their tune,
 And the ship stood still also.

The Sun, right up above the mast,
 Had fixed her to the ocean:
 But in a minute she 'gan stir, 385
 With a short uneasy motion—
 Backwards and forwards half her length
 With a short uneasy motion.

Then like a pawing horse let go,
 She made a sudden bound: 390

Between 372-3

Listen, O listen, thou Wedding-guest !
 'Marinere! thou hast thy will:
 'For that, which comes out of thine eye, doth make
 'My body and soul to be still.'

Never sadder tale was told
 To a man of woman born:
 Sadder and wiser thou wedding-guest!
 Thoult rise to-morrow morn.

Never sadder tale was heard
 By a man of woman born:
 The Mariners all return'd to work
 As silent as before.

The Mariners all 'gan pull the ropes,
 But look at me they n'old;
 Thought I, I am as thin as air—
 They cannot me behold. L. B. 1798.

The Polar
Spirit's fellowdæmons, the invisible inhabitants of the element,
take part in his wrong;
and two of them relate,
one to the other, that penance long and heavy for the ancient Mariner hath been accorded to the Polar Spirit, who returneth
southward.

It flung the blood into my head,
And I fell down in a swound.

How long in that same fit I lay,
I have not to declare;
But ere my living life returned,
I heard and in my soul discerned
Two voices in the air.

395

‘Is it he?’ quoth one, ‘Is this the man?
By him who died on cross,
With his cruel bow he laid full low
The harmless Albatross.

400

The spirit who bideth by himself
In the land of mist and snow,
He loved the bird that loved the man
Who shot him with his bow.’

405

The other was a softer voice,
As soft as honey-dew:
Quoth he, ‘The man hath penance done,
And penance more will do.’

PART VI

FIRST VOICE

‘But tell me, tell me! speak again,
Thy soft response renewing—
What makes that ship drive on so fast?
What is the ocean doing?’

410

SECOND VOICE

‘Still as a slave before his lord,
The ocean hath no blast;
His great bright eye most silently
Up to the Moon is cast—

415

If he may know which way to go;
For she guides him smooth or grim.
See, brother, see! how graciously
She looketh down on him.’

PART VI] VI. L. B. 1798, 1800: The Rime of the Ancient Mariner. Part the Sixth S. L. 1828, 1829.

FIRST VOICE

The Mariner hath been cast into a trance; for the angelic power
causeth the vessel to drive northward faster than human life
could endure.

'But why drives on that ship so fast,
Without or wave or wind?'

SECOND VOICE

'The air is cut away before,
And closes from behind. 425

Fly, brother, fly! more high, more high!
Or we shall be belated:
For slow and slow that ship will go,
When the Mariner's trance is abated.'

The supernatural motion
is retarded;
the Mariner
awakes, and his penance begins anew.

I woke, and we were sailing on 430
As in a gentle weather:
'Twas night, calm night, the moon was high;
The dead men stood together.

All stood together on the deck,
For a charnel-dungeon fitter: 435
All fixed on me their stony eyes,
That in the Moon did glitter.

The pang, the curse, with which they died,
Had never passed away:
I could not draw my eyes from theirs, 440
Nor turn them up to pray.

The curse is finally ex-
piated.

And now this spell was snapt: once more
I viewed the ocean green,
And looked far forth, yet little saw
Of what had else been seen— 445

Like one, that on a lonesome road
Doth walk in fear and dread,
And having once turned round walks on,
And turns no more his head;
Because he knows, a frightful fiend 450
Doth close behind him tread.

423 Withouten wave L. B. 1798.
L. B. 1798.

440—I een from theirs; Ne turn

442-6

And in its time the spell was snapt,
And I could move my een:
I look'd far-forth, but little saw
Of what might else be seen. L. B. 1798.

446 lonesome] lonely L. B. 1798.

But soon there breathed a wind on me,
 Nor sound nor motion made:
 Its path was not upon the sea,
 In ripple or in shade.

455

It raised my hair, it fanned my cheek
 Like a meadow-gale of spring—
 It mingled strangely with my fears,
 Yet it felt like a welcoming.

Swiftly, swiftly flew the ship,
 Yet she sailed softly too:
 Sweetly, sweetly blew the breeze—
 On me alone it blew.

460

And the ancient Mariner beholdeth his native country.

Oh! dream of joy! is this indeed
 The light-house top I see?
 Is this the hill? is this the kirk?
 Is this mine own countree?

465

We drifted o'er the harbour-bar,
 And I with sobs did pray—
 O let me be awake, my God!
 Or let me sleep alway.

470

The harbour-bay was clear as glass,
 So smoothly it was strewn!
 And on the bay the moonlight lay,
 And the shadow of the Moon.

453 Nor . . . nor] Ne . . . ne L. B. 1798.      464 O dream L. B. 1798, 1800.
Between 475-80

The moonlight bay was white all o'er,
 Till rising from the same,
 Full many shapes, that shadows were,
 Like as of torches came.

A little distance from the prow
 Those dark-red shadows were;
 But soon I saw that my own flesh
 Was red as in a glare.

I turn'd my head in fear and dread,
 And by the holy rood,
 The bodies had advanc'd, and now
 Before the mast they stood.

They lifted up their stiff right arms,
 They held them strait and tight;
 And each right-arm burnt like a torch,
 A torch that's borne upright.
 Their stony eye-balls glitter'd on
 In the red and smoky light.

The rock shone bright, the kirk no less,
That stands above the rock:
The moonlight steeped in silentness
The steady weathercock.

And the bay was white with silent light, 480
Till rising from the same,
Full many shapes, that shadows were,
In crimson colours came.

The angelic spirits leave the dead bodies,

And appear in their own
forms of light.

A little distance from the prow
Those crimson shadows were: 485
I turned my eyes upon the deck—
Oh, Christ! what saw I there!

Each corse lay flat, lifeless and flat,
And, by the holy rood!
A man all light, a seraph-man, 490
On every corse there stood.

This seraph-band, each waved his hand:
It was a heavenly sight!
They stood as signals to the land,
Each one a lovely light; 495

This seraph-band, each waved his hand,
No voice did they impart—
No voice; but oh! the silence sank
Like music on my heart.

But soon I heard the dash of oars, 500
I heard the Pilot's cheer;
My head was turned perforce away
And I saw a boat appear.

I pray'd and turn'd my head away
Forth looking as before.

There was no breeze upon the bay,
No wave against the shore. L. B. 1798.

MS. Correction by S. T. C. in a copy of L. B. 1798.

The Pilot and the Pilot's boy,
 I heard them coming fast: 505
 Dear Lord in Heaven! it was a joy
 The dead men could not blast.

I saw a third—I heard his voice:
 It is the Hermit good!
 He singeth loud his godly hymns 510
 That he makes in the wood.
 He'll shrieve my soul, he'll wash away
 The Albatross's blood.

PART VII

The Hermit of the Wood, This Hermit good lives in that wood
 Which slopes down to the sea. 515
 How loudly his sweet voice he rears!
 He loves to talk with marineres
 That come from a far countree.

He kneels at morn, and noon, and eve—
 He hath a cushion plump: 520
 It is the moss that wholly hides
 The rotted old oak-stump.

The skiff-boat neared: I heard them talk,
 'Why, this is strange, I trow!
 Where are those lights so many and fair, 525
 That signal made but now?'

Approacheth
 the ship with wonder. 'Strange, by my faith!' the Hermit said—
 'And they answered not our cheer!
 The planks looked warped! and see those sails,
 How thin they are and sere! 530
 I never saw aught like to them,
 Unless perchance it were

Brown skeletons of leaves that lag
 My forest-brook along;

'Dear Lord! it hath a fiendish look—
 (The Pilot made reply)
 I am a-feared'—'Push on, push on!' 540
 Said the Hermit cheerily.

The boat came closer to the ship,
 But I nor spake nor stirred;
 The boat came close beneath the ship,
 And straight a sound was heard. 545

The ship suddenly sinketh.

Under the water it rumbled on,
 Still louder and more dread:
 It reached the ship, it split the bay;
 The ship went down like lead.

The ancient Mariner is saved in the Pilot's boat.

Stunned by that loud and dreadful sound, 550
 Which sky and ocean smote,
 Like one that hath been seven days drowned
 My body lay afloat;
 But swift as dreams, myself I found
 Within the Pilot's boat. 555

Upon the whirl, where sank the ship,
 The boat spun round and round;
 And all was still, save that the hill
 Was telling of the sound.

I moved my lips—the Pilot shrieked 560
 And fell down in a fit;
 The holy Hermit raised his eyes,
 And prayed where he did sit.

I took the oars: the Pilot's boy,
 Who now doth crazy go, 565
 Laughed loud and long, and all the while
 His eyes went to and fro.
 'Ha! ha!' quoth he, 'full plain I see,
 The Devil knows how to row.'

And now, all in my own countree, 570
 I stood on the firm land!
 The Hermit stepped forth from the boat,
 And scarcely he could stand.

The ancient Mariner earnestly en-
treateth the Hermit to shrieve him;
and the penance of life falls on him.

'O shrieve me, shrieve me, holy man!'
The Hermit crossed his brow. 575
'Say quick,' quoth he, 'I bid thee say—
What manner of man art thou?'

Forthwith this frame of mine was wrenched
With a woful agony,
Which forced me to begin my tale; 580
And then it left me free.

And ever and anon through out his future life an agony
constraineth him to travel from land to land;

Since then, at an uncertain hour,
That agony returns:
And till my ghastly tale is told,
This heart within me burns. 585

I pass, like night, from land to land;
I have strange power of speech;
That moment that his face I see,
I know the man that must hear me:
To him my tale I teach. 590

What loud uproar bursts from that door!
The wedding-guests are there:
But in the garden-bower the bride
And bride-maids singing are:
And hark the little vesper bell, 595
Which biddeth me to prayer!

O Wedding-Guest! this soul hath been
Alone on a wide wide sea:
So lonely 'twas, that God himself
Scarce seeméd there to be. 600

O sweeter than the marriage-feast,
'Tis sweeter far to me,
To walk together to the kirk
With a goodly company!—

To walk together to the kirk, 605
And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends,
Old men, and babes, and loving friends
And youths and maidens gay!

And my poor heart was sad: so at the Moon

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Monthly Magazine for November, 1797. They were reprinted in the Poetical Register for 1803 (1805); by Coleridge in the Biographia Literaria, 1817, i. 26-8*; and by Cottle in Early Recollections, i. 290-2; and in Reminiscences, p. 160. They were first collected in P. and D. W., 1877-80, i. 211-13.

* 'Under the name of Nehemiah Higginbottom I contributed three sonnets, the first of which had for its object to excite a good-natured laugh at the spirit of doleful egotism and at the recurrence of favourite phrases, with the double defect of being at once trite and licentious. The second was on low creeping language and thoughts under the pretence of simplicity. The third, the phrases of which were borrowed entirely from my own poems, on the indiscriminate use of elaborate and swelling language and imagery. . . . So general at the time and so decided was the opinion

TO SIMPLICITY

O! I do love thee, meek Simplicity!
 For of thy lays the lulling simpleness
 Goes to my heart and soothes each small distress,
 Distress though small, yet haply great to me!
 'Tis true on Lady Fortune's gentlest pad 5
 I amble on; yet, though I know not why,
 So sad I am!—but should a friend and I
 Grow cool and miff, O! I am very sad!

concerning the characteristic vices of my style that a celebrated physician (now alas! no more) speaking of me in other respects with his usual kindness to a gentleman who was about to meet me at a dinner-party could not, however, resist giving him a hint not to mention The House that Jack Built in my presence, for that I was as sore as a boil about that sonnet, he not knowing that I was myself the author of it.'

Coleridge's first account of these sonnets in a letter to Cottle [November, 1797] is much to the same effect:—'I sent to the Monthly Magazine (1797) three mock Sonnets in ridicule of my own Poems, and Charles Lloyd's and Lamb's, etc., etc., exposing that affectation of unaffectedness, of jumping and misplaced accent in common-place epithets, flat lines forced into poetry by italics (signifying how well and mouthishly the author would read them), puny pathos, etc., etc. The instances were almost all taken from myself and Lloyd and Lamb. I signed them "Nehemiah Higginbottom". I think they may do good to our young Bards.' [E. R., i. 289; Rem. 160.]

And then with sonnets and with sympathy
 My dreamy bosom's mystic woes I pall;
 Now of my false friend plaining plaintively,
 Now raving at mankind in general;
 But, whether sad or fierce, 'tis simple all,
 All very simple, meek Simplicity!

ON A RUINED HOUSE IN A ROMANTIC COUNTRY

AND this reft house is that the which he built,
 Lamented Jack! And here his malt he pil'd,
 Cautious in vain! These rats that squeak so wild,
 Squeak, not unconscious of their father's guilt.
 Did ye not see her gleaming thro' the glade?
 Belike, 'twas she, the maiden all forlorn.
 What though she milk no cow with crumpled horn,
 Yet aye she haunts the dale where erst she stray'd;
 And aye beside her stalks her amorous knight!
 Still on his thighs their wonted brogues are worn,
 And thro' those brogues, still tatter'd and betorn,
 His hindward charms gleam an unearthly white;
 As when thro' broken clouds at night's high noon
 Peeps in fair fragments forth the full-orb'd harvest-moon!

PREFACE

THE first part of the following poem was written in the year 1797, at Stowey, in the county of Somerset. The second part, after my return from Germany, in the year 1800, at Keswick, Cumberland. It is probable that if the

The earliest, which belonged to Wordsworth, is partly in Coleridge's handwriting and partly in that of Mary Hutchinson (Mrs. Wordsworth). The probable date of this MS., now in the possession of the poet's grandson, Mr. Gordon Wordsworth, is April-October, 1800. Later in the same year, or perhaps in 1801, Coleridge made a copy of the First Part (or Book), the Conclusion to the First Book, and the Second Book, and presented it to Mrs. Wordsworth's sister, Sarah Hutchinson. A facsimile of the MS., now in the possession of Miss Edith Coleridge, was issued in collotype in the edition of Christabel published in PREFACE] Prefixed to the three issues of 1816, and to 1828, 1829, 1834. Christabel—Preface. 2 The year one thousand seven hundred and ninety seven 1816, 1828, 1829. 3, 4 The year one thousand eight hundred 1816, 1828, 1829. 4 after 'Cumberland'] Since the latter date, my poetic powers have been, till very lately, in a state of suspended animation. But as, in my very first conception of the tale, I had the whole present to my mind, with the wholeness, no less than the liveliness of a vision; I trust that I shall be able to embody in verse the three parts yet to come, in the course of the present year. It is probable, &c. 1816, 1828, 1829: om. 1834.

poem had been finished at either of the former periods, or 5 if even the first and second part had been published in the year 1800, the impression of its originality would have been much greater than I dare at present expect. But for this I have only my own indolence to blame. The dates are mentioned for the exclusive purpose of precluding charges of 10 plagiarism or servile imitation from myself. For there is amongst us a set of critics, who seem to hold, that every possible thought and image is traditional; who have no notion that there are such things as fountains in the world, small as well as great; and who would therefore charitably 15 derive every rill they behold flowing, from a perforation

1907, under the auspices of the Royal Society of Literature. In 1801, or at some subsequent period (possibly not till 1815), Miss Hutchinson transcribed Coleridge's MS. The water-mark of the paper is 1801. Her transcript, now in the possession of Mr. A. H. Hallam Murray, was sent to Lord Byron in October, 1815. It is possible that this transcription was the 'copy' for the First Edition published in 1816; but, if so, Coleridge altered the text whilst the poem was passing through the press.

The existence of two other MSS. rests on the authority of John Payne Collier (see Seven Lectures on Shakespeare and Milton. By S. T. Coleridge, 1856, pp. xxxix-xliii).

The first, which remained in his possession for many years, was a copy in the handwriting of Sarah Stoddart (afterwards Mrs. Hazlitt). J. P. Collier notes certain differences between this MS., which he calls the 'Salisbury Copy', and the text of the First Edition. He goes on to say that before Christabel was published Coleridge lent him an MS. in his own handwriting, and he gives two or three readings from the second MS. which differ from the text of the 'Salisbury Copy' and from the texts of those MSS. which have been placed in my hands.

The copy of the First Edition of Christabel presented to William Stewart Rose's valet, David Hinves, on November 11, 1816, which Coleridge had already corrected, is now in the possession of Mr. John Murray. The emendations and additions inscribed on the margin of this volume were included in the collected edition of Coleridge's Poetical Works, published by William Pickering in 1828. The editions of 1829 and 1834 closely followed the edition of 1828, but in 1834 there was in one particular instance (Part I, lines 6-10) a reversion to the text of the First Edition. The MS. of the 'Conclusion of Part II' forms part of a letter to Southey dated May 6, 1801. (Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 355.) The following abbreviations have been employed to note the MSS. and transcriptions of Christabel :—

1. The Wordsworth MS., partly in Coleridge's (lines 1-295) and partly in Mary Hutchinson's (lines 295-655) handwriting = MS. W.
2. The Salisbury MS., copied by Sarah Stoddart = S. T. C. (a).
3. The MS. lent by Coleridge to Payne Collier = S. T. C. (b).
4. Autograph MS. in possession of Miss Edith Coleridge (reproduced in facsimile in 1907) = S. T. C. (c).
5. Transcription made by Sarah Hutchinson = S. H.
6. Corrections made by Coleridge in the Copy of the First Edition presented to David Hinves = H. 1816.

made in some other man's tank. I am confident, however, that as far as the present poem is concerned, the celebrated poets<sup>1</sup> whose writings I might be suspected of having imitated, either in particular passages, or in the tone and the spirit of the whole, would be among the first to vindicate me from the charge, and who, on any striking coincidence, would permit me to address them in this doggerel version of two monkish Latin hexameters.<sup>2</sup>

'Tis mine and it is likewise yours ;
But an if this will not do ;
Let it be mine, good friend ! for I
Am the poorer of the two. 25

I have only to add that the metre of Christabel is not, properly speaking, irregular, though it may seem so from its being founded on a new principle : namely, that of counting in each line the accents, not the syllables. Though the latter may vary from seven to twelve, yet in each line the accents will be found to be only four. Nevertheless, this occasional variation in number of syllables is not introduced wantonly, or for the mere ends of convenience, but in correspondence with some transition in the nature of the imagery or passion. 30 35

PART I

'Tis the middle of night by the castle clock,
And the owls have awakened the crowing cock ;
Tu—whit !——Tu—whoo !
And hark, again ! the crowing cock,
How drowsily it crew. 5

<sup>2</sup> The 'Latin hexameters', 'in the lame and limping metre of a barbarous Latin poet', ran thus :

'Est meum et est tuum, amice ! at si amborum nequit esse,
Sit meum, amice, precor : quia certe sum magi' pauper.'

It is interesting to note that Coleridge translated these lines in November, 1801, long before the 'celebrated poets' in question had made, or seemed to make, it desirable to 'preclude a charge of plagiarism'.

 The night is chill, the cloud is gray: 20
 'Tis a month before the month of May,
 And the Spring comes slowly up this way.

The lovely lady, Christabel,
 Whom her father loves so well,
 What makes her in the wood so late, 25
 A furlong from the castle gate?
 She had dreams all yesternight
 Of her own betrothed knight;
 And she in the midnight wood will pray
 For the weal of her lover that's far away. 30

She stole along, she nothing spoke,
 The sighs she heaved were soft and low,
 And naught was green upon the oak
 But moss and rarest misletoe:

The lovely lady, Christabel!
It moaned as near, as near can be,
But what it is she cannot tell.— 40
On the other side it seems to be,
Of the huge, broad-breasted, old oak tree.

The night is chill; the forest bare;
Is it the wind that moaneth bleak?
There is not wind enough in the air 45
To move away the ringlet curl
From the lovely lady's cheek—
There is not wind enough to twirl
The one red leaf, the last of its clan,
That dances as often as dance it can, 50
Hanging so light, and hanging so high,
On the topmost twig that looks up at the sky.

Hush, beating heart of Christabel!
Jesu, Maria, shield her well!
She folded her arms beneath her cloak, 55
And stole to the other side of the oak.
What sees she there?

There she sees a damsel bright,
Drest in a silken robe of white,
That shadowy in the moonlight shone: 60
The neck that made that white robe wan,
Her stately neck, and arms were bare;
Her blue-veined feet unsandal'd were,
And wildly glittered here and there

The lady strange made answer meet,
And her voice was faint and sweet:—
Have pity on my sore distress,
I scarce can speak for weariness:
Stretch forth thy hand, and have no fear! 75
Said Christabel, How camest thou here?
And the lady, whose voice was faint and sweet,
Did thus pursue her answer meet:—

My sire is of a noble line,
And my name is Geraldine: 80
Five warriors seized me yesternorn,
Me, even me, a maid forlorn:
They choked my cries with force and fright,
And tied me on a palfrey white.
The palfrey was as fleet as wind, 85
And they rode furiously behind.

The motto to Chapter XXIV of The Betrothed (1825) is slightly different:—
Four Ruffians . . . palfrey white.

They spurred amain, their steeds were white:
 And once we crossed the shade of night.
 As sure as Heaven shall rescue me,
 I have no thought what men they be; 90
 Nor do I know how long it is
 (For I have lain entranced I wis)
 Since one, the tallest of the five,
 Took me from the palfrey's back,
 A weary woman, scarce alive. 95
 Some muttered words his comrades spoke:
 He placed me underneath this oak;
 He swore they would return with haste;
 Whither they went I cannot tell—
 I thought I heard, some minutes past, 100
 Sounds as of a castle bell.
 Stretch forth thy hand (thus ended she),
 And help a wretched maid to flee.

Then Christabel stretched forth her hand,
 And comforted fair Geraldine: 105
 O well, bright dame! may you command
 The service of Sir Leoline;
 And gladly our stout chivalry

So up she rose and forth they pass'd
 With hurrying steps yet nothing fast.
 Her lucky stars the lady blest,
 And Christabel she sweetly said—
 All our household are at rest,
 Each one sleeping in his bed:

Her gracious stars the lady blest,
 And thus spake on sweet Christabel: 115
 All our household are at rest,
 The hall as silent as the cell;
 Sir Leoline is weak in health,
 And may not well awakened be,
 But we will move as if in stealth, 120
 And I beseech your courtesy,
 This night, to share your couch with me.

They crossed the moat, and Christabel
 Took the key that fitted well;
 A little door she opened straight, 125
 All in the middle of the gate;
 The gate that was ironed within and without,
 Where an army in battle array had marched out.
 The lady sank, belike through pain,
 And Christabel with might and main 130
 Lifted her up, a weary weight,
 Over the threshold of the gate:
 Then the lady rose again,
 And moved, as she were not in pain.

So free from danger, free from fear, 135
 They crossed the court: right glad they were.
 And Christabel devoutly cried
 To the lady by her side,
 Praise we the Virgin all divine
 Who hath rescued thee from thy distress! 140

Sir Leoline 'is weak in health,
 And may not awakened be,
 So to my room we'll creep in stealth,
 And you to-night must sleep with me.

Alas, alas! said Geraldine,
 I cannot speak for weariness.
 So free from danger, free from fear,
 They crossed the court: right glad they were.

Outside her kennel, the mastiff old 145
 Lay fast asleep, in moonshine cold.
 The mastiff old did not awake,
 Yet she an angry moan did make!
 And what can ail the mastiff bitch?
 Never till now she uttered yell 150
 Beneath the eye of Christabel.
 Perhaps it is the owlet's scritch:
 For what can ail the mastiff bitch? ~~—~~

They passed the hall, that echoes still,
 Pass as lightly as you will! 155
 The brands were flat, the brands were dying,
 Amid their own white ashes lying;
 But when the lady passed, there came
 A tongue of light, a fit of flame; ~~—~~
 And Christabel saw the lady's eye, 160
 And nothing else saw she thereby,
 Save the boss of the shield of Sir Leoline tall,
 Which hung in a murky old niche in the wall.
 O softly tread, said Christabel,
 My father seldom sleepeth well. 165

Sweet Christabel her feet doth bare,
 And jealous of the listening air
 They steal their way from stair to stair,
 Now in glimmer, and now in gloom,
 And now they pass the Baron's room, 170
 As still as death, with stifled breath!

And now doth Geraldine press down

The moon shines dim in the open air, 175

The lamp with twofold silver chain
Is fastened to an angel's feet.

The silver lamp burns dead and dim;
But Christabel the lamp will trim. 185
She trimmed the lamp, and made it bright,
And left it swinging to and fro,
While Geraldine, in wretched plight,
Sank down upon the floor below.

O weary lady, Geraldine, 190
I pray you, drink this cordial wine!
It is a wine of virtuous powers;
My mother made it of wild flowers.

And will your mother pity me,
Who am a maiden most forlorn? 195
Christabel answered—Woe is me!
She died the hour that I was born.
I have heard the grey-haired friar tell
How on her death-bed she did say,
That she should hear the castle-bell 200
Strike twelve upon my wedding-day.
O mother dear! that thou wert here!
I would, said Geraldine, she were!

But soon with altered voice, said she—

Alas! what ails poor Geraldine?
 Why stares she with unsettled eye?
 Can she the bodiless dead espy?
 And why with hollow voice cries she, 210
 'Off, woman, off! this hour is mine—
 Though thou her guardian spirit be,
 Off, woman, off! 'tis given to me.'

Then Christabel knelt by the lady's side,
 And raised to heaven her eyes so blue— 215
 Alas! said she, this ghastly ride—
 Dear lady! it hath wildered you!
 The lady wiped her moist cold brow,
 And faintly said, 'tis over now!'

Again the wild-flower wine she drank: 220
 Her fair large eyes 'gan glitter bright,
 And from the floor whereon she sank,
 The lofty lady stood upright:
 She was most beautiful to see,
 Like a lady of a far countrée. 225

And thus the lofty lady spake—
 'All they who live in the upper sky,
 Do love you, holy Christabel!
 And you love them, and for their sake
 And for the good which me befel, 230
 Even I in my degree will try,
 Fair maiden, to requite you well.
 But now unrobe yourself; for I
 Must pray, ere yet in bed I lie.'

Quoth Christabel, So let it be! 235
 And as the lady bade, did she.
 Her gentle limbs did she undress,
 And lay down in her loveliness.

But through her brain of weal and woe
 So many thoughts moved to and fro, 240
 That vain it were her lids to close;
 So half-way from the bed she rose,

And on her elbow did recline
To look at the lady Geraldine.

Beneath the lamp the lady bowed, 245
And slowly rolled her eyes around;
Then drawing in her breath aloud,
Like one that shuddered, she unbound
The cincture from beneath her breast:
Her silken robe, and inner vest, 250
Dropt to her feet, and full in view,
Behold! her bosom and half her side——
A sight to dream of, not to tell!
O shield her! shield sweet Christabel!

Yet Geraldine nor speaks nor stirs; 255
Ah! what a stricken look was hers!
Deep from within she seems half-way
To lift some weight with sick assay,
And eyes the maid and seeks delay;
Then suddenly, as one defied, 260
Collects herself in scorn and pride,
And lay down by the Maiden's side!—
And in her arms the maid she took,
Ah wel-a-day!
And with low voice and doleful look 265
These words did say:
'In the touch of this bosom there worketh a spell,

THE CONCLUSION TO PART I

It was a lovely sight to see
 The lady Christabel, when she 280
 Was praying at the old oak tree.
     Amid the jagged shadows
     Of mossy leafless boughs,
     Kneeling in the moonlight,
     To make her gentle vows; 285
 Her slender palms together prest,
 Heaving sometimes on her breast;
 Her face resigned to bliss or bale—
 Her face, oh call it fair not pale,
 And both blue eyes more bright than clear, 290
 Each about to have a tear.

With open eyes (ah woe is me!)
 Asleep, and dreaming fearfully,
 Fearfully dreaming, yet, I wis,
 Dreaming that alone, which is— 295
 O sorrow and shame! Can this be she,
 The lady, who knelt at the old oak tree?

A star hath set, a star hath risen,
O Geraldine! since arms of thine
Have been the lovely lady's prison.
O Geraldine! one hour was thine— 305
Thou'st had thy will! By tairn and rill,
The night-birds all that hour were still.
But now they are jubilant anew,
From cliff and tower, tu—whoo! tu—whoo!
Tu—whoo! tu—whoo! from wood and fell! 310

And see! the lady Christabel
Gathers herself from out her trance;
Her limbs relax, her countenance
Grows sad and soft; the smooth thin lids
Close o'er her eyes; and tears she sheds— 315
Large tears that leave the lashes bright!
And oft the while she seems to smile
As infants at a sudden light!

Yea, she doth smile, and she doth weep,
Like a youthful hermitess, 320
Beauteous in a wilderness,
Who, praying always, prays in sleep.
And, if she move unquietly,
Perchance, 'tis but the blood so free
Comes back and tingles in her feet. 325
No doubt, she hath a vision sweet.
What if her guardian spirit 'twere,
What if she knew her mother near?
But this she knows, in joys and woes,
That saints will aid if men will call: 330
For the blue sky bends over all!

306 Tairn or Tarn (derived by Lye from the Icelandic Tiorn, stagnum, palus) is rendered in our dictionaries as synonymous with Mere or Lake; but it is properly a large Pool or Reservoir in the Mountains, commonly the Feeder of some Mere in the valleys. Tarn Watling and Blellum Tarn, though on lower ground than other Tarns, are yet not exceptions, for both are on elevations, and Blellum Tarn feeds the Wynander Mere.

PART II

Each matin bell, the Baron saith,
 Knells us back to a world of death.
 These words Sir Leoline first said,
 When he rose and found his lady dead: 335
 These words Sir Leoline will say
 Many a morn to his dying day!

And hence the custom and law began
 That still at dawn the sacristan,
 Who duly pulls the heavy bell, 340
 Five and forty beads must tell
 Between each stroke—a warning knell,
 Which not a soul can choose but hear
 From Bratha Head to Wyndermere.

Saith Bracy the bard, So let it knell! 345
 And let the drowsy sacristan
 Still count as slowly as he can!
 There is no lack of such, I ween,
 As well fill up the space between.
 In Langdale Pike and Witch's Lair, 350
 And Dungeon-ghyll so foully rent,
 With ropes of rock and bells of air
 Three sinful sextons' ghosts are pent,
 Who all give back, one after t'other,
 The death-note to their living brother; 355
 And oft too, by the knell offended,
 Just as their one! two! three! is ended,
 The devil mocks the doleful tale
 With a merry peal from Borodale.

The air is still! through mist and cloud 360
 That merry peal comes ringing loud;
 And Geraldine shakes off her dread,
 And rises lightly from the bed;
 Puts on her silken vestments white,
 And tricks her hair in lovely plight, 365

And nothing doubting of her spell
 Awakens the lady Christabel.
 'Sleep you, sweet lady Christabel?
 I trust that you have rested well.'

And Christabel awoke and spied 370
 The same who lay down by her side—
 O rather say, the same whom she Raised up beneath the old oak tree!
 Nay, fairer yet! and yet more fair!
 For she belike hath drunken deep 375
 Of all the blessedness of sleep!
 And while she spake, her looks, her air
 Such gentle thankfulness declare,
 That (so it seemed) her girded vests
 Grew tight beneath her heaving breasts. 380
 'Sure I have sinn'd!' said Christabel,
 'Now heaven be praised if all be well!'
 And in low faltering tones, yet sweet,
 Did she the lofty lady greet
 With such perplexity of mind 385
 As dreams too lively leave behind.

So quickly she rose, and quickly arrayed
 Her maiden limbs, and having prayed
 That He, who on the cross did groan,
 Might wash away her sins unknown, 390
 She forthwith led fair Geraldine
 To meet her sire, Sir Leoline.

The lovely maid and the lady tall
 Are pacing both into the hall,
 And pacing on through page and groom, 395
 Enter the Baron's presence-room.

The Baron rose, and while he prest
 His gentle daughter to his breast,
 With cheerful wonder in his eyes
 The lady Geraldine espies, 400
 And gave such welcome to the same,
 As might beseem so bright a dame!

But when he heard the lady's tale,
 And when she told her father's name,
 Why waxed Sir Leoline so pale, 405
 Murmuring o'er the name again,
 Lord Roland de Vaux of Tryermaine?

Alas! they had been friends in youth;
 But whispering tongues can poison truth;
 And constancy lives in realms above; 410
 And life is thorny; and youth is vain;
 And to be wroth with one we love
 Doth work like madness in the brain.
 And thus it chanced, as I divine,
 With Roland and Sir Leoline. 415
 Each spake words of high disdain
 And insult to his heart's best brother:
 They parted—ne'er to meet again!
 But never either found another
 To free the hollow heart from paining— 420
 They stood aloof, the scars remaining,
 Like cliffs which had been rent asunder;
 A dreary sea now flows between;—
 But neither heat, nor frost, nor thunder,
 Shall wholly do away, I ween, 425
 The marks of that which once hath been.

Sir Leoline, a moment's space,
 Stood gazing on the damsel's face:
 And the youthful Lord of Tryermaine
 Came back upon his heart again. 430

O then the Baron forgot his age,
 His noble heart swelled high with rage;
 He swore by the wounds in Jesu's side
 He would proclaim it far and wide,
 With trump and solemn heraldry, 435
 That they, who thus had wronged the dame,
 Were base as spotted infamy!
 'And if they dare deny the same,
 My herald shall appoint a week,
 And let the recreant traitors seek 440
 My tourney court—that there and then
 I may dislodge their reptile souls
 From the bodies and forms of men!
 He spake: his eye in lightning rolls!
 For the lady was ruthlessly seized; and he kenned 445
 In the beautiful lady the child of his friend!

And now the tears were on his face,
 And fondly in his arms he took
 Fair Geraldine, who met the embrace,
 Prolonging it with joyous look. 450
 Which when she viewed, a vision fell
 Upon the soul of Christabel,
 The vision of fear, the touch and pain!
 She shrunk and shuddered, and saw again—
 (Ah, woe is me! Was it for thee, 455
 Thou gentle maid! such sights to see?)

Again she saw that bosom old,
 Again she felt that bosom cold,
 And drew in her breath with a hissing sound:
 Whereat the Knight turned wildly round, 460
 And nothing saw, but his own sweet maid
 With eyes upraised, as one that prayed.

The touch, the sight, had passed away,
 And in its stead that vision blest,
 Which comforted her after-rest 465
 While in the lady's arms she lay,
 Had put a rapture in her breast,
 And on her lips and o'er her eyes
 Spread smiles like light!

With new surprise,
 'What ails then my beloved child?' 470
 The Baron said—His daughter mild
 Made answer, 'All will yet be well!'
 I ween, she had no power to tell
 Aught else: so mighty was the spell.

Yet he, who saw this Geraldine, 475
 Had deemed her sure a thing divine:
 Such sorrow with such grace she blended,
 As if she feared she had offended
 Sweet Christabel, that gentle maid!
 And with such lowly tones she prayed 480
 She might be sent without delay
 Home to her father's mansion.

'Ho! Bracy the bard, the charge be thine!

Go thou, with music sweet and loud, 485

And take the youth whom thou lov'st best

To bear thy harp, and learn thy song,

Yet ne'er found I a friend again

Like Roland de Vaux of Tryermaine.

'Thy words, thou sire of Christabel,
 Are sweeter than my harp can tell;
 Yet might I gain a boon of thee, 525
 This day my journey should not be,
 So strange a dream hath come to me,
 That I had vowed with music loud
 To clear yon wood from thing unblest,
 Warned by a vision in my rest! 530
 For in my sleep I saw that dove,
 That gentle bird, whom thou dost love,
 And call'st by thy own daughter's name—
 Sir Leoline! I saw the same
 Fluttering, and uttering fearful moan, 535
 Among the green herbs in the forest alone.
 Which when I saw and when I heard,
 I wonder'd what might ail the bird;
 For nothing near it could I see,
 Save the grass and green herbs underneath the old tree.

'And in my dream methought I went 541
 To search out what might there be found;
 And what the sweet bird's trouble meant,
 That thus lay fluttering on the ground.
 I went and peered, and could descry 545
 No cause for her distressful cry;
 But yet for her dear lady's sake
 I stooped, methought, the dove to take,
 When lo! I saw a bright green snake
 Coiled around its wings and neck. 550
 Green as the herbs on which it couched,
 Close by the dove's its head it crouched;
 And with the dove it heaves and stirs,
 Swelling its neck as she swelled hers!
 I woke; it was the midnight hour, 555
 The clock was echoing in the tower;
 But though my slumber was gone by,
 This dream it would not pass away—
 It seems to live upon my eye!
 And thence I vowed this self-same day 560
 With music strong and saintly song
 To wander through the forest bare,
 Lest aught unholy loiter there.'

Thus Bracy said: the Baron, the while,
 Half-listening heard him with a smile;
 Then turned to Lady Geraldine,
 His eyes made up of wonder and love;
 And said in courtly accents fine,
 'Sweet maid, Lord Roland's beauteous dove,
 With arms more strong than harp or song,
 Thy sire and I will crush the snake!'
 He kissed her forehead as he spake,
 And Geraldine in maiden wise
 Casting down her large bright eyes,
 With blushing cheek and courtesy fine
 She turned her from Sir Leoline;
 Softly gathering up her train,
 That o'er her right arm fell again;
 And folded her arms across her chest,
 And couched her head upon her breast,
 And looked askance at Christabel——
 Jesu, Maria, shield her well!

A snake's small eye blinks dull and shy;
 And the lady's eyes they shrunk in her head,
 Each shrunk up to a serpent's eye,
 And with somewhat of malice, and more of dread,
 At Christabel she looked askance!—
 One moment—and the sight was fled!
 But Christabel in dizzy trance
 Stumbling on the unsteady ground
 Shuddered aloud, with a hissing sound;
 And Geraldine again turned round,
 And like a thing, that sought relief,
 Full of wonder and full of grief,
 She rolled her large bright eyes divine
 Wildly on Sir Leoline.

The maid, alas! her thoughts are gone,
 She nothing sees—no sight but one!
 The maid, devoid of guile and sin,
 I know not how, in fearful wise,
 So deeply had she drunken in
 That look, those shrunken serpent eyes,

 And thus she stood, in dizzy trance,
 Still picturing that look askance
 With forced unconscious sympathy
 Full before her father's view—— 610
 As far as such a look could be
 In eyes so innocent and blue!

And when the trance was o'er, the maid
 Paused awhile, and inly prayed:
 Then falling at the Baron's feet, 615
 'By my mother's soul do I entreat
 That thou this woman send away!'
 She said: and more she could not say:
 For what she knew she could not tell,
 O'er-mastered by the mighty spell. 620

Why is thy cheek so wan and wild,
 Sir Leoline? Thy only child
 Lies at thy feet, thy joy, thy pride,
 So fair, so innocent, so mild;
 The same, for whom thy lady died! 625
 O by the pangs of her dear mother
 Think thou no evil of thy child!
 For her, and thee, and for no other,
 She prayed the moment ere she died:
 Prayed that the babe for whom she died, 630
 Might prove her dear lord's joy and pride!

That prayer her deadly pangs beguiled,
 Sir Leoline!

And wouldst thou wrong thy only child,
 Her child and thine? 635

Within the Baron's heart and brain
 If thoughts, like these, had any share,

THE CONCLUSION TO PART II

A little child, a limber elf,
 Singing, dancing to itself,
 A fairy thing with red round cheeks,
 That always finds, and never seeks,
 Makes such a vision to the sight 660
 As fills a father's eyes with light ;
 And pleasures flow in so thick and fast
 Upon his heart, that he at last
 Must needs express his love's excess
 With words of unmeant bitterness. 665
 Perhaps 'tis pretty to force together
 Thoughts so all unlike each other ;
 To mutter and mock a broken charm,
 To dally with wrong that does no harm.
 Perhaps 'tis tender too and pretty 670

 And if at Death's dread moment I should lie
 With no beloved face at my bed-side,
 To fix the last glance of my closing eye,
 Methinks such strains, breathed by my angel-guide,
 Would make me pass the cup of anguish by,
 Mix with the blest, nor know that I had died!

Fam. SISTERS! sisters! who sent you here?

Slau. [to Fire]. I will whisper it in her ear.

Fire. No! no! no!

Spirits hear what spirits tell:

'Twill make a holiday in Hell.

No! no! no!

Myself, I named him once below,

And all the souls, that damnéd be,

Leaped up at once in anarchy,

Clapped their hands and danced for glee.

10

They no longer heeded me;

But laughed to hear Hell's burning rafters

Unwillingly re-echo laughter!

No! no! no!

Spirits hear what spirits tell:

'Twill make a holiday in Hell!

Fam. Whisper it, sister! so and so!

In a dark hint, soft and slow.

And who sent you?

FROST AT MIDNIGHT<sup>1</sup>

THE Frost performs its secret ministry,
 Unhelped by any wind. The owlet's cry
 Came loud—and hark, again! loud as before.
 The inmates of my cottage, all at rest,
 Have left me to that solitude, which suits
 Abstruser musings: save that at my side
 My cradled infant slumbers peacefully.
 'Tis calm indeed! so calm, that it disturbs
 And vexes meditation with its strange
 And extreme silentness. Sea, hill, and wood,
 This populous village! Sea, and hill, and wood,
 With all the numberless goings-on of life,
 Inaudible as dreams! the thin blue flame
 Lies on my low-burnt fire, and quivers not;
 Only that film,<sup>2</sup> which fluttered on the grate,
 Still flutters there, the sole unquiet thing.
 Methinks, its motion in this hush of nature
 Gives it dim sympathies with me who live,
 Making it a companionable form,
 Whose puny flaps and freaks the idling Spirit

With which I can hold commune. Idle thought!
 But still the living spirit in our frame,
 That loves not to behold a lifeless thing,
 Transfuses into all its own delights,
 Its own volition, sometimes with deep faith
 And sometimes with fantastic playfulness.

By its own moods interprets, every where
 Echo or mirror seeking of itself,
 And makes a toy of Thought.

But O! how oft,
 How oft, at school, with most believing mind,
 Presageful, have I gazed upon the bars, 25
 To watch that fluttering stranger! and as oft
 With unclosed lids, already had I dreamt
 Of my sweet birth-place, and the old church-tower,
 Whose bells, the poor man's only music, rang
 From morn to evening, all the hot Fair-day, 30
 So sweetly, that they stirred and haunted me
 With a wild pleasure, falling on mine ear
 Most like articulate sounds of things to come!
 So gazed I, till the soothing things, I dreamt,
 Lulled me to sleep, and sleep prolonged my dreams! 35
 And so I brooded all the following morn,
 Awed by the stern preceptor's face, mine eye
 Fixed with mock study on my swimming book:
 Save if the door half opened, and I snatched
 A hasty glance, and still my heart leaped up, 40

Ah me! amus'd by no such curious toys
 Of the self-watching subtilizing mind,
 How often in my early school-boy days
 With most believing superstitious wish. 40.

With which I can hold commune: haply hence,
 That still the living spirit in our frame,
 Which loves not to behold a lifeless thing,
 Transfuses into all things its own Will,
 And its own pleasures; sometimes with deep faith,
 And sometimes with a wilful playfulness
 That stealing pardon from our common sense
 Smiles, as self-scornful, to disarm the scorn
 For these wild reliques of our childish Thought,
 That flit about, oft go, and oft return
 Not uninvited.

Ah there was a time,
 When oft amused by no such subtle toys
 Of the self-watching mind, a child at school,
 With most believing superstitious wish. P. R.

For still I hoped to see the stranger's face,

Dear Babe, that sleepest cradled by my side,
 Whose gentle breathings, heard in this deep calm, 45
 Fill up the intersperséd vacancies
 And momentary pauses of the thought!
 My babe so beautiful! it thrills my heart
 With tender gladness, thus to look at thee,
 And think that thou shalt learn far other lore, 50
 And in far other scenes! For I was reared
 In the great city, pent 'mid cloisters dim,
 And saw nought lovely but the sky and stars.
 But thou, my babe! shalt wander like a breeze
 By lakes and sandy shores, beneath the crags 55
 Of ancient mountain, and beneath the clouds,
 Which image in their bulk both lakes and shores
 And mountain crags: so shalt thou see and hear
 The lovely shapes and sounds intelligible
 Of that eternal language, which thy God 60
 Utters, who from eternity doth teach
 Himself in all, and all things in himself.
 Great universal Teacher! he shall mould
 Thy spirit, and by giving make it ask.

Therefore all seasons shall be sweet to thee, 65
 Whether the summer clothe the general earth
 With greenness, or the redbreast sit and sing
 Betwixt the tufts of snow on the bare branch
 Of mossy apple-tree, while the nigh thatch
 Smokes in the sun-thaw; whether the eave-drops fall 70

I

YE Clouds! that far above me float and pause,
 Whose pathless march no mortal may controul!
 Ye Ocean-Waves! that, wheresoe'er ye roll,
 Yield homage only to eternal laws!

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Post, April 16, 1798: included in quarto pamphlet published by J. Johnson, 1798: reprinted in Morning Post, Oct. 14, 1802: included in Poetical Register for 1808-9 (1812); in Fears in Solitude, &c., printed by Law and Gilbert, (?) 1812; in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, 1828, 1829, and 1834. Lines 85, 98 are quoted from 'France, a Palinodia', in Biog. Lit., 1817, i. 195. To the first Morning Post version (1798) an editorial note was prefixed:—

ORIGINAL POETRY.

The following excellent Ode will be in unison with the feelings of every friend to Liberty and foe to Oppression; of all who, admiring the French Revolution, detest and deplore the conduct of France towards Switzerland. It is very satisfactory to find so zealous and steady an advocate for Freedom as Mr. COLERIDGE concur with us in condemning the conduct of France towards the Swiss Cantons. Indeed his concurrence is not singular; we know of no Friend to Liberty who is not of his opinion. What we most admire is the avowal of his sentiments, and public censure of the unprincipled and atrocious conduct of France. The Poem itself is written with great energy. The second, third, and fourth stanzas contain some of the most vigorous lines we have ever read. The lines in the fourth stanza:—

'To scatter rage and trait'rous guilt
 Where Peace her jealous home had built,'

to the end of the stanza are particularly expressive and beautiful.

To the second Morning Post version (1802) a note and Argument were prefixed:—

The following ODE was first published in this paper (in the beginning of the year 1798) in a less perfect state. The present state of France and

Ye Woods! that listen to the night-birds singing, 5
 Midway the smooth and perilous slope reclined,
 Save when your own imperious branches swinging,
 Have made a solemn music of the wind!
 Where, like a man beloved of God,
 Through glooms, which never woodman trod, 10
 How oft, pursuing fancies holy,
 My moonlight way o'er flowering weeds I wound,
 Inspired, beyond the guess of folly,
 By each rude shape and wild unconquerable sound!
 O ye loud Waves! and O ye Forests high! 15
 And O ye Clouds that far above me soared!
 Thou rising Sun! thou blue rejoicing Sky!
 Yea, every thing that is and will be free!
 Bear witness for me, wheresoe'er ye be,
 With what deep worship I have still adored 20
 The spirit of divinest Liberty.

Switzerland give it so peculiar an interest at the present time that we wished to re-publish it and accordingly have procured from the Author a corrected copy.

ARGUMENT.

'First Stanza. An invocation to those objects in Nature the contemplation of which had inspired the Poet with a devotional love of Liberty. Second Stanza. The exultation of the Poet at the commencement of the French Revolution, and his unqualified abhorrence of the Alliance against the Republic. Third Stanza. The blasphemies and horrors during the domination of the Terrorists regarded by the Poet as a transient storm, and as the natural consequence of the former despotism and of the foul superstition of Popery. Reason, indeed, began to suggest many apprehensions; yet still the Poet struggled to retain the hope that France would make conquests by no other means than by presenting to the observation of Europe a people more happy and better instructed than under other forms of Government. Fourth Stanza. Switzerland, and the Poet's recantation. Fifth Stanza. An address to Liberty, in which the Poet expresses his conviction that those feelings and that grand ideal of Freedom which the mind attains by its contemplation of its individual nature, and of the sublime surrounding objects (see Stanza the First) do not belong to men, as a society, nor can possibly be either gratified or realised, under any form of human government; but belong to the individual man, so far as he is pure, and inflamed with the love and adoration of God in Nature.'

II

When France in wrath her giant-limbs upreared,
 And with that oath, which smote air, earth, and sea,
 Stamped her strong foot and said she would be free,
 Bear witness for me, how I hoped and feared! 25
 With what a joy my lofty gratulation
 Unawed I sang, amid a slavish band:
 And when to whelm the disenchanted nation,
 Like fiends embattled by a wizard's wand,
 The Monarchs marched in evil day, 30
 And Britain joined the dire array;
 Though dear her shores and circling ocean,
 Though many friendships, many youthful loves
 Had swoln the patriot emotion
 And flung a magic light o'er all her hills and groves; 35
 Yet still my voice, unaltered, sang defeat
 To all that braved the tyrant-quelling lance,
 And shame too long delayed and vain retreat!
 For ne'er, O Liberty! with partial aim
 I dimmed thy light or damped thy holy flame; 40
 But blessed the paeans of delivered France,
 And hung my head and wept at Britain's name.

III

'And what,' I said, 'though Blasphemy's loud scream
 With that sweet music of deliverance strove!
 Though all the fierce and drunken passions wove 45
 A dance more wild than e'er was maniac's dream!
 Ye storms, that round the dawning East assembled,
 The Sun was rising, though ye hid his light!'
 And when, to soothe my soul, that hoped and trembled,
 The dissonance ceased, and all seemed calm and bright; 50

 Her arm made mockery of the warrior's ramp;

 Domestic treason, crushed beneath her fatal stamp,
 Writhed like a wounded dragon in his gore;
 Then I reproached my fears that would not flee;

Forgive me, Freedom! O forgive those dreams!

 From bleak Helvetia's icy caverns sent—

 Heroes, that for your peaceful country perished,
 And ye that, fleeing, spot your mountain-snows
 With bleeding wounds; forgive me, that I cherished 70
 One thought that ever blessed your cruel foes!
 To scatter rage, and traitorous guilt,
 Where Peace her jealous home had built;
 A patriot-race to disinherit
 Of all that made their stormy wilds so dear; 75
 And with inexorable spirit
 To taint the bloodless freedom of the mountaineer—
 O France, that mockest Heaven, adulterous, blind,
 And patriot only in pernicious toils!
 Are these thy boasts, Champion of human kind? 80

The Sensual and the Dark rebel in vain, 85
 Slaves by their own compulsion! In mad game
 They burst their manacles and wear the name
 Of Freedom, graven on a heavier chain!
 O Liberty! with profitless endeavour
 Have I pursued thee, many a weary hour; 90
 But thou nor swell'st the victor's strain, nor ever
 Didst breathe thy soul in forms of human power.
 Alike from all, howe'er they praise thee,
 (Nor prayer, nor boastful name delays thee)
 Alike from Priestcraft's harpy minions, 95
 And factious Blasphemy's obscener slaves,
 Thou speedest on thy subtle pinions,
 The guide of homeless winds, and playmate of the waves!
 And there I felt thee!—on that sea-cliff's verge,
 Whose pines, scarce travelled by the breeze above, 100
 Had made one murmur with the distant surge!
 Yes, while I stood and gazed, my temples bare,
 And shot my being through earth, sea, and air,
 Possessing all things with intensest love,
 O Liberty! my spirit felt thee there. 105

 But sweet is pity to an agéd breast.
 This voice did falter with old age before; 5
 Sad recollections make it falter more.
 Beside the torrent and beneath a wood,
 High in these Alps my summer cottage stood;
 One daughter still remain'd to cheer my way,
 The evening-star of life's declining day: 10
 Duly she hied to fill her milking-pail,
 Ere shout of herdsmen rang from cliff or vale;
 When she return'd, before the summer shiel,
 On the fresh grass she spread the dairy meal;
 Just as the snowy peaks began to lose 15
 In glittering silver lights their rosy hues.
 Singing in woods or bounding o'er the lawn,
 No blither creature hail'd the early dawn;
 And if I spoke of hearts by pain oppress'd,
 When every friend is gone to them that rest; 20
 Or of old men that leave, when they expire,
 Daughters, that should have perish'd with their sire—
 Leave them to toil all day through paths unknown,
 And house at night behind some sheltering stone;
 Impatient of the thought, with lively cheer 25
 She broke half-closed the tasteless tale severe.
 She play'd with fancies of a gayer hue,
 Enamour'd of the scenes her wishes drew;
 And oft she prattled with an eager tongue
 Of promised joys that would not loiter long, 30

Coleridge affixed the signature Nicias Erythraeus to these lines and to Lewti, which was published in the Morning Post five weeks later, April 13, 1798. Till with her tearless eyes so bright and fair,
 She seem'd to see them realis'd in air!
 In fancy oft, within some sunny dell,
 Where never wolf should howl or tempest yell,
 She built a little home of joy and rest, 35
 And fill'd it with the friends whom she lov'd best:
 She named the inmates of her fancied cot,
 And gave to each his own peculiar lot;
 Which with our little herd abroad should roam,
 And which should tend the dairy's toil at home, 40
 And now the hour approach'd which should restore
 Her lover from the wars, to part no more.
 Her whole frame fluttered with uneasy joy;
 I long'd myself to clasp the valiant boy;
 And though I strove to calm her eager mood, 45
 It was my own sole thought in solitude.
 I told it to the Saints amid my hymns—
 For O! you know not, on an old man's limbs
 How thrillingly the pleasant sun-beams play,
 That shine upon his daughter's wedding-day. 50
 I hoped, that those fierce tempests, soon to rave
 Unheard, unfelt, around my mountain grave,
 Not undelightfully would break her rest,
 While she lay pillow'd on her lover's breast;
 Or join'd his pious prayer for pilgrims driven 55
 Out to the mercy of the winds of heaven.
 Yes! now the hour approach'd that should restore
 Her lover from the wars to part no more.
 Her thoughts were wild, her soul was in her eye,
 She wept and laugh'd as if she knew not why; 60
 And she had made a song about the wars,
 And sang it to the sun and to the stars!
 But while she look'd and listen'd, stood and ran,
 And saw him plain in every distant man,
 By treachery stabbed, on Nansy's murderous day, 65
 A senseless corse th' expected husband lay.
 A wounded man, who met us in the wood,
 Heavily ask'd her where my cottage stood,
 And told us all: she cast her eyes around
 As if his words had been but empty sound. 70
 Then look'd to Heav'n, like one that would deny
 That such a thing could be beneath the sky.
Again he ask'd her if she knew my name,
 And instantly an anguish wrench'd her frame,
 And left her mind imperfect. No delight 75

Thenceforth she found in any cheerful sight,
 Not ev'n in those time-haunted wells and groves,
 Scenes of past joy, and birth-place of her loves.
 If to her spirit any sound was dear,
 'Twas the deep moan that spoke the tempest near; 80
 Or sighs which chasms of icy vales outbreathe,
 Sent from the dark, imprison'd floods beneath.
 She wander'd up the crag and down the slope,
 But not, as in her happy days of hope,
 To seek the churning-plant of sovereign power, 85
 That grew in clefts and bore a scarlet flower!
 She roam'd, without a purpose, all alone,
 Thro' high grey vales unknowing and unknown.

Kind-hearted stranger! patiently you hear
 A tedious tale: I thank you for that tear. 90
 May never other tears o'ercloud your eye,
 Than those which gentle Pity can supply!
 Did you not mark a towering convent hang,
 Where the huge rocks with sounds of torrents rang?
 Ev'n yet, methinks, its spiry turrets swim 95
 Amid yon purple gloom ascending dim!
 For thither oft would my poor child repair,
 To ease her soul by penitence and prayer.
 I knew that peace at good men's prayers returns
 Home to the contrite heart of him that mourns, 100
 And check'd her not; and often there she found
 A timely pallet when the evening frown'd.
 And there I trusted that my child would light
 On shelter and on food, one dreadful night,
 When there was uproar in the element, 105
 And she was absent. To my rest I went:
 I thought her safe, yet often did I wake
 And felt my very heart within me ache.
 No daughter near me, at this very door,
 Next morn I listen'd to the dying roar. 110
 Above, below, the prowling vulture wail'd,
 And down the cliffs the heavy vapour sail'd.
 Up by the wide-spread waves in fury torn,
 Homestalls and pines along the vale were borne.
 The Dalesmen in thick crowds appear'd below
 Clearing the road, o'erwhelm'd with hills of snow. 115
 At times to the proud gust's ascending swell,
 A pack of blood-hounds flung their doleful yell:

For after nights of storm, that dismal train
 The pious convent sends, with hope humane, 120
 To find some out-stretch'd man—perchance to save,
 Or give, at least, that last good gift, a grave!
 But now a gathering crowd did I survey,
 That slowly up the pasture bent their way;
 Nor could I doubt but that their care had found 125
 Some pilgrim in th' unchannel'd torrent drown'd.
 And down the lawn I hasten'd to implore
 That they would bring the body to my door;
 But soon exclaim'd a boy, who ran before,
 'Thrown by the last night's waters from their bed, 130
 Your daughter has been found, and she is dead!'

The old man paused—May he who, sternly just,
 Lays at his will his creatures in the dust;
 Some ere the earliest buds of hope be blown,
 And some, when every bloom of joy is flown; 135
 May he the parent to his child restore
 In that unchanging realm, where Love reigns evermore!

TO A YOUNG LADY<sup>1</sup>

[MISS LAVINIA POOLE]

ON HER RECOVERY FROM A FEVER

WHY need I say, Louisa dear!
 How glad I am to see you here,
     A lovely convalescent;
 Risen from the bed of pain and fear,
     And feverish heat incessant.

The sunny showers, the dappled sky,
 The little birds that warble high,
     Their vernal loves commencing,
 Will better welcome you than I
     With their sweet influencing.

10

Believe me, while in bed you lay,
 Your danger taught us all to pray:
     You made us grow devouter!
 Each eye looked up and seemed to say,
     How can we do without her?

15

Besides, what vexed us worse, we knew,
 They have no need of such as you
     In the place where you were going:
 This World has angels all too few,
     And Heaven is overflowing!

OR THE CIRCASSIAN LOVE-CHAUNT

AT midnight by the stream I roved,
 To forget the form I loved.
 Image of Lewti! from my mind
 Depart; for Lewti is not kind.
 The Moon was high, the moonlight gleam 5
 And the shadow of a star
 Heaved upon Tamaha's stream;
 But the rock shone brighter far,
 The rock half sheltered from my view
 By pendent boughs of tressy yew.— 10
 So shines my Lewti's forehead fair,
 Gleaming through her sable hair.
 Image of Lewti! from my mind
 Depart; for Lewti is not kind.

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Post (under the signature Nicias Erythraeus), April 13, 1798: included in the Annual Anthology, 1800; Sibylline Leaves, 1817, 1828, 1829, and 1834. For MS. versions vide Appendices. 'Lewti was to have been included in the Lyrical Ballads of 1798, but at the last moment the sheets containing it were cancelled and The Nightingale substituted.' (Note to reprint of L. B. (1898), edited by T. Hutchinson.) A copy which belonged to Southey, with the new Table of Contents and The Nightingale bound up with the text as at first printed, is in the British Museum. Another copy is extant which contains the first Table of Contents only, and Lewti without the addition of The Nightingale. In the M. P. the following note accompanies the poem:—
 ✓ 'It is not amongst the least pleasing of our recollections, that we have been the means of gratifying the public taste with some exquisite pieces of Original Poetry. For many of them we have been indebted to the author of the Circassian's Love Chant. Amidst images of war and woe, amidst scenes of carnage and horror of devastation and dismay, it may afford the mind a temporary relief to wander to the magic haunts of the Muses, to bowers and fountains which the despoiling powers of war have never visited, and where the lover pours forth his complaint, or receives the recompense of his constancy. The whole of the subsequent Love Chant is in a warm and impassioned strain. The fifth and last stanzas are, we think, the best.'

Between lines 14-15

I saw the white waves, o'er and o'er,
 Break against the distant shore.

I saw a cloud of palest hue, 15
 Onward to the moon it passed;
 Still brighter and more bright it grew,
 With floating colours not a few,
 Till it reached the moon at last:
 Then the cloud was wholly bright, 20
 With a rich and amber light!
 And so with many a hope I seek,
 And with such joy I find my Lewti;
 And even so my pale wan cheek
 Drinks in as deep a flush of beauty! 25
 Nay, treacherous image! leave my mind,
 If Lewti never will be kind.

The little cloud—it floats away,
 Away it goes; away so soon!
 Alas! it has no power to stay: 30
 Its hues are dim, its hues are grey—
 Away it passes from the moon!
 How mournfully it seems to fly,
 Ever fading more and more,
 To joyless regions of the sky— 35
 And now 'tis whiter than before!
 As white as my poor cheek will be,
 When, Lewti! on my couch I lie,
 A dying man for love of thee.
 Nay, treacherous image! leave my mind— 40
 And yet, thou didst not look unkind.

I saw a vapour in the sky,
 Thin, and white, and very high;

All at once upon the sight,
 All at once they broke in light;
 I heard no murmur of their roar,
 Nor ever I beheld them flowing,
 Neither coming, neither going;
 But only saw them o'er and o'er,
 Break against the curved shore:
 Now disappearing from the sight,
 Now twinkling regular and white,
 And LEWTI's smiling mouth can shew
 As white and regular a row.
 Nay, treach'rous image from my mind
 Depart; for LEWTI is not kind. M. P.

I ne'er beheld so thin a cloud:
 Perhaps the breezes that can fly 45
 Now below and now above,
 Have snatched aloft the lawny shroud<sup>1</sup>
 Of Lady fair—that died for love.
 For maids, as well as youths, have perished
 From fruitless love too fondly cherished. 50
 Nay, treacherous image! leave my mind—
 For Lewti never will be kind.

✓ Hush! my heedless feet from under Slip the crumbling banks for ever:
 Like echoes to a distant thunder, 55
 They plunge into the gentle river.
 The river-swans have heard my tread,
 And startle from their reedy bed.
 O beauteous birds! methinks ye measure
 Your movements to some heavenly tune! 60
 O beauteous birds! 'tis such a pleasure
 To see you move beneath the moon,
 I would it were your true delight
 To sleep by day and wake all night.

<sup>1</sup> This image was borrowed by Miss Bailey (sic) in her Basil as the dates of the poems prove. MS. Note by S. T. C.

52 For] Tho' M. P.

Between lines 52-3

This hand should make his life-blood flow,
 That ever scorn'd my LEWTI so.

I cannot chuse but fix my sight
 On that small vapour, thin and white!
 So thin it scarcely, I protest,
 Bedims the star that shines behind it!
 And pity dwells in LEWTI's breast
 Alas! if I knew how to find it.
 And O! how sweet it were, I wist,
 To see my LEWTI's eyes to-morrow
 Shine brightly thro' as thin a mist
 Of pity and repentant sorrow!
 Nay treach'rous image! leave my mind—
 Ah, LEWTI! why art thou unkind?

53 Hush!] Slush! Sibylline Leaves (Errata, S. L., p. [xi], for Slush r. Hush).

I know the place where Lewti lies, 65
 When silent night has closed her eyes :
 It is a breezy jasmine-bower,
 The nightingale sings o'er her head:
 Voice of the Night! had I the power
 That leafy labyrinth to thread, 70
 And creep, like thee, with soundless tread,
 I then might view her bosom white
 Heaving lovely to my sight,
 As these two swans together heave
 On the gently-swelling wave. 75

Oh! that she saw me in a dream,
 And dreamt that I had died for care;
 All pale and wasted I would seem,
 Yet fair withal, as spirits are!
 I'd die indeed, if I might see 80
 Her bosom heave, and heave for me!
 Soothe, gentle image! soothe my mind!
 To-morrow Lewti may be kind.

FEARS IN SOLITUDE<sup>1</sup>

No singing sky-lark ever poised himself.
 The hills are heathy, save that swelling slope,
 Which hath a gay and gorgeous covering on, 5
 All golden with the never-bloomless furze,
 Which now blooms most profusely: but the dell,
 Bathed by the mist, is fresh and delicate
 As vernal corn-field, or the unripe flax,
 When, through its half-transparent stalks, at eve, 10
 The level sunshine glimmers with green light.
 Oh! 'tis a quiet spirit-healing nook!
 Which all, methinks, would love; but chiefly he,
 The humble man, who, in his youthful years,
 Knew just so much of folly, as had made 15
 His early manhood more securely wise!
 Here he might lie on fern or withered heath,
 While from the singing lark (that sings unseen
 The minstrelsy that solitude loves best),
 And from the sun, and from the breezy air, 20
 Sweet influences trembled o'er his frame;
 And he, with many feelings, many thoughts,
 Made up a meditative joy, and found
 Religious meanings in the forms of Nature!
 And so, his senses gradually wrapt 25
 In a half sleep, he dreams of better worlds,
 And dreaming hears thee still, O singing lark,
 That singest like an angel in the clouds!

My God! it is a melancholy thing
 For such a man, who would full fain preserve 30
 His soul in calmness, yet perforce must feel
 For all his human brethren—O my God!
 It weighs upon the heart, that he must think reprinted in the Morning Post, Oct. 14, 1802. They follow the reprint of France: an Ode, and are thus prefaced:—'The following extracts are made from a Poem by the same author, written in April 1798 during the alarm respecting the threatened invasion.' They were included in The Friend, No. II (June 8, 1809), as Fears of Solitude.<sup>1</sup> An autograph MS. (in the possession of Professor Dowden), undated but initialled S. T. Some parts are, I am conscious, too tame even for animated prose.' An autograph MS. dated (as below 232) is in the possession of Mr. Gordon Wordsworth.

What uproar and what strife may now be stirring
 This way or that way o'er these silent hills— 35
 Invasion, and the thunder and the shout,
 And all the crash of onset; fear and rage,
 And undetermined conflict—even now,
 Even now, perchance, and in his native isle:
 Carnage and groans beneath this blessed sun! 40
 We have offended, Oh! my countrymen!
 We have offended very grievously,
 And been most tyrannous. From east to west
 A groan of accusation pierces Heaven!
 The wretched plead against us; multitudes 45
 Countless and vehement, the sons of God,
 Our brethren! Like a cloud that travels on,
 Steamed up from Cairo's swamps of pestilence,
 Even so, my countrymen! have we gone forth
 And borne to distant tribes slavery and pangs, 50
 And, deadlier far, our vices, whose deep taint
 With slow perdition murders the whole man,
 His body and his soul! Meanwhile, at home,
 All individual dignity and power
 Engulfed in Courts, Committees, Institutions, 55
 Associations and Societies,
 A vain, speech-mouthing, speech-reporting Guild,
 One Benefit-Club for mutual flattery,
 We have drunk up, demure as at a grace,
 Pollutions from the brimming cup of wealth; 60
 Contemptuous of all honourable rule,
 Yet bartering freedom and the poor man's life
 For gold, as at a market! The sweet words
 Of Christian promise, words that even yet
 Might stem destruction, were they wisely preached, 65

[Lines 54-8 of the text were added in Sibylline Leaves, 1817.]

Are muttered o'er by men, whose tones proclaim
 How flat and wearisome they feel their trade:
 Rank scoffers some, but most too indolent
 To deem them falsehoods or to know their truth.
 Oh! blasphemous! the Book of Life is made 70
 A superstitious instrument, on which
 We gabble o'er the oaths we mean to break;
 For all must swear—all and in every place,
 College and wharf, council and justice-court;
 All, all must swear, the briber and the bribed, 75
 Merchant and lawyer, senator and priest,
 The rich, the poor, the old man and the young;
 All, all make up one scheme of perjury,
 That faith doth reel; the very name of God
 Sounds like a juggler's charm; and, bold with joy, 80
 Forth from his dark and lonely hiding-place,
 (Portentous sight!) the owlet Atheism,
 Sailing on obscene wings athwart the noon,
 Drops his blue-fringed lids, and holds them close,
 And hooting at the glorious sun in Heaven, 85
 Cries out, 'Where is it?'

Thankless too for peace,
 (Peace long preserved by fleets and perilous seas)
 Secure from actual warfare, we have loved
 To swell the war-whoop, passionate for war!
 Alas! for ages ignorant of all 90
 Its ghastlier workings, (famine or blue plague, Battle, or siege, or flight through wintry snows,)

We, this whole people, have been clamorous
 For war and bloodshed; animating sports,
 The which we pay for as a thing to talk of, 95
 Spectators and not combatants! No guess
 Anticipative of a wrong unfelt,
 No speculation on contingency,
 However dim and vague, too vague and dim
 To yield a justifying cause; and forth, 100
 (Stuffed out with big preamble, holy names,
 And adjurations of the God in Heaven,)

We send our mandates for the certain death
 Of thousands and ten thousands! Boys and girls,
 And women, that would groan to see a child 105
 Pull off an insect's leg, all read of war,

The best amusement for our morning meal!
 The poor wretch, who has learnt his only prayers
 From curses, who knows scarcely words enough
 To ask a blessing from his Heavenly Father, 110
 Becomes a fluent phraseman, absolute
 And technical in victories and defeats,
 And all our dainty terms for fratricide;
 Terms which we trundle smoothly o'er our tongues
 Like mere abstractions, empty sounds to which 115
 We join no feeling and attach no form!
 As if the soldier died without a wound;
 As if the fibres of this godlike frame
 Were gored without a pang; as if the wretch,
 Who fell in battle, doing bloody deeds, 120
 Passed off to Heaven, translated and not killed;
 As though he had no wife to pine for him,
 No God to judge him! Therefore, evil days
 Are coming on us, O my countrymen!
 And what if all-avenging Providence, 125
 Strong and retributive, should make us know
 The meaning of our words, force us to feel
 The desolation and the agony
 Of our fierce doings?

Spare us yet awhile,
 Father and God! O! spare us yet awhile! 130
 Oh! let not English women drag their flight
 Fainting beneath the burthen of their babes,
 Of the sweet infants, that but yesterday
 Laughed at the breast! Sons, brothers, husbands, all
 Who ever gazed with fondness on the forms 135
 Which grew up with you round the same fire-side,
 And all who ever heard the sabbath-bells
 Without the infidel's scorn, make yourselves pure!

I walk with awe, and sing my stately songs,
Loving the God that made me!—

May my fears,

My filial fears, be vain! and may the vaunts
And menace of the vengeful enemy
Pass like the gust, that roared and died away 200
In the distant tree: which heard, and only heard
In this low dell, bowed not the delicate grass.

But now the gentle dew-fall sends abroad
The fruit-like perfume of the golden furze:
The light has left the summit of the hill, 205
Though still a sunny gleam lies beautiful,
Aslant the ivied beacon. Now farewell,
Farewell, awhile, O soft and silent spot!
On the green sheep-track, up the heathy hill,
Homeward I wind my way; and lo! recalled 210
From bodings that have well-nigh wearied me,
I find myself upon the brow, and pause
Startled! And after lonely sojourning
In such a quiet and surrounded nook,
This burst of prospect, here the shadowy main, 215
Dim-tinted, there the mighty majesty
Of that huge amphitheatre of rich
And elmy fields, seems like society—
Conversing with the mind, and giving it
A livelier impulse and a dance of thought! 220
And now, beloved Stowey! I behold
Thy church-tower, and, methinks, the four huge elms
Clustering, which mark the mansion of my friend;
And close behind them, hidden from my view,
Is my own lowly cottage, where my babe 225
And my babe's mother dwell in peace! With light
And quickened footsteps thitherward I tend,
Remembering thee, O green and silent dell!
And grateful, that by nature's quietness
And solitary musings, all my heart 230
Is softened, and made worthy to indulge
Love, and the thoughts that yearn for human kind.

THE NIGHTINGALE<sup>1</sup>

A CONVERSATION POEM, APRIL, 1798

No cloud, no relique of the sunken day
 Distinguishes the West, no long thin slip
 Of sullen light, no obscure trembling hues.
 Come, we will rest on this old mossy bridge!
 You see the glimmer of the stream beneath, 5
 But hear no murmuring: it flows silently,
 O'er its soft bed of verdure. All is still,
 A balmy night! and though the stars be dim,
 Yet let us think upon the vernal showers
 That gladden the green earth, and we shall find 10
 A pleasure in the dimness of the stars.
 And hark! the Nightingale begins its song,
 'Most musical, most melancholy' bird!<sup>2</sup>
 A melancholy bird? Oh! idle thought!
 In Nature there is nothing melancholy. 15
 But some night-wandering man whose heart was pierced
 With the remembrance of a grievous wrong,
 Or slow distemper, or neglected love,
 (And so, poor wretch! filled all things with himself,
 And made all gentle sounds tell back the tale 20
 Of his own sorrow) he, and such as he,
 First named these notes a melancholy strain.
 And many a poet echoes the conceit;
 Poet who hath been building up the rhyme

<sup>1</sup> First published in Lyrical Ballads, 1798, reprinted in Lyrical Ballads, 1800, 1802, and 1805: included in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, 1828, 1829, and 1834.

<sup>2</sup> 'Most musical, most melancholy.' This passage in Milton possesses an excellence far superior to that of mere description; it is spoken in the character of the melancholy Man, and has therefore a dramatic propriety. The Author makes this remark, to rescue himself from the charge of having alluded with levity to a line in Milton; a charge than which none could be more painful to him, except perhaps that of having ridiculed his Bible. Footnote to l. 13 *L. When he had better far have stretched his limbs 25
 Beside a brook in mossy forest-dell,
 By sun or moon-light, to the influxes
 Of shapes and sounds and shifting elements
 Surrendering his whole spirit, of his song
 And of his fame forgetful! so his fame 30
 Should share in Nature's immortality,
 A venerable thing! and so his song
 Should make all Nature lovelier, and itself
 Be loved like Nature! But 'twill not be so;
 And youths and maidens most poetical, 35
 Who lose the deepening twilights of the spring
 In ball-rooms and hot theatres, they still
 Full of meek sympathy must heave their sighs
 O'er Philomela's pity-pleading strains.

My Friend, and thou, our Sister! we have learnt 40
 A different lore: we may not thus profane
 Nature's sweet voices, always full of love
 And joyance! 'Tis the merry Nightingale
 That crowds, and hurries, and precipitates
 With fast thick warble his delicious notes, 45
 As he were fearful that an April night
 Would be too short for him to utter forth
 His love-chant, and disburthen his full soul
 Of all its music!

And I know a grove
 Of large extent, hard by a castle huge, 50
 Which the great lord inhabits not; and so
 This grove is wild with tangling underwood,
 And the trim walks are broken up, and grass,
 Thin grass and king-cups grow within the paths.
 But never elsewhere in one place I knew 55
 So many nightingales; and far and near,
 In wood and thicket, over the wide grove,
 They answer and provoke each other's song,
 With skirmish and capricious passagings,
 And murmurs musical and swift jug jug, 60
 And one low piping sound more sweet than all—
 Stirring the air with such a harmony,

 Forget it was not day! On moonlight bushes,
 Whose dewy leaflets are but half-disclosed, 65
 You may perchance behold them on the twigs,
 Their bright, bright eyes, their eyes both bright and full,
 Glistening, while many a glow-worm in the shade
 Lights up her love-torch.

A most gentle Maid,
 Who dwelleth in her hospitable home 70
 Hard by the castle, and at latest eve
 (Even like a Lady vowed and dedicate
 To something more than Nature in the grove)
 Glides through the pathways; she knows all their notes,
 That gentle Maid! and oft, a moment's space, 75
 What time the moon was lost behind a cloud,
 Hath heard a pause of silence; till the moon
 Emerging, hath awakened earth and sky
 With one sensation, and those wakeful birds
 Have all burst forth in choral minstrelsy, 80
 As if some sudden gale had swept at once
 A hundred airy harps! And she hath watched
 Many a nightingale perch giddily
 On blossomy twig still swinging from the breeze,
 And to that motion tune his wanton song 85
 Like tipsy Joy that reels with tossing head.

Farewell, O Warbler! till to-morrow eve,
 And you, my friends! farewell, a short farewell!
 We have been loitering long and pleasantly,
 And now for our dear homes.—That strain again! 90
 Full fain it would delay me! My dear babe,
 Who, capable of no articulate sound,
 Mars all things with his imitative lisp,
 How he would place his hand beside his ear,
 His little hand, the small forefinger up, 95
 And bid us listen! And I deem it wise
 To make him Nature's play-mate. He knows well
 The evening-star; and once, when he awoke
 In most distressful mood (some inward pain
 Had made up that strange thing, an infant's dream—) 100

 It is a father's tale: But if that Heaven
 Should give me life, his childhood shall grow up
 Familiar with these songs, that with the night
 He may associate joy.—Once more, farewell,
 Sweet Nightingale! once more, my friends! farewell. 110

THE THREE GRAVES<sup>1</sup>

A FRAGMENT OF A SEXTON'S TALE

'THE Author has published the following humble fragment, encouraged by the decisive recommendation of more than one of our most celebrated living Poets. The language was intended to be dramatic; that is, suited to the narrator; and the metre corresponds to the homeliness of the diction. It is therefore presented as the fragment, not of a Poem, but of a common Ballad-tale.<sup>2</sup> Whether this is sufficient to justify the adoption of such a style, in any metrical composition not professedly ludicrous, the Author is himself in some doubt. At all events, it is not presented as poetry, and it is in no way connected with the Author's judgment concerning poetic diction. Its merits, if any, are exclusively psychological. The <sup>1</sup> Parts III and IV of the Three Graves were first published in The Friend, No. VI, September 21, 1809. They were included in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, 1828, 1829, and 1834. Parts I and II, which were probably written in the spring of 1798, at the same time as Parts III and IV, were first published, from an autograph MS. copy, in Poems, 1893. [For evidence of date compare ll. 255-8 with Dorothy Wordsworth's Alfoxden Journal for March 20, 24, and April 6, 8.] The original MS. of Parts III and IV is not forthcoming. The MS. of the poem as published in The Friend is in the handwriting of Miss Sarah Stoddart (afterwards Mrs. Hazlitt), and is preserved with other 'copy' of The Friend (of which the greater part is in the handwriting of Miss Sarah Hutchinson) in the Forster Collection which forms part of the Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington. The preface and emendations are in the handwriting of S. T. C. The poem was reprinted in the British Minstrel, Glasgow, 1821 as 'a modern ballad of the very first rank'. In a marginal note in Mr. Samuel's copy of Sibylline Leaves Coleridge writes:—'This very poem was selected, notwithstanding the preface, as a proof of my judgment and poetic diction, and a fair specimen of the style of my poems generally (see the Mirror): nay! the very words of the preface were used, omitting the not,' &c. See for this and other critical matter, Lyrical Ballads, 1798, edited by Thomas Hutchinson, 1898. Notes, p. 257.

story which must be supposed to have been narrated in the first and second parts is as follows:—

‘Edward, a young farmer, meets at the house of Ellen her bosom-friend Mary, and commences an acquaintance, which ends in a mutual attachment. With her consent, and by the advice of their common friend Ellen, he announces his hopes and intentions to Mary’s mother, a widow-woman bordering on her fortieth year, and from constant health, the possession of a competent property, and from having had no other children but Mary and another daughter (the father died in their infancy), retaining for the greater part her personal attractions and comeliness of appearance; but a woman of low education and violent temper. The answer which she at once returned to Edward’s application was remarkable—“Well, Edward! you are a handsome young fellow, and you shall have my daughter.” From this time all their wooing passed under the mother’s eye; and, in fine, she became herself enamoured of her future son-in-law, and practised every art, both of endearment and of calumny, to transfer his affections from her daughter to herself. (The outlines of the Tale are positive facts, and of no very distant date, though the author has purposely altered the names and the scene of action, as well as invented the characters of the parties and the detail of the incidents.) Edward, however, though perplexed by her strange detractions from her daughter’s good qualities, yet in the innocence of his own heart still mistook<sup>1</sup> her increasing fondness for motherly affection; she at length, overcome by her miserable passion, after much abuse of Mary’s temper and moral tendencies, exclaimed with violent emotion—“O Edward! indeed, indeed, she is not fit for you—she has not a heart to love you as you deserve. It is I that love you! Marry me, Edward! and I will this very day settle all my property on you.” The Lover’s eyes were now opened; and thus taken by surprise, whether from the effect of the horror which he felt, acting as it were hysterically on his nervous system, or that at the first moment he lost the sense of the guilt of the proposal in the feeling of its strangeness and absurdity, he flung her from him and burst into a fit of laughter. Irritated by this almost to frenzy, the woman fell on her knees, and in a loud voice that approached to a scream, she prayed for a curse both on him and on her own child. Mary happened to be in the room directly above them, heard Edward’s laugh, and her mother’s blasphemous prayer, and fainted away. He, hearing the fall, ran upstairs, and taking her in his arms, carried her off to Ellen's home; and after some fruitless attempts on her part toward a reconciliation with her mother, she was married to him.—And here the third part of the Tale begins.

'I was not led to choose this story from any partiality to tragic, much less to monstrous events (though at the time that I composed the verses, somewhat more than twelve years ago, I was less averse to such subjects than at present), but from finding in it a striking proof of the possible effect on the imagination, from an idea violently and suddenly impressed on it. I had been reading Bryan Edwards's account of the effects of the Oby witchcraft on the Negroes in the West Indies, and Hearne's deeply interesting anecdotes of similar workings on the imagination of the Copper Indians (those of my readers who have it in their power will be well repaid for the trouble of referring to those works for the passages alluded to); and I conceived the design of shewing that instances of this kind are not peculiar to savage or barbarous tribes, and of illustrating the mode in which the mind is affected in these cases, and the progress and symptoms of the morbid action on the fancy from the beginning.

'The Tale is supposed to be narrated by an old Sexton, in a country church-yard, to a traveller whose curiosity had been awakened by the appearance of three graves, close by each other, to two only of which there were grave-stones. On the first of these was the name, and dates, as usual: on the second, no name, but only a date, and the words, "The Mercy of God is infinite."<sup>1</sup>'' S. L. 1817, 1828, 1829.

BENEATH this thorn when I was young,
This thorn that blooms so sweet,
We loved to stretch our lazy limbs
In summer's noon-tide heat.

<sup>1</sup> In the first issue of The Friend, No. VI, September 21, 1809, the poem was thus introduced:—'As I wish to commence the important Subject of—The Principles of political Justice with a separate number of THE FRIEND, and shall at the same time comply with the wishes communicated to me by one of my female Readers, who writes as the representative of many others, I shall conclude this Number with the following Fragment, or the third and fourth [second and third MS. S.T.C.] parts of a Tale consisting of six. The two last parts may be given hereafter, if the present should appear to have afforded pleasure, and to have answered the purpose of a relief and amusement to my Readers. The story as it is contained in the first and second parts is as follows: Edward a young farmer, etc.'

4 In the silent summer heat MS. alternative reading.

And hither too the old man came, 5
 The maiden and her feer,
 'Then tell me, Sexton, tell me why

 But still it blossoms sweet; 10
 Then tell me why all round its roots

 There, there a ruthless mother lies
 Beneath the flowery thorn;
 And there a barren wife is laid, 20
 And there a maid forlorn.
 The barren wife and maid forlorn
 Did love each other dear;
 The ruthless mother wrought the woe,
 And cost them many a tear. 25
 Fair Ellen was of serious mind,
 Her temper mild and even,
 And Mary, graceful as the fir
 That points the spire to heaven.
 Young Edward he to Mary said, 30
 'I would you were my bride,'
 And she was scarlet as he spoke,
 And turned her face to hide.
 'You know my mother she is rich,
 And you have little gear; 35
 And go and if she say not Nay,
 Then I will be your fere.'
 Young Edward to the mother went,
 To him the mother said:

 You shall my daughter wed.' 40

'And when to-morrow's sun shines forth
 The maid shall be a bride';
 Thus Edward to the mother spake
 While she sate by his side. 65

Alone they sate within the bower:
 The mother's colour fled,
 For Mary's foot was heard above—
 She decked the bridal bed.

And when her foot was on the stairs 70
 To meet her at the door,
 With steady step the mother rose,
 And silent left the bower.

She stood, her back against the door,
 And when her child drew near— 75
 ‘Away! away!’ the mother cried,
 ‘Ye shall not enter here.

‘Would ye come here, ye maiden vile,
 And rob me of my mate?’
 And on her child the mother scowled 80
 A deadly leer of hate.

Fast rooted to the spot, you guess,
 The wretched maiden stood,
 As pale as any ghost of night
 That wanteth flesh and blood. 85

She did not groan, she did not fall,
 She did not shed a tear,
 Nor did she cry, ‘Oh! mother, why
 May I not enter here?’

But wildly up the stairs she ran, 90
 As if her sense was fled,
 And then her trembling limbs she threw
 Upon the bridal bed.

The mother she to Edward went
 Where he sate in the bower, 95
 And said, ‘That woman is not fit
 To be your paramour.

‘She is my child—it makes my heart
 With grief and trouble swell;
 I rue the hour that gave her birth, 100
 For never worse befel.

‘For she is fierce and she is proud,
 And of an envious mind;
 A wily hypocrite she is,
 And giddy as the wind. 105

‘And if you go to church with her,
 You’ll rue the bitter smart;
 For she will wrong your marriage-bed,
 And she will break your heart.

8r A deadly] The ghastly MS. erased.

‘Oh God, to think that I have shared
Her deadly sin so long;
She is my child, and therefore I
As mother held my tongue. 110

‘She is my child, I’ve risked for her
My living soul’s estate: 115
I cannot say my daily prayers,
The burthen is so great.

‘And she would scatter gold about
Until her back was bare;
And should you swing for lust of hers 120
In truth she’d little care.’

Then in a softer tone she said,
And took him by the hand:
‘Sweet Edward, for one kiss of your’s
I’d give my house and land. 125

‘And if you’ll go to church with me,
And take me for your bride,
I’ll make you heir of all I have—
Nothing shall be denied.’

Then Edward started from his seat, 130
And he laughed loud and long—
‘In truth, good mother, you are mad,
Or drunk with liquor strong.’

To him no word the mother said,
But on her knees she fell, 135
And fetched her breath while thrice your hand
Might toll the passing-bell.

‘Thou daughter now above my head,
Whom in my womb I bore,
May every drop of thy heart’s blood 140
Be curst for ever more.

‘And curséd be the hour when first
I heard thee wawl and cry;
And in the Church-yard curséd be
The grave where thou shalt lie!’ 145

And Mary on the bridal-bed
 Her mother's curse had heard;
 And while the cruel mother spake
 The bed beneath her stirred.

In wrath young Edward left the hall, 150
 And turning round he sees
 The mother looking up to God
 And still upon her knees.

Young Edward he to Mary went
 When on the bed she lay: 155
 'Sweet love, this is a wicked house—
 Sweet love, we must away.'

He raised her from the bridal-bed,
 All pale and wan with fear;
 'No Dog,' quoth he, 'if he were mine, 160
 No Dog would kennel here.'

He led her from the bridal-bed,
 He led her from the stairs.
 [Had sense been hers she had not dar'd
 To venture on her prayers. MS. erased.]

The mother still was in the bower,
 And with a greedy heart 165
 She drank perdition on her knees,
 Which never may depart.

But when their steps were heard below
 On God she did not call;
 She did forget the God of Heaven, 170
 For they were in the hall.

She started up—the servant maid
 Did see her when she rose;
 And she has oft declared to me
 The blood within her froze. 175

As Edward led his bride away
 And hurried to the door,
 The ruthless mother springing forth
 Stopped midway on the floor.

What did she mean? What did she mean? 180
 For with a smile she cried:
 'Unblest ye shall not pass my door,
 The bride-groom and his bride.

Be blithe as lambs in April are,
 As flies when fruits are red ;
 May God forbid that thought of me
 Should haunt your marriage-bed. 185

'And let the night be given to bliss,
 The day be given to glee:
 I am a woman weak and old,
 Why turn a thought on me? 190

'What can an agéd mother do,
 And what have ye to dread?
 A curse is wind, it hath no shape
 To haunt your marriage-bed.' 195

When they were gone and out of sight
 She rent her hoary hair,
 And foamed like any Dog of June
 When sultry sun-beams glare.

* * * * *

Now ask you why the barren wife,
 And why the maid forlorn,
 And why the ruthless mother lies
 Beneath the flowery thorn? 200

Three times, three times this spade of mine,
 In spite of bolt or bar,
 Did from beneath the belfry come,
 When spirits wandering are. 205

And when the mother's soul to Hell
 By howling fiends was borne,
 This spade was seen to mark her grave
 Beneath the flowery thorn. 210

And when the death-knock at the door
 Called home the maid forlorn,
 This spade was seen to mark her grave
 Beneath the flowery thorn. 215

And 'tis a fearful, fearful tree ;
 The ghosts that round it meet,
 'Tis they that cut the rind at night,
 Yet still it blossoms sweet.

PART III<sup>1</sup>

- The grapes upon the Vicar's wall 220
 Were ripe as ripe could be;
 And yellow leaves in sun and wind
 Were falling from the tree.
- On the hedge-elms in the narrow lane
 Still swung the spikes of corn: 225
 Dear Lord! it seems but yesterday—
 Young Edward's marriage-morn.
- Up through that wood behind the church,
 There leads from Edward's door
 A mossy track, all over boughed, 230
 For half a mile or more.
- And from their house-door by that track
 The bride and bridegroom went;
 Sweet Mary, though she was not gay,
 Seemed cheerful and content. 235
- But when they to the church-yard came,
 I've heard poor Mary say,
 As soon as she stepped into the sun,
 Her heart it died away.
- And when the Vicar join'd their hands, 240
 Her limbs did creep and freeze:
 But when they prayed, she thought she saw
 Her mother on her knees.

And o'er the church-path they returned—
 I saw poor Mary's back,
 Just as she stepped beneath the boughs
 Into the mossy track.

245

Her feet upon the mossy track
 The married maiden set:
 That moment—I have heard her say—
 She wished she could forget.

250

The shade o'er-flushed her limbs with heat—
 Then came a chill like death:
 And when the merry bells rang out,
 They seemed to stop her breath.

255

Beneath the foulest mother's curse
 No child could ever thrive:
 A mother is a mother still,
 The holiest thing alive.

So five months passed: the mother still
 Would never heal the strife;
 But Edward was a loving man
 And Mary a fond wife.

260

'My sister may not visit us,
 My mother says her nay:
 O Edward! you are all to me,
 I wish for your sake I could be
 More lifesome and more gay.

265

'I'm dull and sad! indeed, indeed
 I know I have no reason!
 Perhaps I am not well in health,
 And 'tis a gloomy season.'

270

'Twas a drizzly time—no ice, no snow!
 And on the few fine days
 She stirred not out, lest she might meet
 Her mother in the ways.

275

But Ellen, spite of miry ways
 And weather dark and dreary,
 Trudged every day to Edward's house,
 And made them all more cheery.

280

Oh! Ellen was a faithful friend,
 More dear than any sister!
 As cheerful too as singing lark;
 And she ne'er left them till 'twas dark,
 And then they always missed her. 285

And now Ash-Wednesday came—that day
 But few to church repair:
 For on that day you know we read
 The Commination prayer.

Our late old Vicar, a kind man,
 Once, Sir, he said to me, 290
 He wished that service was clean out
 Of our good Liturgy.

The mother walked into the church—
 To Ellen's seat she went: 295
 Though Ellen always kept her church
 All church-days during Lent.

And gentle Ellen welcomed her
 With courteous looks and mild:
 Thought she, 'What if her heart should melt, 300
 And all be reconciled!'

The day was scarcely like a day—
 The clouds were black outright:
 And many a night, with half a moon,
 I've seen the church more light. 305

The wind was wild; against the glass
 The rain did beat and bicker;
 The church-tower swinging over head,
 You scarce could hear the Vicar!

And then and there the mother knelt,
 And audibly she cried— 310
 'Oh! may a clinging curse consume
 This woman by my side!

'O hear me, hear me, Lord in Heaven,
 Although you take my life— 315
 O curse this woman, at whose house
 Young Edward woo'd his wife.

'By night and day, in bed and bower,
O let her curséd be!!!'

So having prayed, steady and slow, 320
She rose up from her knee!
And left the church, nor e'er again
The church-door entered she.

I saw poor Ellen kneeling still,
So pale! I guessed not why: 325
When she stood up, there plainly was
A trouble in her eye.

And when the prayers were done, we all
Came round and asked her why:
Giddy she seemed, and sure, there was 330
A trouble in her eye.

But ere she from the church-door stepped
She smiled and told us why:
'It was a wicked woman's curse,'
Quoth she, 'and what care I?' 335

She smiled, and smiled, and passed it off
Ere from the door she stept—
But all agree it would have been Much better had she wept.

And if her heart was not at ease, 340
This was her constant cry—
'It was a wicked woman's curse—
God's good, and what care I?'

There was a hurry in her looks,
Her struggles she redoubled: 345
'It was a wicked woman's curse,
And why should I be troubled?'

These tears will come—I dandled her
When 'twas the merest fairy—
Good creature! and she hid it all: 350
She told it not to Mary.

But Mary heard the tale: her arms
Round Ellen's neck she threw;
'O Ellen, Ellen, she cursed me,
And now she hath cursed you!' 355

I saw young Edward by himself
 Stalk fast adown the lee,
 He snatched a stick from every fence,
 A twig from every tree.

 He snapped them still with hand or knee, 360
 And then away they flew!
 As if with his uneasy limbs
 He knew not what to do!

 You see, good sir! that single hill?
 His farm lies underneath: 365
 He heard it there, he heard it all,
 And only gnashed his teeth.

 Now Ellen was a darling love
 In all his joys and cares:
 And Ellen's name and Mary's name 370
 Fast-linked they both together came,
 Whene'er he said his prayers.

 And in the moment of his prayers
 He loved them both alike:
 Yea, both sweet names with one sweet joy 375
 Upon his heart did strike!

 He reach'd his home, and by his looks
 They saw his inward strife:
 And they clung round him with their arms,
 Both Ellen and his wife. 380

 And Mary could not check her tears,
 So on his breast she bowed;
 Then frenzy melted into grief,
 And Edward wept aloud.

 Dear Ellen did not weep at all, 385
 But closelier did she cling,
 And turned her face and looked as if
 She saw some frightful thing.

PART IV

To see a man tread over graves
 I hold it no good mark;
 'Tis wicked in the sun and moon, 390
 And bad luck in the dark!

You see that grave? The Lord he gives,
 The Lord, he takes away:
 O Sir! the child of my old age 395
 Lies there as cold as clay.

Except that grave, you scarce see one
 That was not dug by me;
 I'd rather dance upon 'em all
 Than tread upon these three! 400

'Aye, Sexton! 'tis a touching tale.'
 You, Sir! are but a lad;
 This month I'm in my seventieth year,
 And still it makes me sad.

And Mary's sister told it me, 405
 For three good hours and more;
 Though I had heard it, in the main,
 From Edward's self, before.

Well! it passed off! the gentle Ellen
 Did well nigh dote on Mary; 410
 And she went oftener than before,
 And Mary loved her more and more:
 She managed all the dairy.

To market she on market-days,
 To church on Sundays came; 415
 All seemed the same: all seemed so, Sir!
 But all was not the same!

Had Ellen lost her mirth? Oh! no!
 But she was seldom cheerful;
 And Edward looked as if he thought 420
 That Ellen's mirth was fearful.

When by herself, she to herself
 Must sing some merry rhyme;
 She could not now be glad for hours,
 Yet silent all the time. 425

And when she soothed her friend, through all
 Her soothing words 'twas plain
 She had a sore grief of her own,
 A haunting in her brain.

- And oft she said, I'm not grown thin! 430
And then her wrist she spanned;
And once when Mary was down-cast,
She took her by the hand,
And gazed upon her, and at first
She gently pressed her hand; 435
Then harder, till her grasp at length
Did gripe like a convulsion!
'Alas!' said she, 'we ne'er can be Made happy by compulsion!'
And once her both arms suddenly 440
Round Mary's neck she flung,
And her heart panted, and she felt
The words upon her tongue.
She felt them coming, but no power
Had she the words to smother; 445
And with a kind of shriek she cried,
'Oh Christ! you're like your mother!'
So gentle Ellen now no more
Could make this sad house cheery;
And Mary's melancholy ways 450
Drove Edward wild and weary.
Lingering he raised his latch at eve,
Though tired in heart and limb:
He loved no other place, and yet
Home was no home to him. 455
One evening he took up a book,
And nothing in it read;
Then flung it down, and groaning cried,
'O! Heaven! that I were dead.'
Mary looked up into his face, 460
And nothing to him said;
She tried to smile, and on his arm
Mournfully leaned her head.
And he burst into tears, and fell
Upon his knees in prayer: 465
'Her heart is broke! O God! my grief,
It is too great to bear!'

'Twas such a foggy time as makes
 Old sextons, Sir! like me,
 Rest on their spades to cough; the spring 470
 Was late uncommonly.

And then the hot days, all at once,
 They came, we knew not how:
 You looked about for shade, when scarce
 A leaf was on a bough. 475

It happened then ('twas in the bower,
 A furlong up the wood:
 Perhaps you know the place, and yet
 I scarce know how you should,)

No path leads thither, 'tis not nigh 480
 To any pasture-plot;
 But clustered near the chattering brook,
 Lone hollies marked the spot.

Those hollies of themselves a shape
 As of an harbour took, 485
 A close, round harbour; and it stands
 Not three strides from a brook.

Within this harbour, which was 'still
 With scarlet berries hung,
 Were these three friends, one Sunday morn, 490
 Just as the first bell rung.

'Tis sweet to hear a brook, 'tis sweet
 To hear the Sabbath-bell,
 'Tis sweet to hear them both at once,
 Deep in a woody dell. 495

His limbs along the moss, his head
 Upon a mossy heap,
 With shut-up senses, Edward lay:
 That brook e'en on a working day
 Might chatter one to sleep. 500

And he had passed a restless night,
 And was not well in health;
 The women sat down by his side,
 And talked as 'twere by stealth.

'The Sun peeps through the close thick leaves, 505
 See, dearest Ellen! see!
 'Tis in the leaves, a little sun,
 No bigger than your ee;

'A tiny sun, and it has got
 A perfect glory too; 510
 Ten thousand threads and hairs of light,
 Make up a glory gay and bright
 Round that small orb, so blue.'

And then they argued of those rays,
 What colour they might be; 515
 Says this, 'They're mostly green'; says that,
 'They're amber-like to me.'

So they sat chatting, while bad thoughts
 Were troubling Edward's rest;
 But soon they heard his hard quick pants,
 And the thumping in his breast. 520

'A mother too!' these self-same words
 Did Edward mutter plain;
 His face was drawn back on itself,
 With horror and huge pain. 525

Both groaned at once, for both knew well
 What thoughts were in his mind;
 When he waked up, and stared like one
 That hath been just struck blind.

He sat upright; and ere the dream
 Had had time to depart, 530
 'O God, forgive me!' (he exclaimed)
 'I have torn out her heart.'

Then Ellen shrieked, and forthwith burst
 Into ungentle laughter;
 And Mary shivered, where she sat,
 And never she smiled after. 535

THE WANDERINGS OF CAIN<sup>1</sup>

PREFATORY NOTE

A PROSE composition, one not in metre at least, seems primâ facie to require explanation or apology. It was written in the year 1798, near Nether Stowey, in Somersetshire, at which place (sanctum et amabile nomen! rich by so many associations and recollections) the author had taken up his residence in order to enjoy the society and close neighbourhood of a dear and honoured friend, T. Poole, Esq. The work was to

A rough draft of a continuation or alternative version of the Wanderings of Cain was found among Coleridge's papers. The greater portion of these fragmentary sheets was printed by the Editor, in the Athenaeum of January 27, 1894, p. 114. The introduction of 'alligators' and an 'immense meadow' help to fix the date of The Wanderings of Cain. The imagery is derived from William Bartram's Travels in Florida and Carolina, which Coleridge and Wordsworth studied in 1798. Mr. Hutchinson, who reprints (Lyrical Ballads of 1798, Notes, pp. 259-60) a selected passage from the MS. fragment, points out 'that Coleridge had for a time thought of shaping the poem as a narrative addressed by Cain to his wife'.

'He falls down in a trance—when he awakes he sees a luminous body coming before him. It stands before him an orb of fire. It goes on, he moves not. It returns to him again, again retires as if wishing him to follow it. It then goes on and he follows: they are led to near the bottom of the wild woods, brooks, forests etc. etc. The Fire gradually shapes itself, retaining its luminous appearance, into the lineaments of a man. A dialogue between the fiery shape and Cain, in which the being presses upon him the enormity of his guilt and that he must make some expiation to the true deity, who is a severe God, and persuades him to burn out his eyes. Cain opposes this idea, and says that God himself who had inflicted this punishment upon him, had done it because he neglected to make a proper use of his senses, etc. The evil spirit answers him that God is indeed a God of mercy, and that an example must be given to mankind, that this end will be answered by his terrible appearance, at the same time he will be gratified with the most delicious sights and feelings. Cain, over-persuaded, consents to do it, but wishes to go to the top of the rocks to take a farewell of the earth. His farewell speech concluding with an abrupt address to the promised redeemer, and he abandons the idea on which the being had accompanied him, and turning round to declare this to the being have been written in concert with another [Wordsworth], whose name is too venerable within the precincts of genius to be unnecessarily brought into connection with such a trifle, and who was then residing at a small distance from Nether Stowey. The title and subject were suggested by myself, who likewise drew out the scheme and the contents for each of the three books or cantos, of which the work was to consist, and which, the reader is to be informed, was to have been finished in one night! My partner undertook the first canto: I the second: and which ever had done first, was to set about the third. Almost thirty years have passed by; yet at this moment I cannot without something more than a smile moot the question which of the two things was the more impracticable, for a mind so eminently original to compose another man's thoughts and fancies, or for a taste so austere pure and simple to imitate the Death of Abel? Methinks I see his grand and noble countenance as at the moment when having despatched my own portion of the task at full finger-speed, I hastened to him with my manuscript—he sees him dancing from rock to rock in his former shape down those interminable precipices.

'Child affeared by his father's ravings, goes out to pluck the fruits in the moonlight wildness. Cain's soliloquy. Child returns with a pitcher of water and a cake. Cain wonders what kind of beings dwell in that place—whether any created since man or whether this world had any beings rescued from the Chaos, wandering like shipwrecked beings from another world etc.

'Midnight on the Euphrates. Cedars, palms, pines. Cain discovered sitting on the upper part of the ragged rock, where is cavern overlooking the Euphrates, the moon rising on the horizon. His soliloquy. The Beasts are out on the ramp—he hears the screams of a woman and children surrounded by tigers. Cain makes a soliloquy debating whether he shall save the woman. Cain advances, wishing death, and the tigers rush off. It proves to be Cain's wife with her two children, determined to follow her husband. She prevails upon him at last to tell his story. Cain's wife tells him that her son Enoch was placed suddenly by her side. Cain addresses all the elements to cease for a while to persecute him, while he tells his story. He begins with telling her that he had first after his leaving her found out a dwelling in the desert under a juniper tree etc., etc., how he meets in the desert a young man whom upon a nearer approach he perceives to be Abel, on whose countenance appears marks of the greatest misery . . . of another being who had power after this life, greater than Jehovah. He is going to offer sacrifices to this being, and persuades Cain to follow him—he comes to an immense gulph filled with water, whither they descend followed by alligators etc. They go till they come to an immense meadow so surrounded as to be inaccessible, and from its depth so vast that you could not see it from above. Abel offers sacrifice from the blood of his arm. A gleam of light illumines the meadow—the countenance of Abel becomes more beautiful, and his arms glistening—he then persuades Cain to offer sacrifice, for himself and his son Enoch by cutting his child's arm and letting the blood fall from it. Cain is about to do it when Abel himself in his angelic appearance, attended by Michael, is seen in the heavens, whence they sail slowly down. Abel addresses Cain with terror, warning him not to offer up his innocent child. The evil spirit throws off the countenance of Abel, assumes its own shape, flies off pursuing a flying battle with Michael. Abel carries off the child.'

that look of humourous despondency fixed on his almost blank sheet of paper, and then its silent mock-piteous admission of failure struggling with the sense of the exceeding ridiculousness of the whole scheme—which broke up in a laugh: and the Ancient Mariner was written instead.

Years afterward, however, the draft of the plan and proposed incidents, and the portion executed, obtained favour in the eyes of more than one person, whose judgment on a poetic work could not but have weighed with me, even though no parental partiality had been thrown into the same scale, as a make-weight: and I determined on commencing anew, and composing the whole in stanzas, and made some progress in realising this intention, when adverse gales drove my bark off the 'Fortunate Isles' of the Muses: and then other and more momentous interests prompted a different voyage, to firmer anchorage and a securer port. I have in vain tried to recover the lines from the palimpsest tablet of my memory: and I can only offer the introductory stanza, which had been committed to writing for the purpose of procuring a friend's judgment on the metre, as a specimen:—

Encinctured with a twine of leaves,
That leafy twine his only dress!
A lovely Boy was plucking fruits,
By moonlight, in a wilderness.
(In a moonlight wilderness Aids to Reflection, 1825.)
The moon was bright, the air was free,
And fruits and flowers together grew
On many a shrub and many a tree:
And all put on a gentle hue,
Hanging in the shadowy air
Like a picture rich and rare.
It was a climate where, they say,
The night is more belov'd than day.
But who that beauteous Boy beguil'd,
That beauteous Boy to linger here?
Alone, by night, a little child,
In place so silent and so wild—
Has he no friend, no loving mother near?

I have here given the birth, parentage, and premature decease of the 'Wanderings of Cain, a poem',—intreating, however, my Readers, not to think so meanly of my judgment as to suppose that I either regard or offer it as any excuse for the publication of the following fragment (and I may add, of one or two others in its neighbourhood) in its primitive crudity. But I should find still greater difficulty in forgiving myself were I to record pro laedio publico a set of petty mishaps and annoyances which I myself wish to forget. I must be content therefore with assuring the friendly Reader, that the less he attributes its appearance to the Author's will, choice, or judgment, the nearer to the truth he will be.

S. T. COLERIDGE (1828).

THE WANDERINGS OF CAIN

CANTO II

'A LITTLE further, O my father, yet a little further, and we shall come into the open moonlight.' Their road was through a forest of fir-trees; at its entrance the trees stood at distances from each other, and the path was broad, and the moonlight and the moonlight shadows reposed upon it, and appeared quietly to inhabit that solitude. But soon the path winded and became narrow; the sun at high noon sometimes speckled, but never illumined it, and now it was dark as a cavern.

10 'It is dark, O my father!' said Enos, 'but the path under our feet is smooth and soft, and we shall soon come out into the open moonlight.'

'Lead on, my child!' said Cain; 'guide me, little child!' And the innocent little child clasped a finger of the hand which had murdered the righteous Abel, and he guided his father. 'The fir branches drip upon thee, my son.' 'Yea, pleasantly, father, for I ran fast and eagerly to bring thee the pitcher and the cake, and my body is not yet cool. How happy the squirrels are that feed on these fir-trees! they leap from bough to bough, and the old squirrels play round their young ones in the nest. I clomb a tree yesterday at noon, O my father, that I might play with them, but they leaped away from the branches, even to the slender twigs did they leap, and in a moment I beheld them on another tree. Why, O my father, would they not play with me? I would be good to them as thou art good to me: and I groaned to them even as thou groanest when thou givest me to eat, and when thou coverest me at evening, and as often as I stand at thy knee and thine eyes look at me?' Then Cain stopped, and stifling his groans he sank to the earth, and the child Enos stood in the darkness beside him.

And Cain lifted up his voice and cried bitterly, and said, 'The Mighty One that persecuteth me is on this side and on that; he pursueth my soul like the wind, like the sand-blast he passeth through me; he is around me even as the air! O that I might be utterly no more! I desire to die—yea, with me? Is it because we are not so happy, as they? Is it because I groan sometimes even as thou groanest? Then Cain stopped, &c. MS. Bijou, 1828.

the things that never had life, neither move they upon the earth—behold! they seem precious to mine eyes. O that a man might live without the breath of his nostrils. So I might abide in darkness, and blackness, and an empty <sup>40</sup> space! Yea, I would lie down, I would not rise, neither would I stir my limbs till I became as the rock in the den of the lion, on which the young lion resteth his head whilst he sleepeth. For the torrent that roareth far off hath a voice: and the clouds in heaven look terribly on me; the Mighty One <sup>45</sup> who is against me speaketh in the wind of the cedar grove; and in silence am I dried up.’ Then Enos spake to his father, ‘Arise, my father, arise, we are but a little way from the place where I found the cake and the pitcher.’ And Cain said, ‘How knowest thou!’ and the child answered—‘Behold the <sup>50</sup> bare rocks are a few of thy strides distant from the forest; and while even now thou wert lifting up thy voice, I heard the echo.’ Then the child took hold of his father, as if he would raise him: and Cain being faint and feeble rose slowly on his knees and pressed himself against the trunk of a fir, <sup>55</sup> and stood upright and followed the child.

The path was dark till within three strides’ length of its termination, when it turned suddenly; the thick black trees formed a low arch, and the moonlight appeared for a moment like a dazzling portal. Enos ran before and stood in the open <sup>60</sup> air; and when Cain, his father, emerged from the darkness, the child was affrighted. For the mighty limbs of Cain were wasted as by fire; his hair was as the matted curls on the hison’s forehead, and so glared his fierce and sullen eye beneath: and the black abundant locks on either side, a rank <sup>65</sup> and tangled mass, were stained and scorched, as though the grasp of a burning iron hand had striven to rend them; and his countenance told in a strange and terrible language of agonies that had been, and were, and were still to continue to be.

The scene around was desolate; as far as the eye could <sup>70</sup> reach it was desolate: the bare rocks faced each other, and left a long and wide interval of thin white sand. You might wander on and look round and round, and peep into the crevices of the rocks and discover nothing that acknowledged the influence of the seasons. There was no spring, no summer, <sup>75</sup> no autumn: and the winter’s snow, that would have been lovely, fell not on these hot rocks and scorching sands. Never morning lark had poised himself over this desert; but the huge serpent often hissed there beneath the talons of the vulture, and 80 the vulture screamed, his wings imprisoned within the coils of the serpent. The pointed and shattered summits of the ridges of the rocks made a rude mimicry of human concerns, and seemed to prophecy mutely of things that then were not; steeples, and battlements, and ships with naked masts. As far 85 from the wood as a boy might sling a pebble of the brook, there was one rock by itself at a small distance from the main ridge.

 It had been precipitated there perhaps by the groan which the Earth uttered when our first father fell. Before you approached, 90 it appeared to lie flat on the ground, but its base slanted from its point, and between its point and the sands a tall man might stand upright. It was here that Enos had found the pitcher and cake, and to this place he led his father. But ere they had reached the rock they beheld a human shape: his back was towards them, and they were advancing unperceived, when they 95 heard him smite his breast and cry aloud, 'Woe is me! woe is me! I must never die again, and yet I am perishing with thirst and hunger.'

Pallid, as the reflection of the sheeted lightning on the heavy-sailing night-cloud, became the face of Cain; but the 100 child Enos took hold of the shaggy skin, his father's robe, and raised his eyes to his father, and listening whispered, 'Ere yet I could speak, I am sure, O my father, that I heard that voice. Have not I often said that I remembered a sweet voice?
 O my father! this is it': and Cain trembled exceedingly.
 105 The voice was sweet indeed, but it was thin and querulous, like that of a feeble slave in misery, who despairs altogether,
 yet can not refrain himself from weeping and lamentation.
 And, behold! Enos glided forward, and creeping softly round the base of the rock, stood before the stranger, and looked up 110 into his face. And the Shape shrieked, and turned round, and Cain beheld him, that his limbs and his face were those of his brother Abel whom he had killed! And Cain stood like one who struggles in his sleep because of the exceeding terribleness of a dream.

115 Thus as he stood in silence and darkness of soul, the Shape fell at his feet, and embraced his knees, and cried out with a bitter outcry, 'Thou eldest born of Adam, whom

Eve, my mother, brought forth, cease to torment me! I was feeding my flocks in green pastures by the side of quiet rivers, and thou killedst me; and now I am in misery.' Then Cain <sup>120</sup> closed his eyes, and hid them with his hands; and again he opened his eyes, and looked around him, and said to Enos, 'What beholdest thou? Didst thou hear a voice, my son?' 'Yes, my father, I beheld a man in unclean garments, and he uttered a sweet voice, full of lamentation.' Then Cain <sup>125</sup> raised up the Shape that was like Abel, and said:—'The Creator of our father, who had respect unto thee, and unto thy offering, wherefore hath he forsaken thee?' Then the Shape shrieked a second time, and rent his garment, and his naked skin was like the white sands beneath their feet; <sup>130</sup> and he shrieked yet a third time, and threw himself on his face upon the sand that was black with the shadow of the rock, and Cain and Enos sate beside him; the child by his right hand, and Cain by his left. They were all three under the rock, and within the shadow. The Shape that was like <sup>135</sup> Abel raised himself up, and spake to the child, 'I know where the cold waters are, but I may not drink, wherefore didst thou then take away my pitcher?' But Cain said, 'Didst thou not find favour in the sight of the Lord thy God?' The Shape answered, 'The Lord is God of the living only, <sup>140</sup> the dead have another God.' Then the child Enos lifted up his eyes and prayed; but Cain rejoiced secretly in his heart. 'Wretched shall they be all the days of their mortal life,' exclaimed the Shape, 'who sacrifice worthy and acceptable sacrifices to the God of the dead; but after death their toil <sup>145</sup> ceaseth. Woe is me, for I was well beloved by the God of the living, and cruel wert thou, O my brother, who didst snatch me away from his power and his dominion.' Having uttered these words, he rose suddenly, and fled over the sands: and Cain said in his heart, 'The curse of the Lord is on me; <sup>150</sup> but who is the God of the dead?' and he ran after the Shape, and the Shape fled shrieking over the sands, and the sands rose like white mists behind the steps of Cain, but the feet of him that was like Abel disturbed not the sands. He greatly outran Cain, and turning short, he wheeled round, and came <sup>155</sup> again to the rock where they had been sitting, and where Enos still stood; and the child caught hold of his garment as he passed by, and he fell upon the ground. And Cain stopped, and beholding him not, said, 'he has passed into the dark woods,' and he walked slowly back to the rocks; and when he <sup>160</sup> reached it the child told him that he had caught hold of his garment as he passed by, and that the man had fallen upon the ground: and Cain once more sate beside him, and said, 'Abel, my brother, I would lament for thee, but that the spirit

 165 within me is withered, and burnt up with extreme agony. Now, I pray thee, by thy flocks, and by thy pastures, and by the quiet rivers which thou lovedst, that thou tell me all that thou knowest. Who is the God of the dead? where doth he make his dwelling? what sacrifices are acceptable unto him?
 170 for I have offered, but have not been received; I have prayed, and have not been heard; and how can I be afflicted more than I already am?' The Shape arose and answered, 'O that thou hadst had pity on me as I will have pity on thee. Follow me, Son of Adam! and bring thy child with thee!'
 175 And they three passed over the white sands between the rocks, silent as the shadows.

THE BALLAD OF THE DARK LADIÉ<sup>1</sup>

A FRAGMENT

BENEATH yon birch with silver bark,
 And boughs so pendulous and fair,
 The brook falls scatter'd down the rock:
 And all is mossy there!

And there upon the moss she sits, 5
 The Dark Ladié in silent pain;
 The heavy tear is in her eye,
 And drops and swells again.

Three times she sends her little page 10
 Up the castled mountain's breast,
 If he might find the Knight that wears
 The Griffin for his crest.

The sun was sloping down the sky,
 And she had linger'd there all day,
 Counting moments, dreaming fears— 15
 Oh wherefore can he stay?

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1834. 'In a manuscript list (undated) of the poems drawn up by Coleridge appear these items together: Love 96 lines . . . The Black Ladié 190 lines.' Note to P. W., 1893, p. 614. A MS. of the three last stanzas is extant. In Chapter XIV of the Biographia Literaria, 1817, ii. 3 Coleridge synchronizes the Dark Ladié (a poem which he was 'preparing') with the Christabel. It would seem probable that it belongs to the spring or early summer of 1798, and that it was anterior to Love, which was first published in the Morning Post, December 21, 1799, under the heading 'Introduction to the Tale of the Dark Ladié'. If the MS. List of Poems is the record of poems actually written, two-thirds of the Dark Ladié must have perished long before 1817, when Sibylline Leaves was passing through the press, and it was found necessary to swell the Contents with 'two School-boy Poems' and 'with a song modernized with some additions from one of our elder poets'.

She hears a rustling o'er the brook,
 She sees far off a swinging bough!
 'Tis He! 'Tis my betrothed Knight!
 Lord Falkland, it is Thou!

20

She springs, she clasps him round the neck,
 She sobs a thousand hopes and fears,
 Her kisses glowing on his cheeks
 She quenches with her tears.

* * * *

'My friends with rude ungentle words
 They scoff and bid me fly to thee!
 O give me shelter in thy breast!
 O shield and shelter me!

25

'My Henry, I have given thee much,
 I gave what I can ne'er recall,
 I gave my heart, I gave my peace,
 O Heaven! I gave thee all.'

30

The Knight made answer to the Maid,
 While to his heart he held her hand,
 'Nine castles hath my noble sire,
 None statelier in the land.

35

'The fairest one shall be my love's,
 The fairest castle of the nine!
 Wait only till the stars peep out,
 The fairest shall be thine:

40

'Wait only till the hand of eve
 Hath wholly closed yon western bars,
 And through the dark we two will steal
 Beneath the twinkling stars!'

'The dark? the dark? No! not the dark?
 The twinkling stars? How, Henry? How?'
 O God! 'twas in the eye of noon
 He pledged his sacred vow!

45

And in the eye of noon my love
 Shall lead me from my mother's door,
 Sweet boys and girls all clothed in white
 Strewing flowers before:

50

But first the nodding minstrels go
 With music meet for lordly bowers,
 The children next in snow-white vests,
 Strewing buds and flowers!

55

And then my love and I shall pace,
 My jet black hair in pearly braids,
 Between our comely bachelors
 And blushing bridal maids.

OR, A VISION IN A DREAM. A FRAGMENT.

THE following fragment is here published at the request of a poet of great and deserved celebrity [Lord Byron], and, as far as the Author's own opinions are concerned, rather as a psychological curiosity, than on the ground of any supposed poetic merits.

In the summer of the year 1797<sup>2</sup>, the Author, then in ill

<sup>2</sup> There can be little doubt that Coleridge should have written 'the summer of 1798'. In an unpublished MS. note dated November 3, 1810, he connects the retirement between 'Linton and Porlock' and a recourse to opium with his quarrel with Charles Lloyd, and consequent distress of mind. That quarrel was at its height in May 1798. He alludes to distress of mind arising from 'calumny and ingratitude from men who have been fostered in the bosom of my confidence' in a letter to J. P. Estlin, dated May 14, 1798; and, in a letter to Charles Lamb, dated [Spring] 1798, he enlarges on his quarrel with Lloyd and quotes from Lloyd's novel of Edmund Oliver which was published in 1798. See Letters of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, 1895, i. 245, note 1. I discovered and read for the first time the unpublished note of November 3, 1810, whilst the edition of 1893 was in the press, and in a footnote to p. xlii of his Introduction the editor, J. D. Campbell, explains that it is too late to alter the position and date of Kubla Khan, but accepts the later date (May, 1798) on the evidence of the MS. note.

health, had retired to a lonely farm-house between Porlock and Linton, on the Exmoor confines of Somerset and Devonshire. In consequence of a slight indisposition, an anodyne
 10 had been prescribed, from the effects of which he fell asleep in his chair at the moment that he was reading the following sentence, or words of the same substance, in 'Purchas's Pilgrimage': 'Here the Khan Kubla commanded a palace to be built, and a stately garden thereunto. And thus ten miles of fertile ground were inclosed with a wall.'<sup>1</sup> The Author continued for about three hours in a profound sleep, at least of the external senses, during which time he has the most vivid confidence, that he could not have composed less than from two to three hundred lines; if that indeed can
 20 be called composition in which all the images rose up before him as things, with a parallel production of the correspondent expressions, without any sensation or consciousness of effort. On awaking he appeared to himself to have a distinct recollection of the whole, and taking his pen, ink, and paper, instantly and eagerly wrote down the lines that are here preserved. At this moment he was unfortunately called out by a person on business from Porlock, and detained by him above an hour, and on his return to his room, found, to his no small surprise and mortification, that though he still retained some vague
 30 and dim recollection of the general purport of the vision, yet, with the exception of some eight or ten scattered lines and images, all the rest had passed away like the images on the surface of a stream into which a stone has been cast, but, alas! without the after restoration of the latter!

Then all the charm

Is broken—all that phantom-world so fair
 Vanishes, and a thousand circlets spread,
 And each mis-shape['s] the other. Stay awhile,
 Poor youth! who scarcely dar'st lift up thine eyes—
 40 The stream will soon renew its smoothness, soon
 The visions will return! And lo, he stays,
 And soon the fragments dim of lovely forms
 Come trembling back, unite, and now once more
 The pool becomes a mirror.

[From The Picture; or, the Lover's Resolution, ll. 91-100.]

Yet from the still surviving recollections in his mind, the Author has frequently purposed to finish for himself what had been originally, as it were, given to him. Σαμνον αδιον ασω<sup>1</sup> [Aḡrion ādion āσω 1834]: but the to-morrow is yet to come.

As a contrast to this vision, I have annexed a fragment of a very different character, describing with equal fidelity the 50 dream of pain and disease.<sup>2</sup>

KUBLA KHAN

IN Xanadu did Kubla Khan
A stately pleasure-dome decree:
Where Alph, the sacred river, ran
Through caverns measureless to man
Down to a sunless sea.
So twice five miles of fertile ground
With walls and towers were girdled round:
And there were gardens bright with sinuous rills,
Where blossomed many an incense-bearing tree;
And here were forests ancient as the hills,
Enfolding sunny spots of greenery.

But oh! that deep romantic chasm which slanted
Down the green hill athwart a cedarn cover!
A savage place! as holy and enchanted
As e'er beneath a waning moon was haunted 15
By woman wailing for her demon-lover!<sup>3</sup>
'And from this chasm, with ceaseless turmoil seething,
As if this earth in fast thick pants were breathing,
A mighty fountain momentarily was forced:
Amid whose swift half-intermitted burst 20
Huge fragments vaulted like rebounding hail,
Or chaffy grain beneath the thresher's flail:
And 'mid these dancing rocks at once and ever
It flung up momentarily the sacred river.

Through wood and dale the sacred river ran,
Then reached the caverns measureless to man,
And sank in tumult to a lifeless ocean:
And 'mid this tumult Kubla heard from far
Ancestral voices prophesying war!

The shadow of the dome of pleasure
Floated midway on the waves;
Where was heard the mingled measure
From the fountain and the caves.
It was a miracle of rare device,
A sunny pleasure-dome with caves of ice!<sup>1</sup>

It was an Abyssinian maid,
And on her dulcimer she played,
Singing of Mount Abora.
Could I revive within me
Her symphony and song,
To such a deep delight 'twould win me,
That with music loud and long,
I would build that dome in air,
That sunny dome! those caves of ice!<sup>2</sup>
And all who heard should see them there,
And all should cry, Beware! Beware!

For he on honey-dew hath fed,
And drunk the milk of Paradise.

RECANTATION<sup>1</sup>

ILLUSTRATED IN THE STORY OF THE MAD OX

I

AN Ox, long fed with musty hay,
 And work'd with yoke and chain,
 Was turn'd out on an April day,
 When fields are in their best array,
 And growing grasses sparkle gay
 At once with Sun and rain. 5

II

The grass was fine, the Sun was bright—
 With truth I may aver it;
 The ox was glad, as well he might,
 Thought a green meadow no bad sight, 10
 And frisk'd,—to shew his huge delight,
 Much like a beast of spirit.

III

'Stop, neighbours, stop, why these alarms?
 The ox is only glad!'
 But still they pour from cots and farms— 15
 'Halloo!' the parish is up in arms,
 (A hoaxing-hunt has always charms)
 'Halloo! the ox is mad.'

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Post for July 30, 1798, with the following title and introduction:—'ORIGINAL POETRY. A TALE. The following amusing Tale gives a very humorous description of the French Revolution, which is represented as an Ox': included in Annual Anthology, 1800, and Sibylline Leaves, 1817; reprinted in Essays on His Own Times, 1880, iii. 963-9. First collected in P. and D. W., 1877-80. In a copy of the Annual Anthology of 1800 Coleridge writes over against the heading of this poem, 'Written when fears were entertained of an invasion, and Mr. Sheridan and Mr. Tierney were absurdly represented as having recanted because to [The French Revolution (?)] in its origin they, [having been favourable, changed their opinion when the Revolutionists became unfaithful to their principles (?)].' See Note to P. W., 1893.

The text is that of Sibylline Leaves and Essays on his Own Times.

The frightened beast scamper'd about—
 Plunge! through the hedge he drove: 20
 The mob pursue with hideous rout,
 A bull-dog fastens on his snout;
 'He gores the dog! his tongue hangs out!
 He's mad, he's mad, by Jove!'

V

'STOP, NEIGHBOURS, STOP!' aloud did call 25
 A sage of sober hue.
 But all at once, on him they fall,
 And women squeak and children squall,
 'What? would you have him toss us all?
 And dam'me, who are you?' 30

VI

Oh! hapless sage! his ears they stun,
 And curse him o'er and o'er!
 'You bloody-minded dog! (cries one),
 To slit your windpipe were good fun,
 'Od blast you for an impious son!<sup>1</sup> 35
 Of a Presbyterian wh—re!'

VII

'You'd have him gore the Parish-priest,
 And run against the altar!
 You fiend!' the sage his warnings ceas'd,
 And north and south, and west and east, 40
 Halloo! they follow the poor beast,
 Mat, Dick, Tom, Bob and Walter.

But here once more to view did pop
 The man that kept his senses—
 And now he cried,—‘Stop, neighbours, stop!
 The Ox is mad! I would not swop, 100
 No! not a school-boy’s farthing top
 For all the parish-fences.’

XVIII

‘The Ox is mad! Ho! Dick, Bob, Mat!
 ‘What means this coward fuss?
 Ho! stretch this rope across the plat— 105
 ‘Twill trip him up—or if not that,
 Why, dam’mè! we must lay him flat—
 See! here’s my blunderbuss.’

HEXAMETERS<sup>1</sup>

WILLIAM, my teacher, my friend! dear William and dear
 Dorothea!
 Smooth out the folds of my letter, and place it on desk or on table;
 Place it on table or desk; and your right hands loosely half-closing,<sup>2</sup>
 Gently sustain them in air, and extending the digit didactic,
 Rest it a moment on each of the forks of the five-forked left hand,
 Twice on the breadth of the thumb, and once on the tip of<sup>5</sup>
 each finger;
 Read with a nod of the head in a humouring recitativo;
 And, as I live, you will see my hexameters hopping before
 you.
 This is a galloping measure; a hop, and a trot, and a gallop!
 All my hexameters fly, like stags pursued by the stag-
 hounds,
 Breathless and panting, and ready to drop, yet flying still<sup>10</sup> onwards,<sup>3</sup>
 I would full fain pull in my hard-mouthed runaway hunter;
 But our English Spondeans are clumsy yet impotent curbreins;
 And so to make him go slowly, no way left have I but to lame him.
 William, my head and my heart! dear Poet that feelest and thinkest!
 Dorothy, eager of soul, my most affectionate sister!
 Many a mile, O! many a wearisome mile are ye distant,
 Long, long comfortless roads, with no one eye that doth know us.

Yea, and I feel it not right! But O! my friends, my belovéd! 20
Feverish and wakeful I lie,—I am weary of feeling and thinking.

Every thought is worn down, I am weary yet cannot be vacant.

Five long hours have I tossed, rheumatic heats, dry and flushing,

Gnawing behind in my head, and wandering and throbbing
about me,

Busy and tiresome, my friends, as the beat of the boding night-spider.<sup>1</sup> 25

I forget the beginning of the line:

. . . my eyes are a burthen,
Now unwillingly closed, now open and aching with darkness.
O! what a life is the eye! what a strange and inscrutable essence!

Him that is utterly blind, nor glimpses the fire that warms
him;

Him that never beheld the swelling breast of his mother; 30

Him that smiled in his gladness as a babe that smiles in its slumber;

Even for him it exists, it moves and stirs in its prison;

Lives with a separate life, and 'Is it a Spirit?' he murmurs:
'Sure it has thoughts of its own, and to see is only a language.'

There was a great deal more, which I have forgotten. . . . The last line which I wrote, I remember, and write it for the truth of the sentiment, scarcely less true in company than in pain and solitude:—

William, my head and my heart! dear William and dear
Dorothea! 35

You have all in each other; but I am lonely, and want you!

TRANSLATION OF A PASSAGE IN OTTFRIED'S METRICAL PARAPHRASE OF THE GOSPEL

[This paraphrase, written about the time of Charlemagne, is by no means deficient in occasional passages of considerable poetic merit. There is a flow and a tender enthusiasm in the following lines which even in the translation will not, I flatter myself, fail to interest the reader. Ottfried is describing the circumstances immediately following the birth of our Lord. Most interesting is it to consider the effect when the feelings are wrought above the natural pitch by the belief of something mysterious, while all the images are purely natural. Then it is that religion and poetry strike deepest. Biog. Lit., 1817, i. 203-4.<sup>1</sup>]

SHE gave with joy her virgin breast;
 She hid it not, she bared the breast
 Which suckled that divinest babe!
 Blessed, blessed were the breasts
 Which the Saviour infant kiss'd; 5
 And blessed, blessed was the mother
 Who wrapp'd his limbs in swaddling clothes,
 Singing placed him on her lap,
 Hung o'er him with her looks of love,
 And soothed him with a lulling motion. 10
 Blessed! for she shelter'd him
 From the damp and chilling air;
 Blessed, blessed! for she lay
 With such a babe in one blest bed,
 Close as babes and mothers lie! 15
 Blessed, blessed evermore,
 With her virgin lips she kiss'd,
 With her arms, and to her breast,
 She embraced the babe divine,
 Her babe divine the virgin mother! 20
 There lives not on this ring of earth
 A mortal that can sing her praise.
 Mighty mother, virgin pure,
 In the darkness and the night
 For us she bore the heavenly Lord! 25

The translation is from Offridi Evang., lib. i, cap. xi, ll. 73-108 (included in Schilter's Thesaurus Antiquitatum Teutonicarum, pp. 50-1, Biog. Lit., 1847, i. 213). Ottfried, 'a monk at Weissenburg in Elsass', composed his Evangelienbuch about 870 A.D. (Note by J. Shawcross, Biog. Lit., 1907, ii. 259). As Coleridge says that 'he read through Ottfried's metrical paraphrase of the Gospel' when he was at Göttingen, it may be assumed that the translation was made in 1799.

CATULLIAN HENDECASYLLABLES<sup>1</sup>

HEAR, my belovéd, an old Milesian story!—
 High, and embosom'd in congregated laurels,
 Glimmer'd a temple upon a breezy headland;
 In the dim distance amid the skiey billows
 Rose a fair island; the god of flocks had blest it. 5
 From the far shores of the bleat-resounding island
 Oft by the moonlight a little boat came floating,
 Came to the sea-cave beneath the breezy headland,
 Where amid myrtles a pathway stole in mazes
 Up to the groves of the high embosom'd temple. 10
 There in a thicket of dedicated roses,
 Oft did a priestess, as lovely as a vision,
 Pouring her soul to the son of Cytherea,
 Pray him to hover around the slight canoe-boat,
 And with invisible pilotage to guide it 15
 Over the dusk wave, until the nightly sailor
 Shivering with ecstasy sank upon her bosom.

WATER BALLAD<sup>2</sup>

[FROM THE FRENCH]

'Come hither, gently rowing,
 Come, bear me quickly o'er

'Good boatman, prithee haste thee,
 I seek my father-land.'—
 'Say, when I there have placed thee,
 Dare I demand thy hand?'
 'A maiden's head can never
 So hard a point decide;
 Row on, row on, for ever
 I'd have thee by my side.'

The happy bridal over
 The wanderer ceased to roam,

 'Row on through wind and weather
 For ever by my side.'

SOMETHING CHILDISH, BUT VERY NATURAL<sup>1</sup>

WRITTEN IN GERMANY

If I had but two little wings
 And were a little feathery bird,
 To you I'd fly, my dear!
 But thoughts like these are idle things,
 And I stay here.

But in my sleep to you I fly:
 I'm always with you in my sleep!
 The world is all one's own.
 But then one wakes, and where am I?
 All, all alone.

10

Sleep stays not, though a monarch bids:
 So I love to wake ere break of day:
 For though my sleep be gone,
 Yet while 'tis dark, one shuts one's lids,
 And still dreams on.

HOME-SICK<sup>1</sup>

WRITTEN IN GERMANY

'Tis sweet to him who all the week
 Through city-crowds must push his way,
 To stroll alone through fields and woods,
 And hallow thus the Sabbath-day.

And sweet it is, in summer bower,
 Sincere, affectionate and gay,
 One's own dear children feasting round,
 To celebrate one's marriage-day.

Woods crowding upon woods, hills over hills,
A surging scene, and only limited
By the blue distance. Heavily my way
Downward I dragged through fir groves evermore, 5
Where bright green moss heaves in sepulchral forms
Speckled with sunshine; and, but seldom heard,
The sweet bird's song became a hollow sound;
And the breeze, murmuring indivisibly,
Preserved its solemn murmur most distinct 10
From many a note of many a waterfall,
And the brook's chatter; 'mid whose islet-stones
The dingy kidling with its tinkling bell
Leaped frolicsome, or old romantic goat

THE BRITISH STRIPLING'S WAR-SONG <sup>1</sup>

IMITATED FROM STOLBERG

YES, noble old Warrior! this heart has beat high,
 Since you told of the deeds which our countrymen wrought;
 O lend me the sabre that hung by thy thigh,
 And I too will fight as my forefathers fought.

Despise not my youth, for my spirit is steel'd, 5
 And I know there is strength in the grasp of my hand;
 Yea, as firm as thyself would I march to the field,
 And as proudly would die for my dear native land.

In the sports of my childhood I mimick'd the fight,
 The sound of a trumpet suspended my breath; 10
 And my fancy still wander'd by day and by night,
 Amid battle and tumult, 'mid conquest and death.

My own shout of onset, when the Armies advance,
 How oft it awakes me from visions of glory;
 When I meant to have leapt on the Hero of France, 15
 And have dash'd him to earth, pale and breathless and gory.

It is printed separately as the Devil's Walk, a Poem, By Professor Porson, London, Marsh and Miller, &c., 1830. In 1827, by way of repudiating Porson's alleged authorship of The Devil's Thoughts, Southey expanded the Devil's Thoughts of 1799 into a poem of fifty-seven

Oh! he was in his Sunday's best:
His jacket was red and his breeches were blue,
And there was a hole where the tail came through.

In the Morning Post the poem numbered fourteen stanzas; in 1828, 1829 it is reduced to ten, and in 1834 enlarged to seventeen stanzas. Stanzas iii and xiv-xvi of the text are not in the M. P. Stanzas iv and v appeared as iii, iv; stanza vi as ix; stanza vii as v; stanza viii as x; stanza ix as viii; stanza x as vi; stanza xi as vii; stanza xvii as xiv. In 1828, 1829, the poem consists of stanzas i-ix of the text, and of the concluding stanzas stanza xi ('Old Nicholas', &c.) of the M. P. version was not reprinted. Stanzas xiv-xvi of the text were first acknowledged by Coleridge in 1834.

He saw a cottage with a double coach-house,
 A cottage of gentility;
 And the Devil did grin, for his darling sin
 Is pride that apes humility.

VII

He peep'd into a rich bookseller's shop,
 Quoth he! we are both of one college!
 For I sate myself, like a cormorant, once
 Hard by the tree of knowledge.<sup>1</sup>

25

<sup>1</sup> This anecdote is related by that most interesting of the Devil's Biographers, Mr. John Milton, in his Paradise Lost, and we have here the Devil's own testimony to the truth and accuracy of it. M. P.

'And all amid them stood the TREE OF LIFE
 High, eminent, blooming ambrosial fruit
 Of vegetable gold (query paper-money), and next to Life
 Our Death, the TREE OF KNOWLEDGE, grew fast by.—

So clomb this first grand thief—
 Thence up he flew, and on the tree of life
 Sat like a cormorant.'—Par. Lost, iv.

The allegory here is so apt, that in a catalogue of various readings obtained from collating the MSS. one might expect to find it noted, that for 'LIFE' Cod. quid. habent, 'TRADE.' Though indeed THE TRADE, i. e. the bibliopolic, so called κατ' ἐξοχήν, may be regarded as LIFE sensu eminentiori; a suggestion, which I owe to a young retailer in the hosiery line, who on hearing a description of the net profits, dinner parties, country houses, etc., of the trade, exclaimed, 'Ay! that's what I call LIFE now!'—This 'Life, our Death,' is thus happily contrasted with the fruits of Authorship.—Sic nos non nobis mellificamus Apes.

Of this poem, which with the 'Fire, Famine, and Slaughter' first appeared in the Morning Post [6th Sept. 1799], the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 9th, and 16th stanzas* were dictated by Mr. Southey. See Apologetic Preface [to Fire, Famine and Slaughter]. [Between the ninth and the concluding stanza, two or three are omitted, as grounded on subjects which have lost their interest—and for better reasons. 1828, 1829.]

If any one should ask who General — meant, the Author begs leave to inform him, that he did once see a red-faced person in a dream whom by the dress he took for a General; but he might have been mistaken, and most certainly he did not hear any names mentioned. In simple verity, the author never meant any one, or indeed any thing but to put a concluding stanza to his doggerel.

LINES COMPOSED IN A CONCERT-ROOM<sup>1</sup>

NOR cold, nor stern, my soul! yet I detest
 These scented Rooms, where, to a gaudy throng,
 Heaves the proud Harlot her distended breast,
 In intricacies of laborious song.

These feel not Music's genuine power, nor deign 5
 To melt at Nature's passion-warbled plaint;
 But when the long-breathed singer's uptrilled strain
 Bursts in a squall—they gape for wonderment.

Hark! the deep buzz of Vanity and Hate!
 Scornful, yet envious, with self-torturing sneer 10
 My lady eyes some maid of humbler state,
 While the pert Captain, or the primmer Priest,
 Prattles accordant scandal in her ear.

O give me, from this heartless scene released,
 To hear our old Musician, blind and grey, 15
 (Whom stretching from my nurse's arms I kissed,)
 His Scottish tunes and warlike marches play,
 By moonshine, on the balmy summer-night,
 The while I dance amid the tedded hay
 With merry maids, whose ringlets toss in light. 20

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Post, September 24, 1799: included in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, 1828, 1829, and 1834. There is no evidence as to the date of composition. In a letter to Coleridge, dated July 5, 1796, Lamb writes 'Have a care, good Master Poet, of the Statute de Contumeliâ. What do you mean by calling Madame Mara harlots and naughty things? The goodness of the verse would not save you in a Court of Justice'—but it is by no means certain that Lamb is referring to the Lines Composed in a Concert-Room, or that there is any allusion in line 3 to Madame Mara. If, as J. D. Campbell suggested, the poem as it appeared in the Morning Post is a recast of some earlier verses, it is possible that the scene is Ottery, and that 'Edmund' is the 'Friend who died dead of' a 'Frenzy Fever' (vide ante, p. 76). In this case a probable date would be the summer of 1793. But the poem as a whole suggests a later date. Coleridge and Southey spent some weeks at Exeter in September 1799. They visited Ottery St. Mary, and walked through Newton Abbot to Ashburton and Dartmouth. It is possible that the 'Concert-Room,' the 'pert Captain,' and 'primer Priest' are reminiscences of Exeter, the 'heath-plant,' and the 'ocean caves' of Dartmoor and Torbay. If so, the 'shame and absolute rout' (l. 49 of variant, p. 325) would refer to the victory of Suwaroff over Joubert at Novi, which took place August 15, 1799. See Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 307.

Or lies the purple evening on the bay
 Of the calm glossy lake, O let me hide
 Unheard, unseen, behind the alder-trees,
 For round their roots the fisher's boat is tied,
 On whose trim seat doth Edmund stretch at ease, 25
 And while the lazy boat sways to and fro,
 Breathes in his flute sad airs, so wild and slow,
 That his own cheek is wet with quiet tears.

But O, dear Anne! when midnight wind careers,
 And the gust pelting on the out-house shed 30
 Makes the cock shrilly in the rainstorm crow,
 To hear thee sing some ballad full of woe,
 Ballad of ship-wreck'd sailor floating dead,
 Whom his own true-love buried in the sands!
 Thee, gentle woman, for thy voice remeasures 35
 Whatever tones and melancholy pleasures
 The things of Nature utter; birds or trees,
 Or moan of ocean-gale in weedy caves,
 Or where the stiff grass mid the heath-plant waves,
 Murmur and music thin of sudden breeze. 40

After line 40

Dear Maid! whose form in solitude I seek,
 Such songs in such a mood to hear thee sing,
 It were a deep delight!—But thou shalt fling
 Thy white arm round my neck, and kiss my cheek,
 And love the brightness of my gladder eye 45
 The while I tell thee what a holier joy

It were in proud and stately step to go,
 With trump and timbrel clang, and popular shout,
 To celebrate the shame and absolute rout
 Unhealable of Freedom's latest foe, 50
 Whose tower'd might shall to its centre nod.

When human feelings, sudden, deep and vast,
 As all good spirits of all ages past
 Were armed in the hearts of living men,
 Shall purge the earth, and violently sweep 55
 These vile and painted locusts to the deep,
 Leaving un———— undebas'd
 A ——— world made worthy of its God. M. P.

[The words in lines 57, 58 were left as blanks in the Morning Post, from what cause or with what object must remain a matter of doubt.]

[The following is an almost literal translation of a very old and very favourite song among the Westphalian Boors. The turn at the end is the same with one of Mr. Dibdin's excellent songs, and the air to which it is sung by the Boors is remarkably sweet and lively.]

WHEN thou to my true-love com'st
Greet her from me kindly;
When she asks thee how I fare?
Say, folks in Heaven fare finely.

When she asks, 'What! Is he sick?'
Say, dead!—and when for sorrow
She begins to sob and cry,
Say, I come to-morrow.

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Post, Sept. 27, 1802: reprinted in Essays on His Own Times, 1850, iii. 992. First collected in P. W., 1877-80, ii. 170.

<sup>2</sup> Now published for the first time. The lines were sent in a letter to George Coleridge dated September 29, 1799. They were prefaced as follows:—'We were talking of Hexameters with you. I will, for want of something better, fill up the paper with a translation of one of my favourite Psalms into that metre which allowing trochees for spondees, as the nature of our Language demands, you will find pretty accurate a scansion.' Mahomet and, no doubt, the Hymn to the Earth may be assigned to the end of September or the beginning of October, 1799.

HEXAMETERS

EARTH! thou mother of numberless children, the nurse and the mother,
Hail! O Goddess, thrice hail! Blest be thou! and, blessing,
I hymn thee!

<sup>1</sup> First published in Friendship's Offering, 1834, pp. 165-7, with other pieces, under the general heading:—Fragments from the Wreck of Memory: or Portions of Poems composed in Early Manhood: by S. T. Coleridge. A Note was prefixed:—‘It may not be without use or interest to youthful, and especially to intelligent female readers of poetry, to observe that in the attempt to adapt the Greek metres to the English language, we must begin by substituting quality of sound for quantity—that is, accentuated or comparatively emphasized syllables, for what in the Greek and Latin Verse, are named long, and of which the prosodial mark is —; and vice versâ, unaccented syllables for short marked ∪. Now the Hexameter verse consists of two sorts of feet, the spondee composed of two long syllables, and the dactyl, composed of one long syllable followed by two short. The following verse from the Psalms is a rare instance of a perfect hexameter (i. e. line of six feet) in the English language:—

God came | ūp with ä | shōut: oūr | Lōrd with thē | sōund of ä | trūmpēt.

But so few are the truly spondaic words in our language, such as Ēgypt, ūprōar, tūrmoil, &c., that we are compelled to substitute, in most instances, the trochee; or — ∪, i. e. in such words as mērrŷ, lightlŷ, &c., for the proper spondee. It need only be added, that in the hexameter the fifth foot must be a dactyl, and the sixth a spondee, or trochee. I will end this note with two hexameter lines, likewise from the Psalms:—

Thēre is ä | rīvēr thē | flōwīng whēre|ōf shāl | glāddēn thē | cītŷ,
Hāllepŭjäh thē | cītŷ of | Gōd Jē|hōväh hāth | blēst hēr. S. T. C.’

On some proof-sheets, or loose pages of a copy of The Hymn as published in Friendship's Offering for 1834, which Coleridge annotated, no doubt with a view to his corrections being adopted in the forthcoming edition of his poems (1834), he adds in MS. the following supplementary note:—‘To make any considerable number of Hexameters feasible in our monosyllabic trocheeo-iambic language, there must, I fear, be other licenses granted—in the first foot, at least—ex. gr. a superfluous ∪ prefixed in cases of particles such as ‘of’, ‘and’, and the like: likewise — ∪— where the stronger accent is on the first syllable.—S. T. C.’

The Hymn to the Earth is a free translation of F. L. Stolberg's Hymne an die Erde. (See F. Freiligrath's Biographical Memoirs prefixed to the Tauchnitz edition of the Poems published in 1852.) The translation exceeds the German original by two lines. The Hexameters ‘from the Psalms’ are taken from a metrical experiment which Coleridge sent to his brother George, in a letter dated September 29, 1799 (vide ante). First collected in 1834. The acknowledgement that the Hymn to the Earth is imitated from Stolberg's Hymne an die Erde was first prefixed by J. D. Campbell in 1893.

Forth, ye sweet sounds ! from my harp, and my voice shall float on your surges—

Soar thou aloft, O my soul ! and bear up my song on thy pinions.

Travelling the vale with mine eyes—green meadows and lake
with green island,

Dark in its basin of rock, and the bare stream flowing in brightness,

Thrilled with thy beauty and love in the wooded slope of the mountain,

Here, great mother, I lie, thy child, with his head on thy bosom !

Playful the spirits of noon, that rushing soft through thy tresses,

Green-haired goddess ! refresh me ; and hark ! as they hurry
or linger,

Fill the pause of my harp, or sustain it with musical murmurs.

Into my being thou murmurest joy, and tenderest sadness

Shedd'st thou, like dew, on my heart, till the joy and the heavenly sadness

Pour themselves forth from my heart in tears, and the hymn of thanksgiving.

Earth ! thou mother of numberless children, the nurse and
the mother,

Sister thou of the stars, and beloved by the Sun, the rejoicer !

Guardian and friend of the moon, O Earth, whom the comets forget not,

Yea, in the measureless distance wheel round and again they behold thee !

Fadeless and young (and what if the latest birth of creation ?)

Bride and consort of Heaven, that looks down upon thee enamoured !

Say, mysterious Earth ! O say, great mother and goddess,

Was it not well with thee then, when first thy lap was ungirdled,

Thy lap to the genial Heaven, the day that he wooed thee and won thee !

Fair was thy blush, the fairest and first of the blushes of morning !

Deep was the shudder, O Earth ! the throe of thy self-retention :

25

Inly thou strovest to flee, and didst seek thyself at thy centre!
 Mightier far was the joy of thy sudden resilience; and forthwith Myriad myriads of lives teemed forth from the mighty embracement.
 Thousand-fold tribes of dwellers, impelled by thousand-fold instincts,
 Filled, as a dream, the wide waters; the rivers sang on their channels;
 Laughed on their shores the hoarse seas; the yearning ocean<sup>30</sup> swelled upward;
 Young life lowed through the meadows, the woods, and the echoing mountains,
 Wandered bleating in valleys, and warbled on blossoming branches.

MAHOMET<sup>1</sup>

UTTER the song, O my soul! the flight and return of Mohammed,
 Prophet and priest, who scatter'd abroad both evil and blessing,
 Huge wasteful empires founded and hallow'd slow persecution,
 Soul-withering, but crush'd the blasphemous rites of the Pagan
 And idolatrous Christians.—For veiling the Gospel of Jesus,
 They, the best corrupting, had made it worse than the vilest.
 Wherefore Heaven decreed th' enthusiast warrior of Mecca,
 Choosing good from iniquity rather than evil from goodness.
 Loud the tumult in Mecca surrounding the fane of the idol;—

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1834. In an unpublished letter to Southey, dated Sept. 25, 1799, Coleridge writes, 'I shall go on with the Mohammed'. There can be no doubt that these fourteen lines, which represent Coleridge's contribution to a poem on 'Mahomet' which he had planned in conjunction with Southey, were at that time already in existence. For Southey's portion, which numbered 109 lines, see Oliver Newman. By Robert Southey, 1845, pp. 113-15.

Naked and prostrate the priesthood were laid—the people with mad shouts 10
 Thundering now, and now with saddest ululation
 Flew, as over the channel of rock-stone the ruinous river
 Shatters its waters abreast, and in mazy uproar bewilder'd,
 Rushes dividuous all—all rushing impetuous onward.

LOVE<sup>1</sup>

 Whatever stirs this mortal frame,
 All are but ministers of Love,
 And feed his sacred flame.

Opening stanzas

O leave the Lilly on its stem;
 O leave the Rose upon the spray;
 O leave the Elder-bloom, fair Maids!
 And listen to my lay.

A Cypress and a Myrtle bough,
 This morn around my harp you twin'd,
 Because it fashion'd mournfully
 Its murmurs in the wind.

And now a Tale of Love and Woe,
 A woeful Tale of Love I sing:
 Hark, gentle Maidens, hark! it sighs
 And trembles on the string.

But most, my own dear Genevieve!
 It sighs and trembles most for thee!
 O come and hear what cruel wrongs
 Befel the dark Ladie.

The fifth stanza of the Introduction finds its place as the fifth stanza of the text, and the sixth stanza as the first.

a London Newspaper, and have since that time been republished in Mr. Wordsworth's Lyrical Ballads, but with some alterations; the Poet having apparently relinquished his intention of writing the Fate of the Dark Ladye: included (as Love) in Sibylline Leaves, 1828, 1829, and 1834. The four opening and three concluding stanzas with prefatory note were republished in Literary Remains, 1836, pp. 50-2, and were first collected in 1844. For a facsimile of the MS. of Love as printed in the Lyrical Ballads, 1800 (i. 138-44), see Wordsworth and Coleridge MSS., edited by W. Hale White, 1897 (between pp. 34-5). For a collation of the Introduction to the Tale of the Dark Ladie with two MSS. in the British Museum [Add. MSS., No. 27,902] see Coleridge's Poems. A Facsimile Reproduction, &c. Ed. by James Dykes Campbell, 1899, and Appendices of this edition.

It is probable that the greater part of the Introduction to the Tale of the Dark Ladie was written either during or shortly after a visit which Coleridge paid to the Wordsworths's friends, George and Mary, and Sarah Hutchinson, at Sockburn, a farm-house on the banks of the Tees, in November, 1799. In the first draft, ll. 13-16, 'She leaned, &c.' runs thus:—

She lean'd against a grey stone rudely carv'd,
 The statue of an arméd Knight:
 She lean'd in melancholy mood
 Amid the lingering light.

In the church at Sockburn there is a recumbent statue of an 'armed knight' (of the Conyers family), and in a field near the farm-house there is a 'Grey-Stone' which is said to commemorate the slaying of a monstrous wyverne or 'worme' by the knight who is buried in the church. It is difficult to believe that the 'arméd knight' and the 'grey stone' of the first draft were not suggested by the statue in Sockburn Church, and the 'Grey-Stone' in the adjoining field. It has been argued that the Ballad of the Dark Ladie, of which only a fragment remains, was written after Coleridge returned from Germany, and that the Introduction to the Tale of the Dark Ladie, which embodies Love, was written at Stowey in 1797 or 1798. But in referring to 'the plan' of the Lyrical Ballads of 1798 (Biog. Lit., 1817, Cap. XIV, ii. 3) Coleridge says that he had written the Ancient Mariner, and was preparing the Dark Ladie and the Christabel (both unpublished poems when this Chapter was written), but says nothing of so typical a poem as Love. By the Dark Ladie he must have meant the unfinished Ballad of the Dark Ladie, which, at one time, numbered 190 lines, not the Introduction to the Tale of the Dark Ladie, which later on he refers to as the 'poem entitled Love' (Biog. Lit., 1817, Cap. XXIV, ii. 298), and which had appeared under that title in the Lyrical Ballads of 1800, 1802, and 1805.

In Sibylline Leaves, 1828, 1829, and 1834, Love, which was the first

 And she was there, my hope, my joy,
 My own dear Genevieve!

She leant against the arméd man,
 The statue of the arméd knight;
 She stood and listened to my lay, 15
 Amid the lingering light.

Few sorrows hath she of her own,
 My hope! my joy! my Genevieve!
 She loves me best, whene'er I sing
 The songs that make her grieve. 20

I played a soft and doleful air,
 I sang an old and moving story—
 An old rude song, that suited well
 That ruin wild and hoary.

She listened with a flitting blush, 25
 With downcast eyes and modest grace;
 For well she knew, I could not choose
 But gaze upon her face.

I told her of the Knight that wore
 Upon his shield a burning brand; 30
 And that for ten long years he wooed
 The Lady of the Land.

Quas humilis tenero stylus olim effudit in aevo,
 Perlegis hic lacrymas, et quod pharetratus acuta
 Ille puer puero fecit mihi cuspide vulnus.
 Omnia paulatim consumit longior aetas,
 Vivendoque simul morimur, rapimurque manendo.
 Ipse mihi collatus enim non ille videbor:

 An angel beautiful and bright;

ON THE TWENTY-FOURTH STANZA IN HER 'PASSAGE OVER
 MOUNT GOTHARD'

And hail the Chapel! hail the Platform wild!
 Where Tell directed the avenging dart,
 With well-strung arm, that first preservst his child,
 Then aim'd the arrow at the tyrant's heart.

SPLENDOUR'S fondly-fostered child!
 And did you hail the platform wild,
 Where once the Austrian fell
 Beneath the shaft of Tell!

O Lady, nursed in pomp and pleasure!
 Whence learn'd you that heroic measure?

A CHRISTMAS CAROL<sup>1</sup>

I

THE shepherds went their hasty way,
 And found the lowly stable-shed
 Where the Virgin-Mother lay:
     And now they checked their eager tread,
 For to the Babe, that at her bosom clung,
 A Mother's song the Virgin-Mother sung.

II

They told her how a glorious light,
 Streaming from a heavenly throng,
 Around them shone, suspending night!
     While sweeter than a mother's song,
 Blest Angels heralded the Saviour's birth,
 Glory to God on high! and Peace on Earth.

10

III

She listened to the tale divine,
 And closer still the Babe she pressed;
 And while she cried, the Babe is mine!
     The milk rushed faster to her breast:
 Joy rose within her, like a summer's morn;
 Peace, Peace on Earth! the Prince of Peace is born.

A METRICAL EPISTLE

[As printed in Morning Post for January 10, 1800.]

To the Editor of The Morning Post.

MR. EDITOR,—An unmetrical letter from Talleyrand to Lord Grenville has already appeared, and from an authority too high to be questioned: otherwise I could adduce some arguments for the exclusive authenticity of the following metrical epistle. The very epithet which the wise ancients used, 'aurea carmina,' might have been supposed likely to have determined the choice of the French minister in favour of verse; and the rather when we recollect that this phrase of 'golden verses' is applied emphatically to the works of that philosopher who imposed silence on all with whom he had to deal. Besides is it not somewhat improbable that Talleyrand should have preferred prose to rhyme, when the latter alone has got the chink? Is it not likewise curious that in our official answer no notice whatever is taken of the Chief Consul, Bonaparte, as if there had been no such person [man Essays, &c., 1850] existing; notwithstanding that his existence is pretty generally admitted, nay that some have been so rash as to believe that he has created as great a sensation in the world as Lord Grenville, or even the Duke of Portland? But the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Talleyrand, is acknowledged, which, in our opinion, could not have happened had he written only that insignificant prose-letter, which seems to precede Bonaparte's, as in old romances a dwarf always ran before to proclaim the advent or arrival of knight or giant. That Talleyrand's character and practices more resemble those of some regular Governments than Bonaparte's I admit; but this of itself does not appear a satisfactory explanation. However, let the letter speak for itself. The second line is supererogative in syllables, whether from the oscitancy of the transcriber, or from the trepidation which might have overpowered the modest Frenchman, on finding himself in the act of writing to so great a man, I shall not dare to determine. Your servant,

GNOME.

P.S.—As mottoes are now fashionable, especially if taken from out of the way books, you may prefix, if you please, the following lines from Sidonius Apollinaris:

'Saxa, et robora, corneasque fibras
Mollit dulciloquâ canorus arte!'

TALLEYRAND, MINISTER OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS AT PARIS, TO LORD GRENVILLE, SECRETARY OF STATE IN GREAT BRITAIN FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS, AUDITOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, A LORD
OF TRADE, AN ELDER BROTHER OF TRINITY HOUSE, ETC.

My Lord! though your Lordship repel deviation
From forms long establish'd, yet with high consideration,
I plead for the honour to hope that no blame
Will attach, should this letter begin with my name.
I dar'd not presume on your Lordship to bounce, 5
But thought it more exquisite first to announce!

My Lord! I've the honour to be Talleyrand,
And the letter's from me! you'll not draw back your hand
Nor yet take it up by the rim in dismay,
As boys pick up ha'pence on April fool-day. 10
I'm no Jacobin foul, or red-hot Cordelier
That your Lordship's ungauntleted fingers need fear
An infection or burn! Believe me, 'tis true,
With a scorn like another I look down on the crew
That bawl and hold up to the mob's detestation 15
The most delicate wish for a silent persuasion.
A form long-establish'd these Terrorists call
Bribes, perjury, theft, and the devil and all!
And yet spite of all that the Moralist<sup>1</sup> prates,
'Tis the keystone and cement of civilized States. 20

Those American Reps!<sup>1</sup> And i' faith, they were serious!
 It shock'd us at Paris, like something mysterious,
 That men who've a Congress—But no more of 't! I'm proud
 To have stood so distinct from the Jacobin crowd.

My Lord! though the vulgar in wonder be lost at 25
 My transfigurations, and name me Apostate,
 Such a meaningless nickname, which never incens'd me,
Cannot prejudice you or your Cousin against me:
 I'm Ex-bishop. What then? Burke himself would agree
 That I left not the Church—'twas the Church that left me.
 My titles prelatie I lov'd and retain'd, 31
 As long as what I meant by Prelate remain'd:
 And tho' Mitres no longer will pass in our mart.
 I'm episcopal still to the core of my heart.
 No time from my name this my motto shall sever: 35
 'Twill be Non sine pulvere palma<sup>2</sup> for ever!

Your goodness, my Lord, I conceive as excessive,
 Or I dar'd not present you a scroll so digressive;
 And in truth with my pen thro' and thro' I should strike it;
 But I hear that your Lordship's own style is just like it. 40
 Dear my Lord, we are right: for what charms can be shew'd
 In a thing that goes straight like an old Roman road?
 The tortoise crawls straight, the hare doubles about;
 And the true line of beauty still winds in and out.
 It argues, my Lord! of fine thoughts such a brood in us 45
 To split and divide into heads multitudinous,
 While charms that surprise (it can ne'er be denied us)
 Sprout forth from each head, like the ears from King Midas.
 Were a genius of rank, like a commonplace dunce,
 Compell'd to drive on to the main point at once, 50
 What a plentiful vintage of initiations<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> The word Initiations is borrowed from the new Constitution, and can only mean, in plain English, introductory matter. If the manuscript would bear us out, we should propose to read the line thus—'What a plentiful Verbage, what Initiations!' inasmuch as Vintage must necessarily refer to wine, really or figuratively; and we cannot guess what species Lord Grenville's eloquence may be supposed to resemble, unless, indeed, it be Cowslip wine. A slashing critic to whom we read the manuscript, proposed to read, 'What a plenty of Flowers—what initiations!' and supposes it may allude indiscriminately to Poppy Flowers, or Flour of Brimstone. The most modest emendation, perhaps, would be this—for Vintage read Vantage.

Would Noble Lords lose in your Lordship's orations.
 My fancy transports me! As mute as a mouse,
 And as fleet as a pigeon, I'm borne to the house
 Where all those who are Lords, from father to son, 55
 Discuss the affairs of all those who are none.
 I behold you, my Lord! of your feelings quite full,
 'Fore the woolsack arise, like a sack full of wool!
 You rise on each Anti-Grenvillian Member,
 Short, thick and blustrous, like a day in November!<sup>1</sup> 60
 Short in person, I mean: for the length of your speeches
 Fame herself, that most famous reporter, ne'er reaches.
 Lo! Patience beholds you condemn her brief reign,
 And Time, that all-panting toil'd after in vain, (Like the Beldam who raced for a smock with her grandchild) 65
 Drops and cries: 'Were such lungs e'er assign'd to a man-
 child?'
 Your strokes at her vitals pale Truth has confess'd,
 And Zeal unresisted entempests your breast!<sup>2</sup>
 Though some noble Lords may be wishing to sup,
 Your merit self-conscious, my Lord, keeps you up, 70
 Unextinguish'd and swoln, as a balloon of paper
 Keeps aloft by the smoke of its own farthing taper.
 Ye SIXTEENS<sup>3</sup> of Scotland, your snuffs ye must trim;
 Your Geminies, fix'd stars of England! grow dim,

<sup>1</sup> We cannot sufficiently admire the accuracy of this simile. For as Lord Grenville, though short, is certainly not the shortest man in the House, even so is it with the days in November.

<sup>2</sup> An evident plagiarism of the Ex-Bishop's from Dr. Johnson:—

'Existence saw him spurn her bounded reign,
 And panting Time toil'd after him in vain:
 His pow'rful strokes presiding Truth confess'd,
 And unresisting Passion storm'd the breast.'

<sup>3</sup> This line and the following are involved in an almost Lycophrontic tenebrosity. On repeating them, however, to an Illuminant, whose confidence I possess, he informed me (and he ought to know, for he is a Tallow-chandler by trade) that certain candles go by the name of sixteens. This explains the whole, the Scotch Peers are destined to burn out—and so are candles! The English are perpetual, and are therefore styled Fixed Stars! The word Geminies is, we confess, still obscure to us; though we venture to suggest that it may perhaps be a metaphor (daringly sublime) for the two eyes which noble Lords do in general possess. It is certainly used by the poet Fletcher in this sense, in the 31st stanza of his Purple Island:—

'What! shall I then need seek 'a patron out,
 Or beg a favour from a mistress' eyes,
 To fence my song against the vulgar rout,
 And shine upon me with her geminies?'

And but for a form long-establish'd, no doubt
Twinkling faster and faster, ye all would go out.

75

Apropos, my dear Lord! a ridiculous blunder
Of some of our Journalists caused us some wonder:
It was said that in aspect malignant and sinister
In the Isle of Great Britain a great Foreign Minister 80
Turn'd as pale as a journeyman miller's frock coat is
On observing a star that appear'd in BOOTES!
When the whole truth was this (O those ignorant brutes!)
Your Lordship had made his appearance in boots.
You, my Lord, with your star, sat in boots, and the Spanish
Ambassador thereupon thought fit to vanish. 86

But perhaps, dear my Lord, among other worse crimes,
The whole was no more than a lie of The Times.
It is monstrous, my Lord! in a civilis'd state
That such Newspaper rogues should have license to prate. 90
Indeed printing in general—but for the taxes,
Is in theory false and pernicious in praxis!
You and I, and your Cousin, and Abbé Sieyes,
And all the great Statesmen that live in these days,
Are agreed that no nation secure is from violence 95
Unless all who must think are maintain'd all in silence.
This printing, my Lord—but 'tis useless to mention
What we both of us think—'twas a curséd invention,
And Germany might have been honestly prouder
Had she left it alone, and found out only powder. 100
My Lord! when I think of our labours and cares
Who rule the Department of foreign affairs,
And how with their libels these journalists bore us,
Though Rage I acknowledge than Scorn less decorous;
Yet their presses and types I could shiver in splinters, 105
Those Printers' black Devils! those Devils of Printers!
In case of a peace—but perhaps it were better
To proceed to the absolute point of my letter:
For the deep wounds of France, Bonaparte, my master,
Has found out a new sort of basilicon plaister. 110
But your time, my dear Lord! is your nation's best treasure,
I've intruded already too long on your leisure;
If so, I entreat you with penitent sorrow
To pause, and resume the remainder to-morrow.

APOLOGIA PRO VITA SUA<sup>1</sup>

THE poet in his lone yet genial hour
 Gives to his eyes a magnifying power:
 Or rather he emancipates his eyes
 From the black shapeless accidents of size—
 In unctuous cones of kindling coal, 5
 Or smoke upwreathing from the pipe's trim bole,
 His gifted ken can see
 Phantoms of sublimity.

THE tedded hay, the first fruits of the soil,
 The tedded hay and corn-sheaves in one field,
 Show summer gone, ere come. The foxglove tall
 Sheds its loose purple bells, or in the gust,
 Or when it bends beneath the up-springing lark, 5
 Or mountain-finch alighting. And the rose
 (In vain the darling of successful love)
 Stands, like some boasted beauty of past years,
 The thorns remaining, and the flowers all gone.
 Nor can I find, amid my lonely walk 10
 By rivulet, or spring, or wet roadside,
 That blue and bright-eyed floweret of the brook,

Hope's gentle gem, the sweet Forget-me-not!<sup>1</sup>
 So will not fade the flowers which Emmeline
 With delicate fingers on the snow-white silk 15
 Has worked (the flowers which most she knew I loved),
 And, more beloved than they, her auburn hair.

In the cool morning twilight, early waked
 By her full bosom's joyous restlessness,
 Softly she rose, and lightly stole along, 20
 Down the slope coppice to the woodbine bower,
 Whose rich flowers, swinging in the morning breeze,
 Over their dim fast-moving shadows hung,
 Making a quiet image of disquiet
 In the smooth, scarcely moving river-pool. 25
 There, in that bower where first she owned her love,
 And let me kiss my own warm tear of joy
 From off her glowing cheek, she sate and stretched
 The silk upon the frame, and worked her name
 Between the Moss-Rose and Forget-me-not— 30
 Her own dear name, with her own auburn hair!
 That forced to wander till sweet spring return,
 I yet might ne'er forget her smile, her look,
 Her voice, (that even in her mirthful mood
 Has made me wish to steal away and weep,) 35
 Nor yet the entrancement of that maiden kiss
 With which she promised, that when spring returned,
 She would resign one half of that dear name,
 And own thenceforth no other name but mine!

A THOUGHT SUGGESTED BY A VIEW<sup>1</sup>

OF SADDLEBACK IN CUMBERLAND

ON stern Blencartha's perilous height
 The winds are tyrannous and strong;
 And flashing forth unsteady light
 From stern Blencartha's skiey height,
 As loud the torrents throng!
 Beneath the moon, in gentle weather,
 They bind the earth and sky together.
 But oh! the sky and all its forms, how quiet!
 The things that seek the earth, how full of noise and riot!

THE MAD MONK<sup>2</sup>

I HEARD a voice from Etna's side;
 Where o'er a cavern's mouth
 That fronted to the south
 A chesnut spread its umbrage wide:

The Mad Monk—Title] The Voice from the Side of Etna; or the Mad Monk: An Ode in Mrs. Ratcliff's Manner M. P.

A hermit or a monk the man might be ;

But him I could not see :

And thus the music flow'd along,

In melody most like to old Sicilian song :

'There was a time when earth, and sea, and skies,

The bright green vale, and forest's dark recess,

10

With all things, lay before mine eyes

In steady loveliness :

But now I feel, on earth's uneasy scene,

Such sorrows as will never cease ;—

I only ask for peace ;

15

If I must live to know that such a time has been !'

A silence then ensued :

Till from the cavern came

A voice ;—it was the same !

And thus, in mournful tone, its dreary plaint renew'd :

20

'Last night, as o'er the sloping turf I trod,

The smooth green turf, to me a vision gave

Beneath mine eyes, the sod—

The roof of Rosa's grave !

My heart has need with dreams like these to strive,

25

For, when I woke, beneath mine eyes I found

The plot of mossy ground,

On which we oft have sat when Rosa was alive.—

Why must the rock, and margin of the flood,

Why must the hills so many flow'rets bear,

30

Whose colours to a murder'd maiden's blood,

Such sad resemblance wear ?—

'I struck the wound,—this hand of mine !

For Oh, thou maid divine,

I lov'd to agony !

35

The youth whom thou call'd'st thine

Did never love like me !

 The sun torments me from his western bed,
 Oh, let him cease for ever to diffuse
 Those crimson spectre hues!
 Oh, let me lie in peace, and be for ever dead!' 45
 Here ceas'd the voice. In deep dismay,
 Down thro' the forest I pursu'd my way.

INSCRIPTION FOR A SEAT BY THE ROAD SIDE HALF-WAY UP A STEEP HILL FACING SOUTH<sup>1</sup>

THOU who in youthful vigour rich, and light
 With youthful thoughts dost need no rest! O thou,
 To whom alike the valley and the hill
 Present a path of ease! Should e'er thine eye
 Glance on this sod, and this rude tablet, stop! 5
 'Tis a rude spot, yet here, with thankful hearts,
 The foot-worn soldier and his family
 Have rested, wife and babe, and boy, perchance
 Some eight years old or less, and scantily fed,
 Garbed like his father, and already bound 10
 To his poor father's trade. Or think of him

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Post, October 21, 1800 (Coleridge's birthday) under the signature VENTIFRONS: reprinted in the Lake Herald, November 2, 1906. Now first included in Coleridge's Poetical Works. Venti Frons is dog-Latin for Windy Brow, a point of view immediately above the River Greta, on the lower slope of Latrigg. Here it was that on Wednesday, August 13, 1800, Wordsworth, his sister Dorothy, and Coleridge 'made the Windy Brow seat'—a 'seat of sods'. In a letter to his printers, Biggs and Cottle, of October 10, 1800, Wordsworth says that 'a friend [the author of the Ancient Mariner, &c.] has also furnished me with a few of these Poems in the second volume [of the Lyrical Ballads] which are classed under the title of "Poems on the Naming of Places"' (Wordsworth and Coleridge MSS., Ed. W. Hale White, 1897, pp. 27, 28). No such poems or poem appeared, and it has been taken for granted that none were ever written. At any rate one 'Inscription', now at last forthcoming, was something more than a 'story from the land of dreams'!

Who, laden with his implements of toil,
 Returns at night to some far distant home,
 And having plodded on through rain and mire
 With limbs o'erlaboured, weak from feverish heat, 15
 And chafed and fretted by December blasts,
 Here pauses, thankful he hath reached so far,
 And 'mid the sheltering warmth of these bleak trees
 Finds restoration—or reflect on those
 Who in the spring to meet the warmer sun 20
 Crawl up this steep hill-side, that needlessly
 Bends double their weak frames, already bowed
 By age or malady, and when, at last,
 They gain this wished-for turf, this seat of sods,
 Repose—and, well-admonished, ponder here 25
 On final rest. And if a serious thought
 Should come uncalled—how soon thy motions high,
 Thy balmy spirits and thy fervid blood
 Must change to feeble, withered, cold and dry,
 Cherish the wholesome sadness! And where'er 30
 The tide of Life impel thee, O be prompt
 To make thy present strength the staff of all,
 Their staff and resting-place—so shalt thou give
 To Youth the sweetest joy that Youth can know;
 And for thy future self thou shalt provide 35
 Through every change of various life, a seat,
 Not built by hands, on which thy inner part,
 Imperishable, many a grievous hour,
 Or bleak or sultry may repose—yea, sleep
 The sleep of Death, and dream of blissful worlds, 40
 Then wake in Heaven, and find the dream all true.

A STRANGER MINSTREL<sup>1</sup>

WRITTEN [TO MRS. ROBINSON,] A FEW WEEKS BEFORE HER DEATH

As late on Skiddaw's mount I lay supine,
 Midway th' ascent, in that repose divine

1 Skiddaw's] Skiddaw 1801.

When the soul centred in the heart's recess
 Hath quaff'd its fill of Nature's loveliness,
 Yet still beside the fountain's marge will stay 5
 And fain would thirst again, again to quaff;
 Then when the tear, slow travelling on its way,
 Fills up the wrinkles of a silent laugh—
 In that sweet mood of sad and humorous thought
 A form within me rose, within me wrought 10
 With such strong magic, that I cried aloud,
 'Thou ancient Skiddaw by thy helm of cloud,
 And by thy many-colour'd chasms deep,
 And by their shadows that for ever sleep,
 By yon small flaky mists that love to creep 15
 Along the edges of those spots of light,
 Those sunny islands on thy smooth green height,
 And by yon shepherds with their sheep,
 And dogs and boys, a gladsome crowd,
 That rush e'en now with clamour loud 20
 Sudden from forth thy topmost cloud,
 And by this laugh, and by this tear,
 I would, old Skiddaw, she were here!
 A lady of sweet song is she,
 Her soft blue eye was made for thee! 25
 O ancient Skiddaw, by this tear,
 I would, I would that she were here!'

Then ancient Skiddaw, stern and proud,
 In sullen majesty replying,
 Thus spake from out his helm of cloud 30
 (His voice was like an echo dying!):—
 'She dwells belike in scenes more fair,
 And scorns a mount so bleak and bare.'

I only sigh'd when this I heard,
 Such mournful thoughts within me stirr'd 35
 That all my heart was faint and weak,
 So sorely was I troubled!
 No laughter wrinkled on my cheek,
 But O the tears were doubled!
 But ancient Skiddaw green and high 40
 Heard and understood my sigh;

And now, in tones less stern and rude,
 As if he wish'd to end the feud,
 Spake he, the proud response renewing
 (His voice was like a monarch wooing):— 45
 'Nay, but thou dost not know her might,
 The pinions of her soul how strong!
 But many a stranger in my height
 Hath sung to me her magic song,
 Sending forth his ecstasy 50
 In her divinest melody,
 And hence I know her soul is free,
 She is where'er she wills to be,
 Unfetter'd by mortality!
 Now to the "haunted beach" can fly,<sup>1</sup> 55
 Beside the threshold scourged with waves,
 Now where the maniac wildly raves,
 "Pale moon, thou spectre of the sky!"<sup>2</sup>
 No wind that hurries o'er my height
 Can travel with so swift a flight. 60
 I too, methinks, might merit
 The presence of her spirit!
 To me too might belong
 The honour of her song and witching melody,
 Which most resembles me, 65
 Soft, various, and sublime,
 Exempt from wrongs of Time!'

Thus spake the mighty Mount, and I
 Made answer, with a deep-drawn sigh:—
 'Thou ancient Skiddaw, by this tear, 70
 I would, I would that she were here!'

ALCAEUS TO SAPPHO<sup>1</sup>

How sweet, when crimson colours dart
 Across a breast of snow,
 To see that you are in the heart
 That beats and throbs below.

All Heaven is in a maiden's blush, 5
 In which the soul doth speak,
 That it was you who sent the flush
 Into the maiden's cheek.

Large steadfast eyes! eyes gently rolled
 In shades of changing blue, 10
 How sweet are they, if they behold
 No dearer sight than you.

And, can a lip more richly glow,
 Or be more fair than this?
 The world will surely answer, No! 15
 I, SAPPHO, answer, Yes!

Then grant one smile, tho' it should mean
 A thing of doubtful birth;
 That I may say these eyes have seen
 The fairest face on earth! 20

THE TWO ROUND SPACES ON THE TOMBSTONE<sup>2</sup>

THE Devil believes that the Lord will come,
 Stealing a march without beat of drum,

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Post, November 24, 1800: reprinted in Letters from the Lake Poets, 1889, p. 16. It is probable that these lines, sent in a letter to Daniel Stuart (Editor of the Morning Post), dated October 7, 1800, were addressed to Mrs. Robinson, who was a frequent contributor of verses signed 'Sappho'. A sequence of Sonnets entitled 'Sappho to Phaon' is included in the collected edition of her Poems, 1806, iii. 63-107.

<sup>2</sup> First published in the Morning Post, December 4, 1800: reprinted in Fraser's Magazine both in February and in May, 1833, and in Payne Collier's Old Man's Diary, i. 35. First collected in P. W., 1834, with the

About the same time that ne came last,
 On an Old Christmas-day in a snowy blast:
 Till he bids the trump sound neither body nor soul stirs, 5
 For the dead men's heads have slipt under their bolsters.

Oh! ho! brother Bard, in our churchyard,
 Both beds and bolsters are soft and green;
 Save one alone, and that's of stone,
 And under it lies a Counsellor keen.

10

'Twould be a square tomb, if it were not too long;
 And 'tis fenced round with irons sharp, spear-like, and strong.

This fellow from Aberdeen hither did skip
 With a waxy face and a blubber lip,

following Prefatory Note :—"See the apology for the "Fire, Famine, and Slaughter", in first volume. This is the first time the author ever published these lines. He would have been glad, had they perished; but they have now been printed repeatedly in magazines, and he is told that the verses will not perish. Here, therefore, they are owned, with a hope that they will be taken—as assuredly they were composed—in mere sport." These lines, which were directed against Sir James Mackintosh, were included in a letter to [Sir] Humphry Davy, dated October 9, 1800. There is a MS. version in the British Museum in the handwriting of R. Heber, presented by him to J. Mitford. Mr. Campbell questions the accuracy of Coleridge's statement with regard to his never having published the poem on his own account. But it is possible that Davy may have sent the lines to the Press without Coleridge's authority. Daniel Stuart, the Editor of the Morning Post, in the Gentleman's Magazine for May, 1838, says that 'Coleridge sent one [poem] attacking Mackintosh, too obviously for me not to understand it, and of course it was not published. Mackintosh had had one of his front teeth broken and the stump was black'. Stuart remembered that the lines attacking his brother-in-law had been suppressed, but forgot that he had inserted the rest of the poem. The poem as printed in 1893, despite the heading, does not follow the text of the Morning Post.

What was the colour of his whole heart.

This Counsellor sweet,
This Scotchman complete,
(The Devil scotch him for a snake!)
I trust he lies in his grave awake. 20

On the sixth of January,
When all around is white with snow,
As a Cheshire yeoman's dairy,
Brother Bard, ho! ho! believe it, or no,
On that stone tomb to you I'll show 25
Two round spaces void of snow.

I swear by our Knight, and his forefathers' souls,
That in size and shape they are just like the holes
In the house of privy
Of that ancient family. 30

On those two places void of snow,
There have sat in the night for an hour or so,
Before sunrise, and after cock-crow,
He kicking his heels, she cursing her corns,
All to the tune of the wind in their horns, 35

The Devil and his Grannam,
With a snow-blast to fan 'em;
Expecting and hoping the trumpet to blow,
For they are cock-sure of the fellow below!

THE SNOW-DROP<sup>1</sup>

I

FEAR no more, thou timid Flower!
 Fear thou no more the winter's might,
 The whelming thaw, the ponderous shower,
 The silence of the freezing night!
 Since Laura murmur'd o'er thy leaves
 The potent sorceries of song,
 To thee, meek Flowret! gentler gales
 And cloudless skies belong.

2

Her eye with tearful meanings fraught,
 She gaz'd till all the body mov'd
 Interpreting the Spirit's thought—
 The Spirit's eager sympathy

10

To the Editor of the Morning Post.

Sir,

I am one of your many readers who have been highly gratified by some extracts from Mrs. Robinson's 'Walsingham': you will oblige me by inserting the following lines [sic] immediately on the perusal of her beautiful poem 'The Snow Drop'.—ZAGRI.

The 'Lines' were never sent or never appeared in the Morning Post.

To the Snow Drop.

I

Fear thou no more the wintry storm,
 Sweet Flowret, blest by LAURA's song:
 She gaz'd upon thy slender form,
 The mild Enchantress gaz'd so long;
 That trembling as she saw thee droop,
 Poor Trembler! o'er thy snowy bed,
 With imitation's sympathy
 She too inclin'd her head.

2

She droop'd her head, she stretch'd her arm,
 She whisper'd low her witching rhymes:
 A gentle Sylphid heard the charm,
 And bore thee to Pierian climes!
 Fear thou no more the sparkling Frost,
 The Tempest's Howl, the Fog-damp's gloom:
 For thus mid laurels evergreen
 Immortal thou shalt bloom!

Now trembled with thy trembling stem,
 And while thou droopedst o'er thy bed,
 With sweet unconscious sympathy 15
     Inclin'd the drooping head.<sup>1</sup>

3

She droop'd her head, she stretch'd her arm,
 She whisper'd low her witching rhymes,
 Fame unreluctant heard the charm,
 And bore thee to Pierian climes! 20
 Fear thou no more the Matin Frost
 That sparkled on thy bed of snow;
 For there, mid laurels ever green,
     Immortal thou shalt blow.

4

Thy petals boast a white more soft, 25
 The spell hath so perfuméd thee,
 That careless Love shall deem thee oft
 A blossom from his Myrtle tree.
 Then, laughing at the fair deceit,
 Shall race with some Etesian wind 30

<sup>1</sup> The second stanza of Mrs. Robinson's ('Perdita') 'Ode to the Snow-drop' runs thus:

All weak and wan, with head inclin'd,
     Its parent-breast the drifted snow,
 It trembles, while the ruthless wind
 Bends its slim form; the tempest lowers,
 Its em'rald eye drops crystal show'rs
     On its cold bed below.

To seek the woven arboret
Where Laura lies reclin'd.

5

All them whom Love and Fancy grace,
When grosser eyes are clos'd in sleep,
The gentle spirits of the place 35
Waft up the insuperable steep,
On whose vast summit broad and smooth
Her nest the Phoenix Bird conceals,
And where by cypresses o'erhung
The heavenly Lethe steals. 40

6

A sea-like sound the branches breathe,
Stirr'd by the Breeze that loiters there;
And all that stretch their limbs beneath,
Forget the coil of mortal care.
Strange mists along the margins rise, 45
To heal the guests who thither come,
And fit the soul to re-endure
Its earthly martyrdom.

7*

The margin dear to moonlight elves
Where Zephyr-trembling Lilies grow, 50
And bend to kiss their softer selves
That tremble in the stream below:—
There nightly borne does Laura lie
A magic Slumber heaves her breast:
Her arm, white wanderer of the Harp, 55
Beneath her cheek is prest.

8*

The Harp uphung by golden chains
Of that low wind which whispers round,
With coy reproachfulness complains,
In snatches of reluctant sound: 60
The music hovers half-perceiv'd,
And only moulds the slumberer's dreams;
Remember'd Loves relume her cheek
With Youth's returning gleams.

ON REVISITING THE SEA-SHORE<sup>1</sup>

AFTER LONG ABSENCE, UNDER STRONG MEDICAL RECOMMENDATION
NOT TO BATHE

God be with thee, gladsome Ocean!
How gladly greet I thee once more!
Ships and waves, and ceaseless motion,
And men rejoicing on thy shore.

Dissuading spake the mild Physician, 5
'Those briny waves for thee are Death!'
But my soul fulfilled her mission,
And lo! I breathe untroubled breath!

Fashion's pining sons and daughters,
That seek the crowd they seem to fly, 10
Trembling they approach thy waters;
And what cares Nature, if they die?

Me a thousand hopes and pleasures,
A thousand recollections bland,
Thoughts sublime, and stately measures, 15
Revisit on thy echoing strand:

Dreams (the Soul herself forsaking),
Tearful raptures, boyish mirth;
Silent adorations, making
A blessed shadow of this Earth! 20

ODE TO TRANQUILLITY<sup>1</sup>

TRANQUILLITY! thou better name
 Than all the family of Fame!
 Thou ne'er wilt leave my riper age
 To low intrigue, or factious rage;
 For oh! dear child of thoughtful Truth, 5
 To thee I gave my early youth,
 And left the bark, and blest the steadfast shore,
 Ere yet the tempest rose and scared me with its roar.

Who late and lingering seeks thy shrine,
 On him but seldom, Power divine, 10
 Thy spirit rests! Satiety
 And Sloth, poor counterfeits of thee,

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Morning Post (with two additional stanzas at the commencement of the poem), December 4, 1801: reprinted in The Friend (without heading or title), No. 1, Thursday, June 1, 1809: included in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, 1828, 1829, and 1834. What Statesmen scheme and Soldiers work,
 Whether the Pontiff or the Turk,
 Will e'er renew th' expiring lease
 Of Empire; whether War or Peace
 Will best play off the Consul's game;
 What fancy-figures, and what name
 Half-thinking, sensual France, a natural Slave,
 On those ne'er-broken Chains, her self-forg'd Chains, will grave;

Disturb not me! Some tears I shed
 When bow'd the Swiss his noble head;
 Since then, with quiet heart have view'd
 Both distant Fights and Treaties crude,
 Whose heap'd up terms, which Fear compels,

 And future Fuel of the funeral Pyre)

Mock the tired worldling. Idle Hope
 And dire Remembrance interlope,
 To vex the feverish slumbers of the mind: 15
 The bubble floats before, the spectre stalks behind.

But me thy gentle hand will lead
 At morning through the accustomed mead;
 And in the sultry summer's heat
 Will build me up a mossy seat; 20
 And when the gust of Autumn crowds,
 And breaks the busy moonlight clouds,
 Thou best the thought canst raise, the heart attune,
 Light as the busy clouds, calm as the gliding moon.

The feeling heart, the searching soul, 25
 To thee I dedicate the whole!
 And while within myself I trace
 The greatness of some future race,
 Aloof with hermit-eye I scan
 The present works of present man— 30
 A wild and dream-like trade of blood and guile,
 Too foolish for a tear, too wicked for a smile!

TO ASRA<sup>1</sup>

ARE there two things, of all which men possess,
 That are so like each other and so near,
 As mutual Love seems like to Happiness?
 Dear Asra, woman beyond utterance dear!
 This Love which ever welling at my heart, 5
 Now in its living fount doth heave and fall,
 Now overflowing pours thro' every part
 Of all my frame, and fills and changes all,
 Like vernal waters springing up through snow,

THE SECOND BIRTH<sup>1</sup>

THERE are two births, the one when Light
 First strikes the new-awaken'd sense—
 The other when two souls unite,
 And we must count our life from then.

When you lov'd me, and I lov'd you, 5
 Then both of us were born anew.

THIS yearning heart (Love! witness what I say)
 Enshrines thy form as purely as it may,
 Round which, as to some spirit uttering bliss,
 My thoughts all stand ministrant night and day
 Like saintly Priests, that dare not think amiss. 5

This night, so tranquil now, will not go hence
 Unroused by winds, that ply a busier trade
 Than those which mould yon cloud in lazy flakes, 5
 Or the dull sobbing draft, that moans and rakes
 Upon the strings of this Æolian lute,
 Which better far were mute.
 For lo! the New-moon winter-bright!
 And overspread with phantom light, 10
 (With swimming phantom light o'erspread
 But rimmed and circled by a silver thread)
 I see the old Moon in her lap, foretelling
 The coming-on of rain and squally blast.
 And oh! that even now the gust were swelling, 15
 And the slant night-shower driving loud and fast!
 Those sounds which oft have raised me, whilst they awed,
 And sent my soul abroad,
 Might now perhaps their wonted impulse give,
 Might startle this dull pain, and make it move and live! 20

A grief without a pang, void, dark, and drear,
 A stifled, drowsy, unimpassioned grief,
 Which finds no natural outlet, no relief,
 In word, or sigh, or tear—
 O Lady! in this wan and heartless mood, 25
 To other thoughts by yonder throstle woo'd,
 All this long eve, so balmy and serene,
 Have I been gazing on the western sky,
 And its peculiar tint of yellow green:
 And still I gaze—and with how blank an eye! 30
 And those thin clouds above, in flakes and bars,
 That give away their motion to the stars;
 Those stars, that glide behind them or between,
 Now sparkling, now bedimmed, but always seen:
 Yon crescent Moon, as fixed as if it grew 35
 In its own cloudless, starless lake of blue;
 I see them all so excellently fair,
 I see, not feel, how beautiful they are!

III

My genial spirits fail;
 And what can these avail 40
 To lift the smothering weight from off my breast?
 It were a vain endeavour,
 Though I should gaze for ever
 On that green light that lingers in the west:
 I may not hope from outward forms to win 45
 The passion and the life, whose fountains are within.

IV

O Lady! we receive but what we give,
 And in our life alone does Nature live:
 Ours is her wedding garment, ours her shroud!
 And would we aught behold, of higher worth, 50
 Than that inanimate cold world allowed
 To the poor loveless ever-anxious crowd,
 Ah! from the soul itself must issue forth
 A light, a glory, a fair luminous cloud
 Enveloping the Earth— 55
 And from the soul itself must there be sent
 A sweet and potent voice, of its own birth,
 Of all sweet sounds the life and element!

V

O pure of heart! thou need'st not ask of me
 What this strong music in the soul may be! 60
 What, and wherein it doth exist,
 This light, this glory, this fair luminous mist,
 This beautiful and beauty-making power.

Joy, Lady! is the spirit and the power,
 Which wedding Nature to us gives in dower
 A new Earth and new Heaven,
 Undreamt of by the sensual and the proud— 70
 Joy is the sweet voice, Joy the luminous cloud—
 We in ourselves rejoice!
 And thence flows all that charms or ear or sight,
 All melodies the echoes of that voice,
 All colours a suffusion from that light. 75

There was a time when, though my path was rough,
 This joy within me dallied with distress,
 And all misfortunes were but as the stuff
 Whence Fancy made me dreams of happiness:
 For hope grew round me, like the twining vine, 80
 And fruits, and foliage, not my own, seemed mine.
 But now afflictions bow me down to earth:
 Nor care I that they rob me of my mirth;
 But oh! each visitation
 Suspends what nature gave me at my birth, 85
 My shaping spirit of Imagination.

For not to think of what I needs must feel,

But to be still and patient, all I can ;

And haply by abstruse research to steal

From my own nature all the natural man—

90

This was my sole resource, my only plan :

Till that which suits a part infects the whole,

And now is almost grown the habit of my soul.

VII

Hence, viper thoughts, that coil around my mind,

Reality's dark dream!

95

I turn from you, and listen to the wind,

Which long has raved unnoticed. What a scream

Of agony by torture lengthened out

That lute sent forth! Thou Wind, that rav'st without,

Bare crag, or mountain-tairn,<sup>1</sup> or blasted tree,

100

Or pine-grove whither woodman never clomb,

Or lonely house, long held the witches' home,

Methinks were fitter instruments for thee,

Mad Lutanist! who in this month of showers,

Of dark-brown gardens, and of peeping flowers,

105

Mak'st Devils' yule, with worse than wintry song,

The blossoms, buds, and timorous leaves among.

Thou Actor, perfect in all tragic sounds!

Thou mighty Poet, e'en to frenzy bold!

What tell'st thou now about?

110

'Tis of the rushing of an host in rout,

With groans, of trampled men, with smarting wounds—

<sup>1</sup> Tairn is a small lake, generally if not always applied to the lakes up in the mountains and which are the feeders of those in the valleys. This address to the Storm-wind [wind S. L.] will not appear extravagant to those who have heard it at night and in a mountainous country.

 But hush! there is a pause of deepest silence!
 And all that noise, as of a rushing crowd, 115
 With groans, and tremulous shudderings—all is over—
 It tells another tale, with sounds less deep and loud!
 A tale of less affright,
 And tempered with delight,
 As Otway's self had framed the tender lay,— 120
 'Tis of a little child
 Upon a lonesome wild,
 Not far from home, but she hath lost her way:
 And now moans low in bitter grief and fear,
 And now screams loud, and hopes to make her mother hear.

 Visit her, gentle Sleep! with wings of healing,
 And may this storm be but a mountain-birth,
 May all the stars hang bright above her dwelling, 130
 Silent as though they watched the sleeping Earth!
 With light heart may she rise,
 Gay fancy, cheerful eyes,

OR THE LOVER'S RESOLUTION

THROUGH weeds and thorns, and matted underwood
 I force my way; now climb, and now descend
 O'er rocks, or bare or mossy, with wild foot
 Crushing the purple whorts;<sup>2</sup> while oft unseen,
 Hurrying along the drifted forest-leaves, 5
 The scared snake rustles. Onward still I toil,
 I know not, ask not whither! A new joy,
 Lovely as light, sudden as summer gust,
 And gladsome as the first-born of the spring,
 Beckons me on, or follows from behind, 10
 Playmate, or guide! The master-passion quelled,
 I feel that I am free. With dun-red bark
 The fir-trees, and the unfrequent slender oak,
 Forth from this tangle wild of bush and brake
 Soar up, and form a melancholy vault 15
 High o'er me, murmuring like a distant sea.

Here Wisdom might resort, and here Remorse;
 Here too the love-lorn man, who, sick in soul,
 And of this busy human heart aweary,
 Worships the spirit of unconscious life 20

In tree or wild-flower.—Gentle lunatic!
 If so he might not wholly cease to be,
 He would far rather not be that he is;
 But would be something that he knows not of,
 In winds or waters, or among the rocks!

25

But hence, fond wretch! breathe not contagion here!
 No myrtle-walks are these: these are no groves
 Where Love dare loiter! If in sullen mood
 He should stray hither, the low stumps shall gore
 His dainty feet, the briar and the thorn
 Make his plumes haggard. Like a wounded bird
 Easily caught, ensnare him, O ye Nymphs,
 Ye Oreads chaste, ye dusky Dryades!
 And you, ye Earth-winds! you that make at morn
 The dew-drops quiver on the spiders' webs!
 You, O ye wingless Airs! that creep between
 The rigid stems of heath and bitten furze,
 Within whose scanty shade, at summer-noon,
 The mother-sheep hath worn a hollow bed—
 Ye, that now cool her fleece with dropless damp,
 Now pant and murmur with her feeding lamb.
 Chase, chase him, all ye Fays, and elfin Gnomes!
 With prickles sharper than his darts bemoek
 His little Godship, making him perforce
 Creep through a thorn-bush on yon hedgehog's back.

This is my hour of triumph! I can now
 With my own fancies play the merry fool,
 And laugh away worse folly, being free.
 Here will I seat myself, beside this old,
 Hollow, and weedy oak, which ivy-twine
 Clothes as with net-work: here will I couch my limbs,
 Close by this river, in this silent shade,
 As safe and sacred from the step of man
 As an invisible world—unheard, unseen,

 And the blue, delicate veins above her cheek;
 Ne'er played the wanton—never half disclosed

 Scatters them on the pool! Then all the charm
 Is broken—all that phantom world so fair
 Vanishes, and a thousand circlets spread,
 And each mis-shape the other. Stay awhile,
 Poor youth, who scarcely dar'st lift up thine eyes! 95
 The stream will soon renew its smoothness, soon
 The visions will return! And lo! he stays:
 And soon the fragments dim of lovely forms
 Come trembling back, unite, and now once more
 The pool becomes a mirror; and behold 100
 Each wildflower on the marge inverted there;
 And there the half-uprooted tree—but where,
 O where the virgin's snowy arm, that leaned

 Homeward she steals through many a woodland maze 105
 Which he shall seek in vain. Ill-fated youth!

 In mad love-yearning by the vacant brook,
 Till sickly thoughts bewitch thine eyes, and thou
 Behold'st her shadow still abiding there, 110

 How soon to re-unite! And see! they meet,
 Each in the other lost and found: and see
 Placeless, as spirits, one soft water-sun
 Throbbing within them, heart at once and eye!
 With its soft neighbourhood of filmy clouds,
 The stains and shadings of forgotten tears,
 Dimness o'erswum with lustre! Such the hour
 Of deep enjoyment, following love's brief feuds
 And hark, the noise of a near waterfall!
 I pass forth into light—I find myself
 Beneath a weeping birch (most beautiful
 Of forest trees, the Lady of the Woods),
 Hard by the brink of a tall weedy rock
 That overbrows the cataract. How bursts
 The landscape on my sight! Two crescent hills
 Fold in behind each other, and so make
 A circular vale, and land-locked, as might seem,
 With brook and bridge, and grey stone cottages,
 Half hid by rocks and fruit-trees. At my feet,
 The whortle-berries are bedewed with spray,
 Dashed upwards by the furious waterfall.
 How solemnly the pendent ivy-mass
 Swings in its winnow: All the air is calm.
 The smoke from cottage-chimneys, tinged with light,
 Rises in columns; from this house alone,
 Close by the water-fall, the column slants,
 And feels its ceaseless breeze. But what is this?
 That cottage, with its slanting chimney-smoke,
 And close beside its porch a sleeping child,
 His dear head pillowed on a sleeping dog—
 One arm between its fore-legs, and the hand
 Holds loosely its small handful of wild-flowers.
 Unfilleted, and of unequal lengths.

TO MATILDA BETHAM FROM A STRANGER <sup>1</sup>

[‘ONE of our most celebrated poets, who had, I was told, picked out and praised the little piece ‘On a Cloud,’ another had quoted (saying it would have been faultless if I had not used the word Phoebus in it, which he thought inadmissible in modern poetry), sent me some verses inscribed “To Matilda Betham, from a Stranger”; and dated “Keswick, Sept. 9, 1802, S. T. C.” I should have guessed whence they came, but dared not flatter myself so highly as satisfactorily to believe it, before I obtained the avowal of the lady who had transmitted them. Excerpt from ‘Autobiographical Sketch’.]

 Where friendship's zealous wish inspirited,
 Deepened and filled the subtle tones of taste: 5
 (So have I heard a Nightingale's fine notes Blend with the murmur of a hidden stream!)
 And now the fair, wild offspring of thy genius,
 Those wanderers whom thy fancy had sent forth
 To seek their fortune in this motley world, 10
 Have found a little home within my heart,
 And brought me, as the quit-rent of their lodging,
 Rose-buds, and fruit-blossoms, and pretty weeds,
 And timorous laurel leaflets half-disclosed,
 Engarlanded with gadding woodbine tendrils! 15
 A coronal, which, with undoubting hand,
 I twine around the brows of patriot HOPE!

The Almighty, having first composed a Man,
 Set him to music, framing Woman for him,
 And fitted each to each, and made them one! 20
 And 'tis my faith, that there's a natural bond
 Between the female mind and measured sounds,
 Nor do I know a sweeter Hope than this,
 That this sweet Hope, by judgment unproved,
 That our own Britain, our dear mother Isle, 25
 May boast one Maid, a poetess indeed,
 Great as th' impassioned Lesbian, in sweet song,
 And O! of holier mind, and happier fate.

Matilda! I dare twine thy vernal wreath
 Around the brows of patriot Hope! But thou 30
 Be wise! be bold! fulfil my auspices!
 Tho' sweet thy measures, stern must be thy thought,
 Patient thy study, watchful thy mild eye!
 Poetic feelings, like the stretching boughs
 Of mighty oaks, pay homage to the gales, 35

 As in the calm that stills the aspen grove.
 Be bold, meek Woman! but be wisely bold!
 Fly, ostrich-like, firm land beneath thy feet,
 Yet hurried onward by thy wings of fancy
 Swift as the whirlwind, singing in their quills. 45
 Look round thee! look within thee! think and feel!
 What nobler meed, Matilda! canst thou win,
 Than tears of gladness in a BOUGHTON'S<sup>1</sup> eyes,
 And exultation even in strangers' hearts?

HYMN BEFORE SUN-RISE, IN THE VALE OF CHAMOUNI<sup>2</sup>

BESIDES the Rivers, Arve and Arveiron, which have their sources in the foot of Mont Blanc, five conspicuous torrents rush down its sides; and within a few paces of the Glaciers, the Gentiana Major grows in immense numbers, with its 'flowers of loveliest [liveliest Friend, 1809] blue.'

HAST thou a charm to stay the morning-star
 In his steep course? So long he seems to pause
 On thy bald awful head, O sovran BLANC,

<sup>2</sup> First published in the Morning Post, Sept. 11, 1802: reprinted in the Poetical Register for 1802 (1803), ii. 308, 311, and in The Friend, No. XI, Oct. 26, 1809: included in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, 1828, 1829, and 1834. Three MSS. are extant: (1) MS. A, sent to Sir George Beaumont, Oct. 1803 (see Colcorton Letters, 1886, i. 26; (2) MS. B, the MS. of the version as printed in The Friend, Oct. 26, 1809 (now in the Forster Collection in the Victoria and Albert Museum); (3) MS. C, presented to Mrs. Brabant in 1815 (now in the British Museum). The Hymn before Sunrise, &c., 'Hymn in the manner of the Psalms,' is an expansion, in part, of a translation of

3 On thy bald awful head O Chamouny M. P., P. R.: On thy bald awful top O Chamouny MS. A: On thy bald awful top O Sovran Blanc Friend, 1809.

The Arve and Arveiron at thy base
 Rave ceaselessly; but thou, most awful Form! 5
 Risest from forth thy silent sea of pines,
 How silently! Around thee and above
 Deep is the air and dark, substantial, black,
 An ebon mass: methinks thou piercest it,
 As with a wedge! But when I look again, 10
 It is thine own calm home, thy crystal shrine,
 Thy habitation from eternity!
 O dread and silent Mount! I gazed upon thee,
 Till thou, still present to the bodily sense,
 Didst vanish from my thought: entranced in prayer 15
 I worshipped the Invisible alone.

Yet, like some sweet beguiling melody,

Friederika Brun's 'Ode to Chamouny', addressed to Klopstock, which numbers some twenty lines. The German original was first appended to Coleridge's Poetical Works in 1844 (p. 372). A translation was given in a footnote, P. W. (ed. by T. Ashe), 1885, ii. 86, 87. In the Morning Post and Poetical Register the following explanatory note preceded the poem:—

'CHAMOUNI, THE HOUR BEFORE SUNRISE.

'[Chamouni is one of the highest mountain valleys of the Barony of Faucigny in the Savoy Alps; and exhibits a kind of fairy world, in which the wildest appearances (I had almost said horrors) of Nature alternate with the softest and most beautiful. The chain of Mont Blanc is its boundary; and besides the Arve it is filled with sounds from the Arveiron, which rushes from the melted glaciers, like a giant, mad with joy, from a dungeon, and forms other torrents of snow-water, having their rise in the glaciers which slope down into the valley. The beautiful Gentiana major, or greater gentian, with blossoms of the brightest blue, grows in large companies a few steps from the never-melted ice of the glaciers. I thought it an affecting emblem of the boldness of human hope, venturing near, and, as it were, leaning over the brink of the grave. Indeed, the whole vale, its every light, its every sound, must needs impress every mind not utterly callous with the thought—Who would be, who could be an Atheist in this valley of wonders! If any of the readers of the MORNING POST [Those who have P. R.] have visited this vale in their journeys among the Alps, I am confident that they [that they om. P. R.] will not find the sentiments and feelings expressed, or attempted to be expressed, in the following poem, extravagant.']'

 And who commanded (and the silence came),
 Here let the billows stiffen, and have rest?

Ye Ice-falls! ye that from the mountain's brow

 Torrents, methinks, that heard a mighty voice,
 And stopped at once amid their maddest plunge!

THE GOOD, GREAT MAN<sup>1</sup>

'How seldom, friend! a good great man inherits
 Honour or wealth with all his worth and pains!
 It sounds like stories from the land of spirits
 If any man obtain that which he merits
 Or any merit that which he obtains.'

REPLY TO THE ABOVE

For shame, dear friend, renounce this canting strain!
 What would'st thou have a good great man obtain?
 Place? titles? salary? a gilded chain?
 Or throne of corpses which his sword had slain? 10
 Greatness and goodness are not means, but ends!
 Hath he not always treasures, always friends,
 The good great man? three treasures, LOVE, and LIGHT,
 And CALM THOUGHTS, regular as infant's breath:
 And three firm friends, more sure than day and night, 15
 HIMSELF, his MAKER, and the ANGEL DEATH!

I have not once opened the lids of my eyes,
 But I lie in the dark, as a blind man lies.
 O Rain! that I lie listening to, 5
 You're but a doleful sound at best:
 I owe you little thanks, 'tis true,
 For breaking thus my needful rest!
 Yet if, as soon as it is light,
 O Rain! you will but take your flight, 10
 I'll neither rail, nor malice keep,
 Though sick and sore for want of sleep.
 But only now, for this one day,
 Do go, dear Rain! do go away!

II

O Rain! with your dull two-fold sound, 15
 The clash hard by, and the murmur all round!
 You know, if you know aught, that we,
 Both night and day, but ill agree:
 For days and months, and almost years,
 Have limped on through this vale of tears, 20
 Since body of mine, and rainy weather,
 Have lived on easy terms together.
 Yet if, as soon as it is light,
 O Rain! you will but take your flight,
 Though you should come again to-morrow, 25
 And bring with you both pain and sorrow;
 Though stomach should sicken and knees should swell—
 I'll nothing speak of you but well.
 But only now for this one day,
 Do go, dear Rain! do go away! 30

III

Dear Rain! I ne'er refused to say
 You're a good creature in your way;
 Nay, I could write a book myself,
 Would fit a parson's lower shelf,
 Showing how very good you are.— 35

in the British Museum, and it may be presumed that it was in that number the Ode to the Rain first appeared. It is possible that the 'Ode' was written on the morning after the unexpected arrival of Charles and Mary Lamb at Greta Hall in August, 1802.

What then? sometimes it must be fair
 And if sometimes, why not to-day?
 Do go, dear Rain! do go away!

IV

Dear Rain! if I've been cold and shy,
 Take no offence! I'll tell you why. 40
 A dear old Friend e'en now is here,
 And with him came my sister dear;
 After long absence now first met,
 Long months by pain and grief beset—
 We three dear friends! in truth, we groan 45
 Impatiently to be alone.
 We three, you mark! and not one more!
 The strong wish makes my spirit sore.
 We have so much to talk about,
 So many sad things to let out; 50
 So many tears in our eye-corners,
 Sitting like little Jacky Horners—
 In short, as soon as it is day,
 Do go, dear Rain! do go away.

V

And this I'll swear to you, dear Rain! 55
 Whenever you shall come again,
 Be you as dull as e'er you could
 (And by the bye 'tis understood,
 You're not so pleasant as you're good),
 Yet, knowing well your worth and place, 60
 I'll welcome you with cheerful face;
 And though you stayed a week or more,
 Were ten times duller than before;
 Yet with kind heart, and right good will,
 I'll sit and listen to you still; 65
 Nor should you go away, dear Rain!
 Uninvited to remain.
 But only now, for this one day,
 Do go, dear Rain! do go away.

A DAY-DREAM<sup>1</sup>

My eyes make pictures, when they are shut :
 I see a fountain, large and fair,
 A willow and a ruined hut,
 And thee, and me and Mary there.
 Mary! make thy gentle lap our pillow! 5
 Send o'er us, like a bower, my beautiful green willow!

 A wild-rose roofs the ruined shed,
 And that and summer well agree :
 And lo! where Mary leans her head,
 Two dear names carved upon the tree! 10
 And Mary's tears, they are not tears of sorrow :
 Our sister and our friend will both be here to-morrow.

 'Twas day! but now few, large, and bright,
 The stars are round the crescent moon!
 And now it is a dark warm night, 15
 The balmiest of the month of June!
 A glow-worm fall'n, and on the marge remounting shines, and its shadow shines, fit stars for our sweet fountain.

 O ever—ever be thou blest!
 For dearly, Asra! love I thee! 20
 This brooding warmth across my breast,
 This depth of tranquil bliss—ah, me!
 Mount, tree and shed are gone, I know not whither,
 But in one quiet room we three are still together.

 The shadows dance upon the wall, 25
 By the still dancing fire-flames made;
 And now they slumber, moveless all!
 And now they melt to one deep shade!
 But not from me shall this mild darkness steal thee:
 I dream thee with mine eyes, and at my heart I feel thee! 30

ANSWER TO A CHILD'S QUESTION<sup>1</sup>

Do you ask what the birds say? The Sparrow, the Dove,
 The Linnet and Thrush say, 'I love and I love!'
 In the winter they're silent—the wind is so strong;
 What it says, I don't know, but it sings a loud song.
 But green leaves, and blossoms, and sunny warm weather, 5
 And singing, and loving—all come back together.
 But the Lark is so brimful of gladness and love,
 The green fields below him, the blue sky above,
 That he sings, and he sings; and for ever sings he—
 'I love my Love, and my Love loves me!' 10

 From sunrise to star-rise, so gladsome are they. M. P.

After 10 'Tis no wonder that he's full of joy to the brim,
 When He loves his Love, and his Love loves him. M. P.

Line 10 is adapted from the refrain of Prior's Song ('One morning very early, one morning in the spring'):—'I love my love, because I know my love loves me.'

As ever made these eyes grow idly bright!

And though I weep, yet still around my heart
A sweet and playful tenderness doth linger,
Touching my heart as with an infant's finger. 5

My mouth half open, like a witless man,

I saw our couch, I saw our quiet room,
Its shadows heaving by the fire-light gloom;
And o'er my lips a subtle feeling ran, 10
All o'er my lips a soft and breeze-like feeling—
I know not what—but had the same been stealing

Upon a sleeping mother's lips, I guess

It would have made the loving mother dream
That she was softly bending down to kiss 15
Her babe, that something more than babe did seem,
A floating presence of its darling father,
And yet its own dear baby self far rather!

Across my chest there lay a weight, so warm!

As if some bird had taken shelter there; 20
And lo! I seemed to see a woman's form—
Thine, Sara, thine? O joy, if thine it were!
I gazed with stifled breath, and feared to stir it,
No deeper trance e'er wrapt a yearning spirit!

And now, when I seemed sure thy face to see, 25

Thy own dear self in our own quiet home;
There came an elfish laugh, and wakened me:
'Twas Frederic, who behind my chair had clomb,
And with his bright eyes at my face was peeping.
I blessed him, tried to laugh, and fell a-weeping! 30

     A pledge of more than passing life, 5
     Yea, in that very name of Wife!

A pulse of love, that ne'er can sleep!
     A feeling that upbraids the heart
     With happiness beyond desert,
 That gladness half requests to weep! 10
     Nor bless I not the keener sense
     And unalarming turbulence

Of transient joys, that ask no sting
     From jealous fears, or coy denying;
     But born beneath Love's brooding wing, 15
 And into tenderness soon dying,
     Wheel out their giddy moment, then
     Resign the soul to love again;—

A more precipitated vein
     Of notes, that eddy in the flow. 20
     Of smoothest song, they come, they go,
 And leave their sweeter understrain,
     Its own sweet self—a love of Thee
     That seems, yet cannot greater be!

THE PAINS OF SLEEP<sup>1</sup>

ERE on my bed my limbs I lay,
 It hath not been my use to pray
 With moving lips or bended knees;
 But silently, by slow degrees,
 My spirit I to Love compose, 5
 In humble trust mine eye-lids close,
 With reverential resignation,
 No wish conceived, no thought exprest,
 Only a sense of supplication;
 A sense o'er all my soul imprest 10
 That I am weak, yet not unblest,
 Since in me, round me, every where Eternal Strength and Wisdom are.

But yester-night I prayed aloud
 In anguish and in agony, 15
 Up-starting from the fiendish crowd
 Of shapes and thoughts that tortured me:
 A lurid light, a trampling throng,
 Sense of intolerable wrong,
 And whom I scorned, those only strong! 20

So two nights passed: the night's dismay
 Saddened and stunned the coming day.
 Sleep, the wide blessing, seemed to me
 Distemper's worst calamity.
 The third night, when my own loud scream
 Had waked me from the fiendish dream,
 O'ercome with sufferings strange and wild,
 I wept as I had been a child;
 And having thus by tears subdued
 My anguish to a milder mood,
 Such punishments, I said, were due
 To natures deepliest stained with sin,—
 For aye entempesting anew
 The unfathomable hell within,
 The horror of their deeds to view,
 To know and loathe, yet wish and do!

WE pledged our hearts, my love and I,—

 I could not guess the reason why,

I went, but shook like any reed!

I strove to act the man—in vain!

We had exchanged our hearts indeed.

transcription of a series of Dante's Canzoni begun at Malta in 1805. If the Hexameters were composed at the same time, it is possible that they were inspired by a perusal or re-perusal of a MS. copy of Wordsworth's unpublished poems which had been made for his use whilst he was abroad. As Mr. Campbell points out (P. W., p. 614), Wordsworth himself was responsible for the Latinization of his name. A Sonnet on seeing Miss Helen Maria Williams weeping at a tale of distress, which was published in the European Magazine for March, 1787, is signed 'Axiologus'.

A SUNSET<sup>2</sup>

Upon the mountain's edge with light touch resting,
 There a brief while the globe of splendour sits

<sup>1</sup> These lines, without title or heading, are quoted ('vide... my lines') in an entry in one of Coleridge's Malta Notebooks, dated Feb. 8, 1805, to illustrate the idea that the love-sense can be abstracted from the accidents of form or person (see Anima Poetae, 1895, p. 120). It follows that they were written before that date. Phantom was first published in 1834, immediately following (ii. 71) Phantom or Fact. A dialogue in Verse, which was first published in 1828, and was probably written about that time. Both poems are 'fragments from the life of dreams'; but it was the reality which lay behind both 'phantom' and 'fact' of which the poet dreamt, having his eyes open. With lines 4, 5 compare the following stanza of one of the MS. versions of the Dark Ladie:—

Against a grey stone rudely carv'd
 The statue of an armed knight,
 She lean'd in melancholy mood
 To watch ['d] the lingering Light.

A Sunset—1 with light touch] all lightly MS.

 More changeful than the Moon,
 To wane fantastic his great orb submits,
 Or cone or mow of fire: till sinking slowly
 Even to a star at length he lessens wholly.

Abrupt, as Spirits vanish, he is sunk!
 A soul-like breeze possesses all the wood.

 But every leaf through all the forest flutters,
 And deep the cavern of the fountain mutters.

THE BLOSSOMING OF THE SOLITARY DATE-TREE <sup>1</sup>

A LAMENT

I SEEM to have an indistinct recollection of having read either in one of the ponderous tomes of George of Venice, or in some other compilation from the uninspired Hebrew writers, an apologue or Rabbinical tradition to the following purpose :

While our first parents stood before their offended Maker, and the last 5 words of the sentence were yet sounding in Adam's ear, the guileful false serpent, a counterfeited and a usurper from the beginning, presumptuously took on himself the character of advocate or mediator, and pretending to intercede for Adam, exclaimed : ' Nay, Lord, in thy justice, not so ! for the man was the least in fault. Rather let the Woman return at once to 10 the dust, and let Adam remain in this thy Paradise.' And the word of the Most High answered Satan : 'The tender mercies of the wicked are cruel. Treacherous Fiend ! if with guilt like thine, it had been possible for thee to have the heart of a Man, and to feel the yearning of a human soul for its counterpart, the sentence, which thou now counsellest, should have 15 been inflicted on thyself.'

The title of the following poem was suggested by a fact mentioned by Linnaeus, of a date-tree in a nobleman's garden which year after year had put forth a full show of blossoms, but never produced fruit, till a branch from another date-tree had been conveyed from a distance of 20 some hundred leagues. The first leaf of the MS. from which the poem has been transcribed, and which contained the two or three introductory stanzas, is wanting : and the author has in vain taxed his memory to repair the loss. But a rude draught of the poem contains the substance of the stanzas, and the reader is requested to receive it as the substitute. 25 It is not impossible, that some congenial spirit, whose years do not exceed those of the Author at the time the poem was written, may find a pleasure in restoring the Lament to its original integrity by a reduction of the thoughts to the requisite metre. S. T. G.

BENEATH the blaze of a tropical sun the mountain peaks are 30 the Thrones of Frost, through the absence of objects to reflect the rays. 'What no one with us shares, seems scarce our own.'
The presence of a one,

The best belov'd, who loveth me the best,

is for the heart, what the supporting air from within is for the 35 hollow globe with its suspended car. Deprive it of this, and all without, that would have buoyed it aloft even to the seat of the gods, becomes a burthen and crushes it into flatness.

2

The finer the sense for the beautiful and the lovely, and the fairer and lovelier the object presented to the sense; the more 40 exquisite the individual's capacity of joy, and the more ample his means and opportunities of enjoyment, the more heavily will he feel the ache of solitariness, the more unsubstantial becomes the feast spread around him. What matters it, whether in fact the viands and the ministering graces are 45 shadowy or real, to him who has not hand to grasp nor arms to embrace them?

Imagination; honourable aims;
Free commune with the choir that cannot die;
Science and song; delight in little things, 50
The buoyant child surviving in the man;
Fields, forests, ancient mountains, ocean, sky,
With all their voices—O dare I accuse
My earthly lot as guilty of my spleen,
Or call my destiny niggard! O no! no! 55
It is her largeness, and her overflow,
Which being incomplete, disquieteth me so!

4

For never touch of gladness stirs my heart,
But tim'rously beginning to rejoice
Like a blind Arab, that from sleep doth start 60
In lonesome tent, I listen for thy voice.

 Then melts the bubble into idle air,
 And wishing without hope I restlessly despair.

The mother with anticipated glee 65
 Smiles o'er the child, that, standing by her chair
 And flatt'ning its round cheek upon her knee,
 Looks up, and doth its rosy lips prepare
 To mock the coming sounds. At that sweet sight
 She hears her own voice with a new delight; 70
 And if the babe perchance should lisp the notes aright,

6

Then is she tenfold gladder than before!
 But should disease or chance the darling take,
 What then avail those songs, which sweet of yore
 Were only sweet for their sweet echo's sake? 75
 Dear maid! no prattler at a mother's knee
 Was e'er so dearly prized as I prize thee:
 Why was I made for Love and Love denied to me?

SEPARATION<sup>1</sup>

A SWORDED man whose trade is blood,
 In grief, in anger, and in fear,
 Thro' jungle, swamp, and torrent flood,
 I seek the wealth you hold so dear!

'The fourth and last stanzas are adapted from the twelfth and last of Cotton's Chlorinda [Ode]:—

'O my Chlorinda! could'st thou see
 Into the bottom of my heart,
 There's such a Mine of Love for thee,
 The Treasure would supply desert.

Meanwhile my Exit now draws nigh,
 When, sweet Chlorinda, thou shalt see
 That I have heart enough to die,
 Not half enough to part with thee.

'The fifth stanza is the eleventh of Cotton's poem.'

In 1852 (p. 385) the note reads: 'The fourth and last stanzas are from Cotton's Chlorinda, with very slight alteration.'

The dazzling charm of outward form, 5
 The power of gold, the pride of birth,
 Have taken Woman's heart by storm—
 Usurp'd the place of inward worth.

Is not true Love of higher price
 Than outward Form, though fair to see, 10
 Wealth's glittering fairy-dome of ice,
 Or echo of proud ancestry?—

O! Asra, Asra! couldst thou see
 Into the bottom of my heart,
 There's such a mine of Love for thee, 15
 As almost might supply desert!

(This separation is, alas!
 Too great a punishment to bear;

 That life, that happy life, with her!) 20

<sup>1</sup> Now first printed from one of Coleridge's Notebooks. The last stanza—the Epilogue—was first published by H. N. Coleridge as part of an 'Uncomposed Poem', in Literary Remains, 1836, i. 52: first collected in Appendix to P. and D. W., 1877-80, ii. 366. There is no conclusive evidence as to the date of composition. The handwriting, and the contents of the Notebook might suggest a date between 1813 and 1816. The verses are almost immediately preceded by a detached note printed at the close of an essay entitled 'Self-love in Religion' which is included among the 'Omniana of 1809', Literary Remains, 1834, i. 354-6: 'O magical, sympathetic, anima! [Archeus, MS.] principium hylarchichum! rationes spermatice! λόγοι ποιητικοί! O formidable words! And O Man! thou marvellous beast-angel! thou ambitious beggar! How pompously dost thou trick out thy very ignorance with such glorious disguises, that thou mayest seem to hide in order to worship it.'

With this piece as a whole compare Southey's 'Ballad of a Young Man that would read unlawful Books, and how he was punished'.

 And O! preserve my brothers both
 From evil doings and from sloth, 10
 And may we always love each other
 Our friends, our father, and our mother:
 And still, O Lord, to me impart
 An innocent and grateful heart,
 That after my great sleep I may 15
 Awake to thy eternal day! Amen.

<sup>2</sup> First published in 1834. The metrical lesson was begun for Hartley Coleridge in 1806 and, afterwards, finished or adapted for the use of his brother Derwent. The Editor possesses the autograph of a metrical rendering of the Greek alphabet, entitled 'A Greek Song set to Music, and sung by Hartley Coleridge, Esq., Graecologian, philometrist and philomelist'.

 And delight in the things of earth, water, and skies;
 Tender warmth at his heart, with these metres to show it,
 With sound sense in his brains, may make Derwent a poet,—
 May crown him with fame, and must win him the love 15
 Of his father on earth and his Father above.

My dear, dear child!

Could you stand upon Skiddaw, you would not from its whole ridge

See a man who so loves you as your fond S. T. COLERIDGE.

FAREWELL TO LOVE<sup>1</sup>

FAREWELL, sweet Love! yet blame you not my truth;
 More fondly ne'er did mother eye her child
 Than I your form: yours were my hopes of youth,
 And as you shaped my thoughts I sighed or smiled.

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Courier, September 27, 1806, and reprinted in the Morning Herald, October 11, 1806, and in the Gentleman's Magazine for November, 1815, vol. lxxxv, p. 448: included in Literary Remains, 1836, i. 280, and in Letters, Conversations, &c., [by T. Allsop], 1836, i. 143. First collected, appendix, 1863. This sonnet is modelled upon and in part borrowed from Lord Brooke's (Fulke Greville) Sonnet LXXIV of Coelica: and was inscribed on the margin of Charles Lamb's copy of Certain Learned and Elegant Works of the Right Honourable Fulke Lord Brooke . . . 1633, p. 284.

'Coelica'. Sonnet lxxiv.

FAREWELL sweet Boy, complaine not of my truth;
 Thy Mother lov'd thee not with more devotion;
 For to thy Boyes play I gave all my youth
 Yong Master, I did hope for your promotion.

While some sought Honours, Princes thoughts observing,
 Many woo'd Fame, the child of paine and anguish,
 Others judg'd inward good a chiefe deserving,
 I in thy wanton Visions joy'd to languish.

1-2 Farewell my Love! yet blame ye not my Truth;
 More fondly never mother ey'd her child MS. 1806.

Sweet power of Love, farewell! nor blame my truth,
 More fondly never Mother ey'd her Child Courier, M. II.

4 And as you wove the dream I sigh'd or smil'd MS. 1806: And as you wove my thoughts, I sigh'd or smil'd Courier, M. II.

While most were wooing wealth, or gaily swerving 5
 To pleasure's secret haunts, and some apart
 Stood strong in pride, self-conscious of deserving,
 To you I gave my whole weak wishing heart.

And when I met the maid that realised
 Your fair creations, and had won her kindness, 10
 Say, but for her if aught on earth I prized!
 Your dreams alone I dreamt, and caught your blindness.

O grief!—but farewell, Love! I will go play me
 With thoughts that please me less, and less betray me.

TO WILLIAM WORDSWORTH<sup>1</sup>

COMPOSED ON THE NIGHT AFTER HIS RECITATION OF A POEM ON THE GROWTH OF AN INDIVIDUAL MIND

FRIEND of the wise! and Teacher of the Good!
 Into my heart have I received that Lay

I bow'd not to thy image for succession,
 Nor bound thy bow to shoot reformed kindnesse,
 The playes of hope and feare were my confession
 The spectacles to my life was thy blindnesse:

But Cupid now farewell, I will goe play me,
 With thoughts that please me lesse, and lesse betray me.

<sup>1</sup> First published in Sibylline Leaves, 1817: included in 1823, 1829, 1834. The poem was sent in a Letter to Sir G. Beaumont dated January, 1807, and in this shape was first printed by Professor Knight in Coleorton Letters,

1 O Friend! O Teacher! God's great gift to me! MSS. W., B.

More than historic, that prophetic Lay
 Wherein (high theme by thee first sung aright)
 Of the foundations and the building up 5
 Of a Human Spirit thou hast dared to tell
 What may be told, to the understanding mind
 Revealable; and what within the mind
 By vital breathings secret as the soul
 Of vernal growth, oft quickens in the heart 10
 Thoughts all too deep for words!—

Theme hard as high!
 Of smiles spontaneous, and mysterious fears
 (The first-born they of Reason and twin-birth),
 Of tides obedient to external force,
 And currents self-determined, as might seem, 15
 Or by some inner Power; of moments awful,
 Now in thy inner life, and now abroad,

1887, i. 213-18; and as Appendix H, pp. 525-6, of P. W., 1893 (MS. B.). An earlier version of about the same date was given to Wordsworth, and is now in the possession of his grandson, Mr. Gordon Wordsworth (MS. W.). The text of Sibylline Leaves differs widely from that of the original MSS. Lines 11-47 are quoted in a Letter to Wordsworth, dated May 30, 1815 (Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 646-7), and lines 65-75 at the end of Chapter X of the Biographia Literaria, 1817, i. 220.

61 foll.

Dear shall it be to every human heart,
 To me how more than dearest! me, on whom
 Comfort from thee, and utterance of thy love,
 Came with such heights and depths of harmony,
 Such sense of wings uplifting, that the storm 5
 Scatter'd and whirl'd me, till my thoughts became
 A bodily tumult; and thy faithful hopes,
 Thy hopes of me, dear Friend! by me unfelt!
 Were troublous to me, almost as a voice,
 Familiar once, and more than musical; 10
 To one cast forth, whose hope had seem'd to die
 A wanderer with a worn-out heart

The pulses of my being beat anew :

And even as Life returns upon the drowned,
Life's joy rekindling roused a throng of pains—
Keen pangs of Love, awakening as a babe

65

Turbulent, with an outcry in the heart ;

And fears self-willed, that shunned the eye of Hope ;

And Hope that scarce would know itself from Fear ;

Sense of past Youth, and Manhood come in vain,

And Genius given, and Knowledge won in vain ;

70

And all which I had culled in wood-walks wild,

And all which patient toil had reared, and all,

Commune with thee had opened out—but flowers

Strewed on my corse, and borne upon my bier

In the same coffin, for the self-same grave !

75

That way no more ! and ill beseems it me,

Who came a welcomer in herald's guise,

Singing of Glory, and Futurity,

To wander back on such unhealthful road,

Plucking the poisons of self-harm ! And ill

80

Such intertwine beseems triumphal wreaths

Strew'd before thy advancing !

Nor do thou,

Sage Bard ! impair the memory of that hour

Of thy communion with my nobler mind

By pity or grief, already felt too long !

85

Nor let my words import more blame than needs.

The tumult rose and ceased : for Peace is nigh

Mid strangers pining with untended wounds.

O Friend, too well thou know'st, of what sad years

The long suppression had benumb'd my soul,

15

That even as life returns upon the drown'd,

The unusual joy awoke a throng of pains—

Keen pangs, &c. MSS. B, W with the following variants :

11. 5-6 Such sense of wings uplifting, that its might

Scatter'd and quell'd me—MS. B.

Where Wisdom's voice has found a listening heart.
 Amid the howl of more than wintry storms,
 The Halcyon hears the voice of vernal hours
 Already on the wing.

90

Eve following eve,
 Dear tranquil time, when the sweet sense of Home
 Is sweetest! moments for their own sake hailed
 And more desired, more precious, for thy song,
 In silence listening, like a devout child,
 My soul lay passive, by thy various strain
 Driven as in surges now beneath the stars,
 With momentary stars of my own birth,
 Fair constellated foam,<sup>1</sup> still darting off
 Into the darkness; now a tranquil sea,
 Outspread and bright, yet swelling to the moon.

95

100

And when—O Friend! my comforter and guide!
 Strong in thyself, and powerful to give strength!—
 Thy long sustained Song finally closed,
 And thy deep voice had ceased—yet thou thyself
 Wert still before my eyes, and round us both
 That happy vision of beloved faces—
 Scarce conscious, and yet conscious of its close
 I sate, my being blended in one thought
 (Thought was it? or aspiration? or resolve?)
 Absorbed, yet hanging still upon the sound—
 And when I rose, I found myself in prayer.

RECOLLECTIONS OF LOVE<sup>2</sup>

I

How warm this woodland wild Recess!
 Love surely hath been breathing here;
 And this sweet bed of heath, my dear!
 Swells up, then sinks with faint caress,
 As if to have you yet more near. 5

II

Eight springs have flown, since last I lay
 On sea-ward Quantock's heathy hills,
 Where quiet sounds from hidden rills
 Float here and there, like things astray,
 And high o'er head the sky-lark shrills. 10

<sup>1</sup> First published in Literary Remains, 1836, i. 280. First collected in P. and D. W., 1877-80. The title was prefixed to the Poems of Coleridge (illustrated edition), 1907. This 'exquisite fragment . . . was probably composed as the opening of Recollections of Love, and abandoned on account of a change of metre.'—Editor's Note, 1893 (p. 635). It is in no way a translation, but the thought or idea was suggested by one of the German stanzas which Coleridge selected and copied into one of his Notebooks as models or specimens of various metres.

<sup>2</sup> First published in Sibylline Leaves, 1817: included in 1828, 1829, and 1834. It is impossible to fix the date of composition, though internal evidence points to July, 1807, when Coleridge revisited Stowey after a long absence. The first stanza, a variant of the preceding fragment, is introduced into a prose fancy, entitled 'Questions and Answers in the Court of Love', of uncertain date, but perhaps written at Malta in 1805. A first draft of stanzas 1-4 (vide supra) is included in the collection of metrical experiments and metrical schemes, modelled on German and Italian originals, which seems to have been begun in 1801, with a view to a projected 'Essay on Metre'. Stanzas 5, 6 are not contemporary with stanzas 1-4, and, perhaps, date from 1814, 1815, when Sibylline Leaves were being prepared for the press.

III

No voice as yet had made the air
 Be music with your name; yet why
 That asking look? that yearning sigh?
 That sense of promise every where?
 Belovéd! flew your spirit by? 15

IV

As when a mother doth explore
 The rose-mark on her long-lost child,
 I met, I loved you, maiden mild!
 As whom I long had loved before—
 So deeply had I been beguiled. 20

V

You stood before me like a thought,
 A dream remembered in a dream.
 But when those meek eyes first did seem
 To tell me, Love within you wrought—
 O Greta, dear domestic stream! 25

VI

Has not, since then, Love's prompture deep,
 Has not Love's whisper evermore
 Been ceaseless, as thy gentle roar?
 Sole voice, when other voices sleep,
 Dear under-song in clamor's hour. 30

TO TWO SISTERS<sup>1</sup>

[MARY MORGAN AND CHARLOTTE BRENT]

A WANDERER'S FAREWELL

To know, to esteem, to love,—and then to part—
 Makes up life's tale to many a feeling heart;
 Alas for some abiding-place of love,
 O'er which my spirit, like the mother dove,
 Might brood with warming wings!

O fair! O kind! 5

<sup>1</sup> First published in The Courier, December 10, 1807, with the signature SIESTI. First collected in P. and D. W., 1877-80. The following

Sisters in blood, yet each with each intertwined
 More close by sisterhood of heart and mind!
 Me disinherited in form and face
 By nature, and mishap of outward grace;
 Who, soul and body, through one guiltless fault 10
 Waste daily with the poison of sad thought,
 Me did you soothe, when solace hoped I none!
 And as on unthaw'd ice the winter sun,
 Though stern the frost, though brief the genial day,
 You bless my heart with many a cheerful ray; 15
 For gratitude suspends the heart's despair,
 Reflecting bright though cold your image there.
 Nay more! its music by some sweeter strain
 Makes us live o'er our happiest hours again,
 Hope re-appearing dim in memory's guise— 20
 Even thus did you call up before mine eyes
 Two dear, dear Sisters, prized all price above,
 Sisters, like you, with more than sisters' love;
 So like you they, and so in you were seen
 Their relative statures, tempers, looks, and mien,
 That oft, dear ladies! you have been to me
 At once a vision and reality.
 Sight seem'd a sort of memory, and amaze
 Mingled a trouble with affection's gaze.

Oft to my eager soul I whisper blame, 30
 A Stranger bid it feel the Stranger's shame—
 My eager soul, impatient of the name,
 No strangeness owns, no Stranger's form describes:
 The chidden heart spreads trembling on the eyes.

abbreviated and altered version was included in P. W., 1834, 1844, and 1852, with the heading 'On taking Leave of — 1817' :—

To know, to esteem, to love—and then to part,
 Makes up life's tale to many a feeling heart!
 O for some dear abiding-place of Love,
 O'er which my spirit, like the mother dove
 Might brood with warming wings!—O fair as kind,
 Were but one sisterhood with you combined,
 (Your very image they in shape and mind)
 Far rather would I sit in solitude,
 The forms of memory all my mental food,
 And dream of you, sweet sisters, (ah, not mine!)
 And only dream of you (ah dream and pine!)
 Than have the presence, and partake the pride,
 And shine in the eye of all the world beside!

First-seen I gazed, as I would look you thro'! 35
 My best-beloved regain'd their youth in you,—
 And still I ask, though now familiar grown,
 Are you for their sakes dear, or for your own?
 O doubly dear! may Quiet with you dwell!

In Grief I love you, yet I love you well! 40
 Hope long is dead to me! an orphan's tear
 Love wept despairing o'er his nurse's bier.
 Yet still she flutters o'er her grave's green slope:
 For Love's despair is but the ghost of Hope!

Sweet Sisters! were you placed around one hearth 45
 With those, your other selves in shape and worth,
 Far rather would I sit in solitude,
 Fond recollections all my fond heart's food,
 And dream of you, sweet Sisters! (ah! not mine!)
 And only dream of you (ah! dream and pine!) 50
 Than boast the presence and partake the pride,
 And shine in the eye, of all the world beside.

PSYCHE <sup>1</sup>

THE butterfly the ancient Grecians made
 The soul's fair emblem, and its only name—<sup>2</sup>
 But of the soul, escaped the slavish trade
 Of mortal life!—For in this earthly frame
 Ours is the reptile's lot, much toil, much blame, 5
 Manifold motions making little speed,
 And to deform and kill the things whereon we feed.

1808.

<sup>1</sup> First published with a prefatory note:—'The fact that in Greek Psyche is the common name for the soul, and the butterfly, is thus alluded to in the following stanzas from an unpublished poem of the Author', in the Biographia Literaria, 1817, i. 82, n.: included (as No. II of 'Three Scraps') in Amulet, 1833: Lit. Rem., 1836, i. 53. First collected in 1844. In Lit. Rem. and 1844 the poem is dated 1808.

In some instances the Symbolic and Onomastic are united as in Psyche = Anima et papilio. MS. S. T. C. (Hence the word 'name' was italicised in the MS.)

'Tis true, Idoloclastes Satyrane!
 (So call him, for so mingling blame with praise,
 And smiles with anxious looks, his earliest friends,
 Masking his birth-name, wont to character
 His wild-wood fancy and impetuous zeal,) 5
 'Tis true that, passionate for ancient truths,
 And honouring with religious love the Great
 Of elder times, he hated to excess,
 With an unquiet and intolerant scorn,
 The hollow Puppets of a hollow Age, 10
 Ever idolatrous, and changing ever
 Its worthless Idols! Learning, Power, and Time,
 (Too much of all) thus wasting in vain war
 Of fervid colloquy. Sickness, 'tis true,
 Whole years of weary days, besieged him close, 15
 Even to the gates and inlets of his life!
 But it is true, no less, that strenuous, firm,
 And with a natural gladness, he maintained
 The citadel unconquered, and in joy
 Was strong to follow the delightful Muse. 20
 For not a hidden path, that to the shades
 Of the beloved Parnassian forest leads,
 Lurked undiscovered by him; not a rill
 There issues from the fount of Hippocrene,
 But he had traced it upward to its source, 25
 Through open glade, dark glen, and secret dell,
 Knew the gay wild flowers on its banks, and culled
 Its med'cinable herbs. Yea, oft alone,
 Piercing the long-neglected holy cave,

<sup>1</sup> First published in The Friend, No. XIV, November 23, 1809. There is no title or heading to the poem, which occupies the first page of the number, but a footnote is appended:—'Imitated, though in the movements rather than the thoughts, from the viith, of Gli Epitafi of Chiabrera:

Fu ver, che Ambrosio Salinero a torto
 Si pose in pena d'odiose liti,' &c.

Included in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, 1828, 1829, 1834. Sir Satyrane, 'A Satyres son yborne in forrest wylde' (Spenser's Faery Qucene, Bk. I, C. vi, l. 21) rescues Una from the violence of Sarazin. Coleridge may have regarded Satyrane as the anonymn of Luther. Idoloclast, as he explains in the preface to 'Satyrane's Letters', is a 'breaker of idols'.

The haunt obscure of old Philosophy,
 He bade with lifted torch its starry walls
 Sparkle, as erst they sparkled to the flame
 Of odorous lamps tended by Saint and Sage.
 O framed for calmer times and nobler hearts!
 O studious Poet, eloquent for truth!
 Philosopher! contemning wealth and death,
 Yet docile, childlike, full of Life and Love!
 Here, rather than on monumental stone,
 This record of thy worth thy Friend inscribes,
 Thoughtful, with quiet tears upon his cheek.

(IMPROMPTU)

WHAT now, O Man! thou dost or mean'st to do
 Will help to give thee peace, or make thee rue,
 When hovering o'er the Dot this hand shall tell
 The moment that secures thee Heaven or Hell!

THE MADMAN AND THE LETHARGIST<sup>2</sup>

AN EXAMPLE

QUOTH Dick to me, as once at College
 We argued on the use of knowledge;—

<sup>1</sup> Sent in a letter to T. Poole, October 9, 1809, and transferred to one of Coleridge's Notebooks with the heading 'Inscription proposed on a Clock in a market place': included in 'Omnia' of 1809-16 (Literary Remains, 1836, i. 347) with the erroneous title 'Inscription on a Clock in Cheapside'. First collected in 1893.

What now thou do'st, or art about to do,
 Will help to give thee peace, or make thee rue;
 When hov'ring o'er the line this hand will tell
 The last dread moment—'twill be heaven or hell.

Read for the last two lines:—

When wav'ring o'er the dot this hand shall tell
 The moment that secures thee Heaven or Hell.

MS. Lit. Rem.

<sup>2</sup> Now published for the first time from one of Coleridge's Notebooks. The use of the party catchword 'Citizen' and the allusion to 'Folks in France' would suggest 1796-7 as a probable date, but the point

'In old King Olim's reign, I've read,
 There lay two patients in one bed.
 The one in fat lethargic trance, 5
 Lay wan and motionless as lead :
 The other, (like the Folks in France),
 Possess'd a different disposition—
 In short, the plain truth to confess,
 The man was madder than Mad Bess ! 10
 But both diseases, none disputed,
 Were unmedicinably rooted ;
 Yet, so it chanc'd, by Heaven's permission,
 Each prov'd the other's true physician.

'Fighting with a ghostly stare 15
 Troops of Despots in the air,
 Obstreperously Jacobinical,
 The madman froth'd, and foam'd, and roar'd :
 The other, snoring octaves cynical,
 Like good John Bull, in posture clinical, 20
 Seem'd living only when he snor'd.
 The Citizen enraged to see
 This fat Insensibility,
 Or, tir'd with solitary labour,
 Determin'd to convert his neighbour ; 25
 So up he sprang and to't he fell,
 Like devil piping hot from hell,
 With indefatigable fist
 Belabr'ing the poor Lethargist ;
 Till his own limbs were stiff and sore, 30
 And sweat-drops roll'd from every pore :—
 Yet, still, with flying fingers fleet,
 Duly accompanied by feet,
 With some short intervals of biting,
 He executes the self-same strain, 35
 Till the Slumberer woke for pain,
 And half-prepared himself for fighting—
 That moment that his mad Colleague
 Sunk down and slept thro' pure fatigue.

or interpretation of the 'Example' was certainly in Coleridge's mind when he put together the first number of The Friend, published June 1, 1809 :—'Though all men are in error, they are not all in the same error, nor at the same time . . . each therefore may possibly heal the other . . . even as two or more physicians, all diseased in their general health, yet under the immediate action of the disease on different days, may remove or alleviate the complaints of each other.'

So both were cur'd—and this example 40
 Gives demonstration full and ample—
 That Chance may bring a thing to bear,
 Where Art sits down in blank despair.'

'That's true enough, Dick,' answer'd I,
 'But as for the Example, 'tis a lie.' 45

THE VISIONARY HOPE<sup>1</sup>

SAD lot, to have no Hope! Though lowly kneeling
 He fain would frame a prayer within his breast,
 Would fain entreat for some sweet breath of healing,
 That his sick body might have ease and rest;
 He strove in vain! the dull sighs from his chest 5
 Against his will the stifling load revealing,
 Though Nature forced; though like some captive guest,
 Some royal prisoner at his conqueror's feast,
 An alien's restless mood but half concealing,
 The sternness on his gentle brow confessed, 10
 Sickness within and miserable feeling:
 Though obscure pangs made curses of his dreams,
 And dreaded sleep, each night repelled in vain,
 Each night was scattered by its own loud screams:
 Yet never could his heart command, though fain, 15
 One deep full wish to be no more in pain.

That Hope, which was his inward bliss and boast,
 Which waned and died, yet ever near him stood,
 Though changed in nature, wander where he would—
 For Love's Despair is but Hope's pining Ghost! 20
 For this one hope he makes his hourly moan,
 He wishes and can wish for this alone!
 Pierced, as with light from Heaven, before its gleams
 (So the love-stricken visionary deems)
 Disease would vanish, like a summer shower, 25
 Whose dews fling sunshine from the noon-tide bower!
 Or let it stay! yet this one Hope should give Such strength that he would bless his pains and live.

Why Love must needs be blind,

But that within is good and fair
He seeth with the heart.

THE SUICIDE'S ARGUMENT<sup>1</sup>

ERE the birth of my life, if I wished it or no,
 No question was asked me—it could not be so!
 If the life was the question, a thing sent to try,
 And to live on be Yes; what can No be? to die.

NATURE'S ANSWER

Is't returned, as 'twas sent? Is't no worse for the wear? 5
 Think first, what you are! Call to mind what you were!
 I gave you innocence, I gave you hope,
 Gave health, and genius, and an ample scope.
 Return you me guilt, lethargy, despair?
 Make out the invent'ry; inspect, compare! 10
 Then die—if die you dare!

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1828: included in 1829 and 1834. In a Notebook of (?) 1811 these lines are preceded by the following couplet:—

Complained of, complaining, there shov'd and here shoving,
 Every one blaming me, ne'er a one loving.

<sup>2</sup> First published in Sibylline Leaves, 1817, in the preliminary matter, p. v: included in 1828, 1829, and 1834. In the 'Preface' to Sibylline Leaves, p. iii, an apology is offered for its insertion on the plea that it was a 'school boy poem' added 'at the request of the friends of my youth'. The title is explained as follows:—'By imaginary Time, I meant the state of a school boy's mind when on his return to school he projects his being in his day dreams, and lives in his next holidays, six months hence; and this I contrasted with real Time.' In a Notebook of (?) 1811 there is an attempt to analyse and illustrate the 'sense of Time', which appears to have been written before the lines as published in Sibylline Leaves took shape: 'How marked the contrast between troubled manhood and joyously-active youth in the sense of time! To the former, time like the sun in an empty sky is never seen to move, but only to have moved. There, there it was, and now 'tis here, now distant! yet all a blank between.

AN INVOCATION<sup>1</sup>

FROM REMORSE

[Act III, Scene i. ll. 69-82.]

HEAR, sweet Spirit, hear the spell,
Lest a blacker charm compel!
So shall the midnight breezes swell
With thy deep long-lingering knell.

And at evening evermore, 5
In a chapel on the shore,
Shall the chaunter, sad and saintly,
Yellow tapers burning faintly,
Doleful masses chaunt for thee,
Miserere Domine! 10

Hush! the cadence dies away
On the quiet moonlight sea:
The boatmen rest their oars and say,
Miserere Domine!

1812.

To the latter it is as the full moon in a fine breezy October night, driving on amid clouds of all shapes and hues, and kindling shifting colours, like an ostrich in its speed, and yet seems not to have moved at all. This I feel to be a just image of time real and time as felt, in two different states of being. The title of the poem therefore (for poem it ought to be) should be time real and time felt (in the sense of time) in active youth, or activity with hope and fullness of aim in any period, and in despondent, objectless manhood—time objective and subjective.' Anima Poetae, 1895, pp. 241-2.

THE NIGHT-SCENE<sup>1</sup>

A DRAMATIC FRAGMENT

Sandoval. You loved the daughter of Don Manrique?

Earl Henry. Loved?

Sand. Did you not say you wooed her?

Earl H. Once I loved

Her whom I dared not woo!

Sand. And wooed, perchance,

One whom you loved not!

Earl H. Oh! I were most base,

Not loving Oropeza. True, I wooed her, 5

Hoping to heal a deeper wound; but she

Met my advances with impassioned pride,

That kindled love with love. And when her sire,

Who in his dream of hope already grasped

The golden circlet in his hand, rejected 10

My suit with insult, and in memory

Of ancient feuds poured curses on my head,

Her blessings overtook and baffled them!

But thou art stern, and with unkindly countenance

Art inly reasoning whilst thou listenest to me. 15

Sand. Anxiously, Henry! reasoning anxiously.

But Oropeza—

Earl H. Blessings gather round her!

Within this wood there winds a secret passage,

Beneath the walls, which opens out at length

Into the gloomiest covert of the garden.— 20

The night ere my departure to the army,

She, nothing trembling, led me through that gloom,

And to that covert by a silent stream,

Which, with one star reflected near its marge,

Was the sole object visible around me. 25

No leaflet stirred; the air was almost sultry;

So deep, so dark, so close, the umbrage o'er us!

<sup>1</sup> First published in its present state in Sibylline Leaves, 1817: included in 1828, 1829, and 1834. For an earlier draft, forming part of an 'Historic Drama in Five Acts' (unfinished) entitled The Triumph of Loyalty, 1801, vide Appendices of this edition. No leaflet stirred ;—yet pleasure hung upon
 The gloom and stillness of the balmy night-air.
 A little further on an arbour stood,
 Fragrant with flowering trees—I well remember
 What an uncertain glimmer in the darkness
 Their snow-white blossoms made—thither she led me,
 To that sweet bower! Then Oropeza trembled—
 I heard her heart beat—if 'twere not my own.

30

Sand. A rude and scaring note, my friend!

35

Earl H.

Oh! no!

I have small memory of aught but pleasure.
 The inquietudes of fear, like lesser streams
 Still flowing, still were lost in those of love:
 So love grew mightier from the fear, and Nature,
 Fleeing from Pain, sheltered herself in Joy.
 The stars above our heads were dim and steady,
 Like eyes suffused with rapture. Life was in us:
 We were all life, each atom of our frames
 A living soul—I vowed to die for her:
 With the faint voice of one who, having spoken,
 Relapses into blessedness, I vowed it:
 That solemn vow, a whisper scarcely heard,
 A murmur breathed against a lady's ear.
 Oh! there is joy above the name of pleasure,
 Deep self-possession, an intense repose.

40

45

50

Sand. (with a sarcastic smile). No other than as eastern sages paint,
 The God, who floats upon a Lotos leaf,
 Dreams for a thousand ages; then awaking,
 Creates a world, and smiling at the bubble,
 Relapses into bliss.

55

Earl H.

Ah! was that bliss

Feared as an alien, and too vast for man?
 For suddenly, impatient of its silence,
 Did Oropeza, starting, grasp my forehead.
 I caught her arms; the veins were swelling on them.
 Through the dark bower she sent a hollow voice;—
 'Oh! what if all betray me? what if thou?'
 I swore, and with an inward thought that seemed
 The purpose and the substance of my being,
 I swore to her, that were she red with guilt,
 I would exchange my unblenched state with hers.—
 Friend! by that winding passage, to that bower
 I now will go—all objects there will teach me

60

65

Unwavering love, and singleness of heart.
 Go, Sandoval! I am prepared to meet her— 70
 Say nothing of me—I myself will seek her—
 Nay, leave me, friend! I cannot bear the torment
 And keen inquiry of that scanning eye.—

[Earl Henry retires into the wood.

Sand. (alone). O Henry! always striv'st thou to be great
 By thine own act—yet art thou never great 75
 But by the inspiration of great passion.
 The whirl-blast comes, the desert-sands rise up
 And shape themselves; from Earth to Heaven they stand,
 As though they were the pillars of a temple,
 Built by Omnipotence in its own honour! 80
 But the blast pauses, and their shaping spirit
 Is fled: the mighty columns were but sand,
 And lazy snakes trail o'er the level ruins!

A HYMN<sup>1</sup>

MY Maker! of thy power the trace
 In every creature's form and face
 The wond'ring soul surveys:
 Thy wisdom, infinite above
 Seraphic thought, a Father's love 5
 As infinite displays!

From all that meets or eye or ear,
 There falls a genial holy fear
 Which, like the heavy dew of morn,
 Refreshes while it bows the heart forlorn! 10

Great God! thy works how wondrous fair!
 Yet sinful man didst thou declare
 The whole Earth's voice and mind!

<sup>1</sup> First published in Poems, 1852. The MS. was placed in the hands of the Editors by J. W. Wilkins, Esq., of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. 'The accompanying autograph,' writes Mr. Wilkins, 'dated 1814, and addressed to Mrs. Hood of Brunswick Square, was given not later than the year 1817 to a relative of my own who was then residing at Clifton (and was, at the time at which it passed into his hands, an attendant on Mr. Coleridge's lectures, which were in course of delivery at that place), either by the lady to whom it is addressed, or by some other friend of Mr. Coleridge.' 1852, Notes, p. 385.

Lord, ev'n as Thou all-present art,
 O may we still with heedful heart 15

TO A LADY<sup>1</sup>WITH FALCONER'S SHIPWRECK

Ah! not by Cam or Isis, famous streams,
 In archéd groves, the youthful poet's choice;
 Nor while half-listening, 'mid delicious dreams,
 To harp and song from lady's hand and voice;
 Not yet while gazing in sublimer mood 5
 On cliff, or cataract, in Alpine dell;
 Nor in dim cave with bladdery sea-weed strewed,
 Framing wild fancies to the ocean's swell;
 Our sea-bard sang this song! which still he sings,
 And sings for thee, sweet friend! Hark, Pity, hark!
 Now mounts, now totters on the tempest's wings, 11
 Now groans, and shivers, the replunging bark!
 'Cling to the shrouds!' In vain! The breakers roar—
 Death shrieks! With two alone of all his clan
 Forlorn the poet paced the Grecian shore, 15

ON THE DENIAL OF IMMORTALITY

IF dead, we cease to be; if total gloom
 Swallow up life's brief flash for aye, we fare
 As summer-gusts, of sudden birth and doom,
 Whose sound and motion not alone declare,
 But are their whole of being! If the breath <sup>2</sup> 5
 Be Life itself, and not its task and tent,
 If even a soul like Milton's can know death;
 O Man! thou vessel purposeless, unmeant,
 Yet drone-hive strange of phantom purposes!
 Surplus of Nature's dread activity, 10
 Which, as she gazed on some nigh-finished vase,
 Retreating slow, with meditative pause,
 She formed with restless hands unconsciously.

SONG<sup>1</sup>

FROM ZAPOLYA

A SUNNY shaft did I behold,
 From sky to earth it slanted:
 And poised therein a bird so bold—
 Sweet bird, thou wert enchanted!

He sank, he rose, he twinkled, he trolled 5
 Within that shaft of sunny mist;
 His eyes of fire, his beak of gold,
 All else of amethyst!

And thus he sang: 'Adieu! adieu!
 Love's dreams prove seldom true. 10

HUNTING SONG<sup>1</sup>

FROM ZAPOLYA

UP, up! ye dames, and lasses gay!
 To the meadows trip away.
 'Tis you must tend the flocks this morn,
 And scare the small birds from the corn.
 Not a soul at home may stay:
 For the shepherds must go
 With lance and bow
 To hunt the wolf in the woods to-day.

Leave the hearth and leave the house
 To the cricket and the mouse:
 Find grannam out a sunny seat,
 With babe and lambkin at her feet.

10

Not a soul at home may stay:
 For the shepherds must go
 With lance and bow

15

1815. To hunt the wolf in the woods to-day.

FAITH, HOPE, AND CHARITY<sup>2</sup>

FROM THE ITALIAN OF GUARINI

FAITH

LET those whose low delights to Earth are given Chaunt forth their earthly Loves! but we Must make an holier minstrelsy,
 And, heavenly-born, will sing the Things of Heaven.

CHARITY

But who for us the listening Heart shall gain? 5
 Inaudible as of the sphere
 Our music dies upon the ear,
 Enchanted with the mortal Syren's strain.

HOPE

Yet let our choral songs abound!
 Th' inspiring Power, its living Source, 10
 May flow with them and give them force,
 If, elsewhere all unheard, in Heaven they sound.

ALL

Aid thou our voice, Great Spirit! thou whose flame
 Kindled the Songster sweet of Israel,
 Who made so high to swell 15
 Beyond a mortal strain thy glorious Name.

CHARITY AND FAITH

Though rapt to Heaven, our mission and our care
 Is still to sojourn on the Earth,
 To shape, to soothe, Man's second Birth,
 And re-ascend to Heaven, Heaven's prodigal Heir! 20

CHARITY

What is Man's soul of Love deprived?

HOPE. FAITH

It like a Harp untuned is,
 That sounds, indeed, but sounds amiss.

CHARITY. HOPE

From holy Love all good gifts are derived.

FAITH

But 'tis time that every nation 25
 Should hear how loftily we sing.

FAITH. HOPE. CHARITY

See, O World, see thy salvation!
 Let the Heavens with praises ring.
 Who would have a Throne above,
 Let him hope, believe and love; 30
 And whoso loves no earthly song,
 But does for heavenly music long,
 Faith, Hope, and Charity for him,
 Shall sing like wingéd Cherubim.

TO NATURE<sup>1</sup>

It may indeed be phantasy, when I
 Essay to draw from all created things
 Deep, heartfelt, inward joy that closely clings;
 And trace in leaves and flowers that round me lie
 Lessons of love and earnest piety. 5
 So let it be; and if the wide world rings
 In mock of this belief, it brings
 Nor fear, nor grief, nor vain perplexity.
 So will I build my altar in the fields,
 And the blue sky my fretted dome shall be, 10
 And the sweet fragrance that the wild flower yields
 Shall be the incense I will yield to Thee,
 Thee only God! and thou shalt not despise
 Even me, the priest of this poor sacrifice.

THE sole true Something—This! In Limbo's Den
 It frightens Ghosts, as here Ghosts frighten men.
 Thence cross'd unseiz'd—and shall some fated hour
 Be pulveris'd by Demogorgon's power,

<sup>2</sup> First published, in its present shape, from an original MS. in 1893 (inscribed in a notebook). Lines 6–10 ('they shrink ... negative eye') were first printed in The Friend (1818, iii. 215), and included as a separate fragment with the title 'Moles' in P. W., 1834, i. 259. Lines 11–38 were first printed with the title 'Limbo' in P. W., 1834, i. 272–3. The lines as quoted in The Friend were directed against 'the partisans of a crass and sensual materialism, the advocates of the Nilil nisi ab extra'. The following variants, now first printed, are from a second MS. (MS. S. T. C.) in the possession of Miss Edith Coleridge. In the notebook Limbo is followed by the lines entitled Ne Plus Ultra, vide post, p. 431.

Limbo—Title] Another Fragment, but in a very different style, from a Dream of Purgatory, alias Limbus MS. S. T. C. [Note.—In this MS. Phantom, 'All Look and Likeness,' &c. precedes Limbo.]

For skimming in the wake it mock'd the care
 Of the old Boat-God for his farthing fare;
 Tho' Irus' Ghost itself he ne'er frown'd blacker on
 The skin and skin-pent Druggist cross'd the Acheron,

And given as poison to annihilate souls— 5
 Even now it shrinks them—they shrink in as Moles
 (Nature's mute monks, live mandrakes of the ground)
 Creep back from Light—then listen for its sound;—
 See but to dread, and dread they know not why—
 The natural alien of their negative eye. 10

'Tis a strange place, this Limbo!—not a Place,
 Yet name it so;—where Time and weary Space
 Fettered from flight, with night-mare sense of fleeing,
 Strive for their last crepuscular half-being;—
 Lank Space, and scytheless Time with branny hands 15
 Barren and soundless as the measuring sands,
 Not mark'd by flit of Shades,—unmeaning they
 As moonlight on the dial of the day!
 But that is lovely—looks like Human Time,—
 An Old Man with a steady look sublime, 20
 That stops his earthly task to watch the skies;
 But he is blind—a Statue hath such eyes;—
 Yet having moonward turn'd his face by chance,
 Gazes the orb with moon-like countenance,
 With scant white hairs, with foretop bald and high, 25
 He gazes still,—his eyeless face all eye;—
 As 'twere an organ full of silent sight,
 His whole face seemeth to rejoice in light!
 Lip touching lip, all moveless, bust and limb—
 He seems to gaze at that which seems to gaze on him! 30
 No such sweet sights doth Limbo den immure,
 Wall'd round, and made a spirit-jail secure,

Styx, and with Periphlegeton Cocytus,—
 (The very names, methinks, might frighten us)
 Unchang'd it cross'd—and shall some fated hour MS. Notebook.

 Arms the Grasp enorm—
 The Interceptor—
 The Substance that still casts the shadow Death!—
 The Dragon foul and fell— 10
 The unrevealable,
 And hidden one, whose breath
 Gives wind and fuel to the fires of Hell!
 Ah! sole despair
 Of both th' eternities in Heaven! 15
 Sole interdict of all-bedewing prayer,
 The all-compassionate!
 Save to the Lampads Seven
 Reveal'd to none of all th' Angelic State,
 Save to the Lampads Seven, 20
 That watch the throne of Heaven!

? 1826.

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1834. The MS., which is inscribed in a notebook, is immediately preceded by that of the first draft of Limbo (ante, p. 429). The so-called 'Ne Plus Ultra' may have been intended to illustrate a similar paradox—the 'positivity of negation'. No date can be assigned to either of these metaphysical conceits, but there can be little doubt that they were 'written in later life'.

THE KNIGHT'S TOMB<sup>1</sup>

WHERE is the grave of Sir Arthur O'Kellyn?
 Where may the grave of that good man be?—
 By the side of a spring, on the breast of Helvellyn,
 Under the twigs of a young birch tree!
 The oak that in summer was sweet to hear,
 And rustled its leaves in the fall of the year,
 And whistled and roared in the winter alone,
 Is gone,—and the birch in its stead is grown.—
 The Knight's bones are dust,
 And his good sword rust;—
 His soul is with the saints, I trust.

? 1817.

<sup>1</sup> First published in P. W., 1834. Gillman (Life, p. 276) says that the lines were composed 'as an experiment for a metre', and repeated by the author to 'a mutual friend', who 'spoke of his visit to Highgate' and repeated them to Scott on the following day. The last three lines, 'somewhat altered', are quoted in Ivanhoe, chapter viii, and again in Castle Dangerous, chapter ix. They run thus:—

The knights are dust,
 And their good swords are rust;—
 Their souls are with the saints, we trust.

Gillman says that the Ivanhoe quotation convinced Coleridge that Scott was the author of the Waverley Novels. In the Appendix to the 'Notes' to Castle Dangerous (1834), which was edited and partly drawn up by Lockhart, the poem is quoted in full, with a prefatory note ('The author has somewhat altered part of a beautiful unpublished fragment of Coleridge').

Where is the grave of Sir Arthur Orellan,—
 Where may the grave of that good knight be?
 By the marge of a brook, on the slope of Helvellyn,
 Under the boughs of a young birch-tree.
 The Oak that in summer was pleasant to hear,
 That rustled in autumn all wither'd and sear,
 That whistled and groan'd thro' the winter alone,
 He hath gone, and a birch in his place is grown.
 The knight's bones are dust,
 His good sword is rust;
 His spirit is with the saints, we trust.

This version must have been transcribed from a MS. in Lockhart's possession, and represents a first draft of the lines as published in 1834. These lines are, no doubt, an 'experiment for a metre'. The upward movement (ll. 1-7) is dactylic: the fall (ll. 8-11) is almost, if not altogether, spondaic. The whole forms a complete stanza, or metrical scheme, which may be compared with ll. 264-78 of the First Part of Christabel. Mrs. H. N. Coleridge, who must have been familiar with Gillman's story, dates the Knight's Tomb 1802.

ON DONNE'S POETRY<sup>1</sup>

With Donne, whose muse on dromedary trots,
 Wreathe iron pokers into true-love knots;
 Rhyme's sturdy cripple, fancy's maze and clue,
 Wit's forge and fire-blast, meaning's press and screw.

ISRAEL'S LAMENT<sup>2</sup>

'A Hebrew Dirge, chaunted in the Great Synagogue, St. James's Place, Aldgate, on the day of the Funeral of her Royal Highness the Princess Charlotte. By Hyman Hurwitz, Master of the Hebrew Academy, Highgate: with a Translation in English Verse, by S. T. Coleridge, Esq., 1817.'

MOURN, Israel! Sons of Israel, mourn!
 Give utterance to the inward throe!
 As wails, of her first love forlorn,
 The Virgin clad in robes of woe.

Mourn the young Mother, snatch'd away 5
 From Light and Life's ascending Sun!
 Mourn for the Babe, Death's voiceless prey,
 Earn'd by long pangs and lost ere won.

Mourn the bright Rose that bloom'd and went,
 Ere half disclosed its vernal hue! 10
 Mourn the green Bud, so rudely rent,
 It brake the stem on which it grew.

Mourn for the universal woe
 With solemn dirge and fault'ring tongue:
 For England's Lady is laid low, 15
 So dear, so lovely, and so young!

<sup>1</sup> First published in Literary Remains, 1836. i. 148, from 'notes written by Mr. Coleridge in a volume of "Chalmers's Poets"'. Line 2 finds a place in Hartley Coleridge's couplets on Donne which are written on the fly-leaves and covers of his copy of Anderson's British Poets. In the original MS. it is enclosed in quotation marks. First collected in P. W., 1885, ii. 409.

<sup>2</sup> First published, together with the Hebrew, as an octavo pamphlet (pp. 13) in 1817. An abbreviated version was included in Literary Remains, 1836, i. 57-8 and in the Appendix to Poems, 1863. The Lament as a whole was first collected in P. and D. W., 1877-80, ii. 282-5.

The blossoms on her Tree of Life
 Shone with the dews of recent bliss:
 Transplanted in that deadly strife,
 She plucks its fruits in Paradise. 20

Mourn for the widow'd Lord in chief,
 Who wails and will not solaced be!
 Mourn for the childless Father's grief,
 The wedded Lover's agony!

Mourn for the Prince, who rose at morn 25
 To seek and bless the firstling bud
 Of his own Rose, and found the thorn,
 Its point bedew'd with tears of blood.

O press again that murmuring string!
 Again bewail that princely Sire! 30
 A destined Queen, a future King,
 He mourns on one funereal pyre.

Mourn for Britannia's hopes decay'd,
 Her daughters wail their dear defence;
 Their fair example, prostrate laid, 35
 Chaste Love and fervid Innocence.

While Grief in song shall seek repose,
 We will take up a Mourning yearly:
 To wail the blow that crush'd the Rose,
 So dearly priz'd and lov'd so dearly. 40

Long as the fount of Song o'erflows
 Will I the yearly dirge renew:
 Mourn for the firstling of the Rose,
 That snapt the stem on which it grew.

The proud shall pass, forgot; the chill, 45
 Damp, trickling Vault their only mourner!
 Not so the regal Rose, that still
 Clung to the breast which first had worn her!

O thou, who mark'st the Mourner's path
 To sad Jeshurun's Sons attend! 50
 Amid the Light'nings of thy Wrath
 The showers of Consolation send!

Jehovah frowns! the Islands bow!

And Prince and People kiss the Rod!—

Their dread chastising Judge wert thou!

Be thou their Comforter, O God!

FANCY IN NUBIBUS<sup>1</sup>

OR THE POET IN THE CLOUDS

O! IT is pleasant, with a heart at ease,

Just after sunset, or by moonlight skies,

To make the shifting clouds be what you please,

Or let the easily persuaded eyes

Own each quaint likeness issuing from the mould

5

Of a friend's fancy; or with head bent low

And cheek aslant see rivers flow of gold

'Twixt crimson banks; and then, a traveller, go

From mount to mount through Cloudland, gorgeous land!

Or list'ning to the tide, with closed sight,

10

Be that blind bard, who on the Chian strand

By those deep sounds possessed with inward light,

Beheld the Iliad and the Odyssee

Rise to the swelling of the voiceful sea.

A MS. in the possession of Major Butterworth of Carlisle is signed 'S. T. Coleridge, Little Hampton, Oct. 1818'. THE TEARS OF A GRATEFUL PEOPLE<sup>1</sup>

A Hebrew Dirge and Hymn, chaunted in the Great Synagogue, St. James' pl. Aldgate, on the Day of the Funeral of King George III. of blessed memory. By Hyman Hurwitz of Highgate, Translated by a Friend.

Dirge

OPPRESS'D, confused, with grief and pain,
And inly shrinking from the blow,
In vain I seek the dirgeful strain,
The wonted words refuse to flow.

A fear in every face I find,
Each voice is that of one who grieves;
And all my Soul, to grief resigned,
Reflects the sorrow it receives.

The Day-Star of our glory sets!
Our King has breathed his latest breath!
Each heart its wonted pulse forgets,
As if it own'd the pow'r of death.

Our Crown, our heart's Desire is fled!
Britannia's glory moults its wing!
Let us with ashes on our head,
Raise up a mourning for our King.

Lo! of his beams the Day-Star shorn,<sup>2</sup>
Sad gleams the Moon through cloudy veil!
The Stars are dim! Our Nobles mourn;
The Matrons weep, their Children wail.

No age records a King so just,
His virtues numerous as his days;
The Lord Jehovah was his trust,
And truth with mercy ruled his ways.

His Love was bounded by no Clime;
Each diverse Race, each distant Clan
He govern'd by this truth sublime,
'God only knows the heart—not man.'

His word appall'd the sons of pride,
 Iniquity far wing'd her way; 30
 Deceit and fraud were scatter'd wide,
 And truth resum'd her sacred sway.

He sooth'd the wretched, and the prey
 From impious tyranny he tore;
 He stay'd th' Usurper's iron sway, 35
 And bade the Spoiler waste no more.

Thou too, Jeshurun's Daughter! thou,
 Th' oppress'd of nations and the scorn!
 Didst hail on his benignant brow
 A safety dawning like the morn. 40

The scoff of each unfeeling mind,
 Thy doom was hard, and keen thy grief;
 Beneath his throne, peace thou didst find,
 And blest the hand that gave relief.

E'en when a fatal cloud o'erspread 45
 The moonlight splendour of his sway,
 Yet still the light remain'd, and shed
 Mild radiance on the traveller's way.

But he is gone—the Just! the Good!
 Nor could a Nation's pray'r delay 50
 The heavenly meed, that long had stood
 His portion in the realms of day.

Beyond the mighty Isle's extent
 The mightier Nation mourns her Chief:
 Him Judah's Daughter shall lament, 55
 In tears of fervour, love and grief.

Britannia mourns in silent grief;
 Her heart a prey to inward woe.
 In vain she strives to find relief,
 Her pang so great, so great the blow. 60

Britannia! Sister! woe is me!
 Full fain would I console thy woe.
 But, ah! how shall I comfort thee,
 Who need the balm I would bestow?

United then let us repair, 65
 As round our common Parent's grave;
 And pouring out our heart in prayer,
 Our heav'nly Father's mercy crave.

Until Jehovah from his throne
 Shall heed his suffering people's fears; 70
 Shall turn to song the Mourner's groan,
 To smiles of joy the Nation's tears.
 Praise to the Lord! Loud praises sing!
 And bless Jehovah's righteous hand!
 Again he bids a George, our King, 75
 Dispense his blessings to the Land.

Hymn

O thron'd in Heav'n! Sole King of kings,
 Jehovah! hear thy Children's prayers and sighs!
 Thou Binder of the broken heart! with wings
 Of healing on thy people rise! 80
 Thy mercies, Lord, are sweet;
 And Peace and Mercy meet,
 Before thy Judgment seat:
 Lord, hear us! we entreat!

When angry clouds thy throne surround, 85
 E'en from the cloud thou bid'st thy mercy shine:
 And ere thy righteous vengeance strikes the wound,
 Thy grace prepares the balm divine!
 Thy mercies, Lord, are sweet;
 etc.

The Parent tree thy hand did spare— 90
 It fell not till the ripen'd fruit was won:
 Beneath its shade the Scion flourish'd fair,
 And for the Sire thou gav'st the Son.
 etc.

This thy own Vine, which thou didst rear, *
 And train up for us from the royal root, 95
 Protect, O Lord! and to the Nations near Long let it shelter yield, and fruit.
 etc.

Lord, comfort thou the royal line:
 Let Peace and Joy watch round us hand and hand.
 Our Nobles visit with thy grace divine, 100
 And banish sorrow from the land!
 Thy mercies, Lord, are sweet;
 And Peace and Mercy meet
 Before thy Judgment seat;
 Lord, hear us! we entreat! 105

YOUTH AND AGE<sup>1</sup>

VERSE, a breeze mid blossoms straying,
 Where Hope clung feeding, like a bee—
 Both were mine! Life went a-maying
                     With Nature, Hope, and Poesy,
                     When I was young! 5

When I was young?—Ah, woful When!
 Ah! for the change 'twixt Now and Then!
 This breathing house not built with hands,
 This body that does me grievous wrong,
 O'er aery cliffs and glittering sands, 10
 How lightly then it flashed along:—
 Like those trim skiffs, unknown of yore,
 On winding lakes and rivers wide,
 That ask no aid of sail or oar,
 That fear no spite of wind or tide! 15

<sup>1</sup> First published in its present shape in 1834. Lines 1-38, with the heading 'Youth and Age', were first published in the Literary Souvenir, 1828, and also in the Bijou, 1828: included in 1828, 1829. Lines 39-49 were first published in Blackwood's Magazine for June 1832, entitled 'An Old Man's Sigh: a Sonnet', as 'an out-slough or hypertrophic stanza of a certain poem called "Youth and Age".' Of lines 1-43 three MSS. are extant. (1) A fair copy (MS. 1) presented to Derwent Coleridge, and now in the Editor's possession. In MS. 1 the poem is divided into three stanzas: (i) lines 1-17; (ii) lines 18-38; (iii) lines 39-43. The watermark of this MS. on a quarto sheet of Bath Post letter-paper is 1822. (2) A rough draft, in a notebook dated Sept. 10, 1823; and (3) a corrected draft of forty-three lines (vide for MSS. 2, 3 Appendices of this edition). A MS. version of An Old Man's Sigh, dated 'Grove, Highgate, April 1832', was contributed to Miss Rotha Quillinan's Album; and another version numbering only eight lines was inscribed in an album in 1828 when Coleridge was on his Rhine tour with Wordsworth. After line 42 this version continues:—

As we creep feebly down life's slope,
 Yet courteous dame, accept this truth,
 Hope leaves us not, but we leave hope,
 And quench the inward light of youth.

T. Colley Grattan's Beaten Paths, 1862, ii. 139.

There can be little doubt that lines 1-43 were composed in 1823, and that the last six lines of the text which form part of An Old Man's Sigh were composed, as an afterthought, in 1832.

Of Friendship, Love, and Liberty,
Ere I was old!

20

Ere I was old? Ah woful Ere,
Which tells me, Youth's no longer here!
O Youth! for years so many and sweet,
'Tis known, that Thou and I were one,
I'll think it but a fond conceit—
It cannot be that Thou art gone!
Thy vesper-bell hath not yet toll'd:—
And thou wert aye a masker bold!
What strange disguise hast now put on,
To make believe, that thou art gone?
I see these locks in silvery slips,
This drooping gait, this altered size:
But Spring-tide blossoms on thy lips,
And tears take sunshine from thine eyes!
Life is but thought: so think I will
That Youth and I are house-mates still.

Dew-drops are the gems of morning,
But the tears of mournful eve!
Where no hope is, life's a warning
That only serves to make us grieve,
When we are old:

That only serves to make us grieve
With oft and tedious taking-leave,

THE REPROOF AND REPLY<sup>1</sup>

Or, The Flower-Thief's Apology. for a robbery committed in Mr. and Mrs. ——'s garden, on Sunday morning, 25th of May, 1823, between the hours of eleven and twelve.

"FIE, Mr. Coleridge!—and can this be you?
Break two commandments? and in church-time too!
Have you not heard, or have you heard in vain,
The birth-and-parentage-recording strain?—
Confessions shrill, that out-shrill'd mack'rel drown                   5
Fresh from the drop—the youth not yet cut down—
Letter to sweet-heart—the last dying speech—
And didn't all this begin in Sabbath-breach?
You, that knew better! In broad open day,
Steal in, steal out, and steal our flowers away?                   10
What could possess you? Ah! sweet youth, I fear
The chap with horns and tail was at your ear!"

Such sounds of late, accusing fancy brought
From fair Chisholm to the Poet's thought.
Now hear the meek Parnassian youth's reply:—                   15
A bow—a pleading look—a downcast eye,—
And then:

<sup>1</sup> First published in Friendship's Offering for 1834, as the first of four 'Lightheartednesses in Rhyme'. A motto was prefixed:—'I expect no sense, worth listening to, from the man who never does talk nonsense.'—Anon. In P. O., 1834, Chisholm was printed C—— in line 14, C——m in lines 35, 56, and 60, C——m's in line 43. In 1834, 1844 the name was omitted altogether. The text of the present edition follows the MS. First collected in P. W., 1834. A MS. version is in the possession of Miss Edith Coleridge. These lines were included in 1844, but omitted from 1852, 1863, and 1870.

49 Two lines were added in 1832:—

O might Life cease! and Selfless Mind,
Whose total Being is Act, alone remain behind.

"Fair dame! a visionary wight,
 Hard by your hill-side mansion sparkling white,
 His thoughts all hovering round the Muses' home,
 Long hath it been your Poet's wont to roam, 20
 And many a morn, on his becharméd sense
 So rich a stream of music issued thence,
 He deem'd himself, as it flowed warbling on,
 Beside the vocal fount of Helicon!
 But when, as if to settle the concern, 25
 A Nymph too he beheld, in many a turn,
 Guiding the sweet rill from its fontal urn,—
 Say, can you blame?—No! none that saw and heard
 Could blame a bard, that he thus inly stirr'd;
 A muse beholding in each fervent trait, 30
 Took Mary H—— for Polly Hymnia!
 Or haply as there stood beside the maid
 One loftier form in sable stole array'd,
 If with regretful thought he hail'd in thee
 Chisholm, his long-lost friend, Mol Pomene! 35
 But most of you, soft warblings, I complain!
 'Twas ye that from the bee-hive of my brain
 Did lure the fancies forth, a freakish rout,
 And witch'd the air with dreams turn'd inside out.

"Thus all conspir'd—each power of eye and ear, 40
 And this gay month, th' enchantress of the year,
 To cheat poor me (no conjuror, God wot!)
 And Chisholm's self accomplice in the plot.
 Can you then wonder if I went astray?
 Not bards alone, nor lovers mad as they;— 45
 All Nature day-dreams in the month of May.
 And if I pluck'd 'each flower that sweetest blows,'—
 Who walks in sleep, needs follow must his nose.

Thus, long accustom'd on the twy-fork'd hill,<sup>1</sup>
 To pluck both flower and floweret at my will; 50
 The garden's maze, like No-man's-land, I tread,
 Nor common law, nor statute in my head;
 For my own proper smell, sight, fancy, feeling,

 There's no spring-gun or man-trap in that face!
 Let Moses then look black, and Aaron blue,
 That look as if they had little else to do:
 For Chisholm speaks, 'Poor youth! he's but a waif! 60

FIRST ADVENT OF LOVE<sup>2</sup>

O FAIR is Love's first hope to gentle mind!
 As Eve's first star thro' fleecy cloudlet peeping;
 And sweeter than the gentle south-west wind.
 O'er willowy meads, and shadow'd waters creeping,
 And Ceres' golden fields;—the sultry hind 5
 Meets it with brow uplift, and stays his reaping.

<sup>2</sup> First published in 1834. In a MS. note, dated September 1827, it is included in 'Relics of my School-boy Muse: i.e. fragments of poems composed before my fifteenth year', P. W., 1852, Notes, p. 379; but in an entry in a notebook dated 1824, Coleridge writes: 'A pretty unintended couplet in the prose of Sidney's Arcadia :—

'And, sweeter than a gentle south-west wind
 O'er flowery fields and shadowed waters creeping
 In summer's extreme heat.'

The passage which Coleridge versified is to be found in the Arcadia :—
 'Her breath is more sweet than a gentle south-west wind, which comes creeping over flowing fields and shadowed waters in the heat of summer.'

Brave Captain Lyon tells us so<sup>1</sup>—
 Spite of those charming Esquimaux.
 But O, what scores are sick of Home, 5
 Agog for Paris or for Rome!
 Nay! tho' contented to abide,
 You should prefer your own fireside;
 Yet since grim War has ceas'd its madding,
 And Peace has set John Bull agadding, 10
 'Twould such a vulgar taste betray,
 For very shame you must away!
 'What? not yet seen the coast of France!
 The folks will swear, for lack of bail,
 You've spent your last five years in jail!' 15

Keep moving! Steam, or Gas, or Stage,
 Hold, cabin, steerage, hencoop's cage—
 Tour, Journey, Voyage, Lounge, Ride, Walk,
 Skim, Sketch, Excursion, Travel-talk—
 For move you must! 'Tis now the rage, 20
 The law and fashion of the Age.
 If you but perch, where Dover tallies,
 So strangely with the coast of Calais,
 With a good glass and knowing look,
 You'll soon get matter for a book! 25
 Or else, in Gas-car, take your chance
 Like that adventurous king of France,
 Who, once, with twenty thousand men
 Went up—and then came down again;
 At least, he moved if nothing more: 30
 And if there's nought left to explore,
 Yet while your well-greased wheels keep spinning,
 The traveller's honoured name you're winning,
 And, snug as Jonas in the Whale,
 You may loll back and dream a tale. 35
 Move, or be moved—there's no protection,
 Our Mother Earth has ta'en the infection—
 (That rogue Copernicus, 'tis said
 First put the whirring in her head.)

 The name were else a mere misnomer,
 Since Planet is but Greek for Roamer.
 The atmosphere, too, can do no less
 Than ventilate her emptiness, 45
 Bilks turn-pike gates, for no one cares,
 And gives herself a thousand airs—
 While streams and shopkeepers, we see,
 Will have their run toward the sea—
 And if, meantime, like old King Log, 50
 Or ass with tether and a clog,
 Must graze at home! to yawn and bray
 'I guess we shall have rain to-day!
 Nor clog nor tether can be worse
 Than the dead palsy of the purse. 55
 Money, I've heard a wise man say,
 Makes herself wings and flys away :
 Ah! would She take it in her head
 To make a pair for me instead!
 At all events, the Fancy's free, 60
 No traveller so bold as she.
 From Fear and Poverty released
 I'll saddle Pegasus, at least,
 And when she's seated to her mind,
 I within I can mount behind : 65
 And since this outward I, you know,
 Must stay because he cannot go,
 My fellow-travellers shall be they
 Who go because they cannot stay—
 Rogues, rascals, sharpers, blanks and prizes, 70
 Delinquents of all sorts and sizes,
 Fraudulent bankrupts, Knights burglarious,
 And demireps of means precarious—
 All whom Law thwarted, Arms or Arts,
 Compel to visit foreign parts, 75
 All hail! No compliments, I pray,
 I'll follow where you lead the way!
 But ere we cross the main once more,
 Methinks, along my native shore,
 Dismounting from my steed I'll stray 80
 Beneath the cliffs of Dumpton Bay,<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> A coast village near Ramsgate. Coleridge passed some weeks at Ramsgate in the late autumn of 1824.

Where, Ramsgate and Broadstairs between,
 Rude caves and grated doors are seen :
 And here I'll watch till break of day,
 (For Fancy in her magic might 85
 Can turn broad noon to starless night!)
 When lo! methinks a sudden band
 Of smock-clad smugglers round me stand.
 Denials, oaths, in vain I try,
 At once they gag me for a spy, 90
 And stow me in the boat hard by.
 Suppose us fairly now afloat,
 Till Boulogne mouth receives our Boat.
 But, bless us! what a numerous band
 Of cockneys anglicise the strand! 95
 Delinquent bankrupts, leg-bail'd debtors,
 Some for the news, and some for letters—
 With hungry look and tarnished dress,
 French shrugs and British surliness.
 Sick of the country for their sake 100
 Of them and France French leave I take—
 And lo! a transport comes in view
 I hear the merry motley crew,
 Well skill'd in pocket to make entry,
 Of Dieman's Land the elected Gentry, 105
 And founders of Australian Races.—
 The Rogues! I see it in their faces!
 Receive me, Lads! I'll go with you,
 Hunt the black swan and kangaroo,
 And that New Holland we'll presume 110
 Old England with some elbow-room.
 Across the mountains we will roam,
 And each man make himself a home:
 Or, if old habits ne'er forsaking,
 Like clock-work of the Devil's making, 115
 Ourselves inveterate rogues should be,
 We'll have a virtuous progeny;
 And on the dunghill of our vices
 Raise human pine-apples and spices.
 Of all the children of John Bull 120
 With empty heads and bellies full,
 Who ramble East, West, North and South,
 With leaky purse and open mouth,
 In search of varieties exotic
 The usefulest and most patriotic, 125

And merriest, too, believe me, Sirs!
Are your Delinquent Travellers!

WORK WITHOUT HOPE <sup>1</sup>

LINES COMPOSED 21ST FEBRUARY 1825

ALL Nature seems at work. Slugs leave their lair—
The bees are stirring—birds are on the wing—<sup>2</sup>
And Winter slumbering in the open air,
Wears on his smiling face a dream of Spring!
And I the while, the sole unbusy thing, 5
Nor honey make, nor pair, nor build, nor sing.

Yet well I ken the banks where amaranths blow,
Have traced the fount whence streams of nectar flow.
Bloom, O ye amaranths! bloom for whom ye may,
For me ye bloom not! Glide, rich streams, away! 10
With lips unbrightened, wreathless brow, I stroll:
And would you learn the spells that drowse my soul?
Work without Hope draws nectar in a sieve,
And Hope without an object cannot live.

1825.

These lines, as published in the Bijou for 1828, were an excerpt from an entry in a notebook, dated Feb. 21, 1825. They were preceded by a prose introduction, now for the first time printed, and followed by a metrical interpretation or afterthought which was first published in the Notes to the Edition of 1893.

O raise me thus! Poor Bees that work all day,
Sting my delay,
Who have a work as well as they,
And much, much more.

SANCTI DOMINICI PALLIUM<sup>1</sup>

A DIALOGUE BETWEEN POET AND FRIEND

FOUND WRITTEN ON THE BLANK LEAF AT THE BEGINNING OF BUTLER'S
'BOOK OF THE CHURCH' (1825)

POET

I NOTE the moods and feelings men betray,
And heed them more than aught they do or say;
The lingering ghosts of many a secret deed
Still-born or haply strangled in its birth;
These best reveal the smooth man's inward creed! 5
These mark the spot where lies the treasure—Worth!

Milner, made up of impudence and trick,<sup>2</sup>
With cloven tongue prepared to hiss and lick,
Rome's Brazen Serpent—boldly dares discuss
The roasting of thy heart, O brave John Huss! 10
And with grim triumph and a truculent glee<sup>3</sup>
Absolves anew the Pope-wrought perfidy,

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Evening Standard, May 21, 1827. 'The poem signed ΕΣΤΗΣΕ appeared likewise in the St. James's Chronicle.' See Letter of S. T. C. to J. Blanco White, dated Nov. 28, 1827. Life, 1845, i. 439, 440. First collected in 1834. I have amended the text of 1834 in lines 7, 17, 34, 39 in accordance with a MS. in the possession of the poet's granddaughter, Miss Edith Coleridge. The poem as published in 1834 and every subsequent edition (except 1907) is meaningless. Southey's Book of the Church, 1825, was answered by Charles Butler's Book of the Roman Catholic Church, 1825, and in an anonymous pamphlet by the Vicar Apostolic, Dr. John Milner, entitled Merlin's Strictures. Southey retaliated in his Vindiciae Ecclesiae Anglicanae, 1826. In the latter work he addresses Butler as 'an honourable and courteous opponent'—and contrasts his 'habitual urbanity' with the malignant and scurrilous attacks of that 'ill-mannered man', Dr. Milner. In the 'Dialogue' the poet reminds his 'Friend' Southey that Rome is Rome, a 'brazen serpent', charm she never so wisely. In the Vindiciae Southey devotes pp. 470-506 to an excursus on 'The Rosary'—the invention of St. Dominic. Hence the title—'Sancti Dominici Pallium'.

<sup>3</sup> Trüculënt: a tribrach as the isochronous substitute for the Trochee — ∪. N. B. If our accent, a quality of sound were actually equivalent to the Quantity in the Greek — ∪ —, or dactyl — ∪ ∪ at least. But it is not so, accent shortens syllables: thus Spīrit, sprite; Hōnēy, mōnēy, nōbōdy, &c. MS. S. T. C.

Yet Milner—

FRIEND

Enough of Milner! we're agreed,
Who now defends would then have done the deed.

FRIEND

Laments the advice that soured a milky queen—
(For 'bloody' all enlightened men confess
An antiquated error of the press:)
Who rapt by zeal beyond her sex's bounds, 25
With actual cautery staunch'd the Church's wounds!
And tho' he deems, that with too broad a blur
We damn the French and Irish massacre,
Yet blames them both—and thinks the Pope might err!
What think you now? Boots it with spear and shield 30
Against such gentle foes to take the field
Whose beckoning hands the mild Caduceus wield?

POET

What think I now? Even what I thought before;—
What Milner boasts though Butler may deplore,
Still I repeat, words lead me not astray 35
When the shown feeling points a different way.
Smooth Butler can say grace at slander's feast,<sup>1</sup>

 Content with half-truths that do just as well; 40
 But duly decks his mitred comrade's flanks,<sup>1</sup>
 And with him shares the Irish nation's thanks!

So much for you, my friend! who own a Church,
 And would not leave your mother in the lurch!
 But when a Liberal asks me what I think— 45
 Scared by the blood and soot of Cobbett's ink,
 And Jeffrey's glairy phlegm and Connor's foam,
 In search of some safe parable I roam—
 An emblem sometimes may comprise a tome!

Disclaimant of his uncaught grandsire's mood, 50
 I see a tiger lapping kitten's food:
 And who shall blame him that he purs applause,
 When brother Brindle pleads the good old cause;
 And frisks his pretty tail, and half unsheathes his claws!
 Yet not the less, for modern lights unapt, 55
 I trust the bolts and cross-bars of the laws
 More than the Protestant milk all newly lapt,
 Impearling a tame wild-cat's whisker'd jaws!

A CHARACTER<sup>1</sup>

A BIRD, who for his other sins
 Had liv'd amongst the Jacobins;
 Though like a kitten amid rats,
 Or callow tit in nest of bats,
 He much abhorr'd all democrats;
 Yet nathless stood in ill report
 Of wishing ill to Church and Court,
 Tho' he'd nor claw, nor tooth, nor sting,
 And learnt to pipe God save the King;
 Tho' each day did new feathers bring,
 All swore he had a leathern wing;
 Nor polish'd wing, nor feather'd tail,
 Nor down-clad thigh would aught avail;
 And tho'—his tongue devoid of gall—
 He civilly assur'd them all:—
 'A bird am I of Phoebus' breed,
 And on the sunflower cling and feed;
 My name, good Sirs, is Thomas Tit!
 The bats would hail him Brother Cit,
 Or, at the furthest, cousin-german.

 He spared the mouse, he praised the owl;
 But bats were neither flesh nor fowl.
 Blood-sucker, vampire, harpy, goul, 25
 Came in full clatter from his throat,
 Till his old nest-mates chang'd their note
 To hireling, traitor, and turncoat,—
 A base apostate who had sold
 His very teeth and claws for gold;— 30
 And then his feathers!—sharp the jest—

 With metaphor and simile, 40
 For simple facts and style historic:—
 Alas, poor Bard! no gold had he;
 Behind another's team he stept,
 And plough'd and sow'd, while others reapt;
 The work was his, but theirs the glory, 45
Sic vos non vobis, his whole story.
 Besides, whate'er he wrote or said
 Came from his heart as well as head;
 And though he never left in lurch
 His king, his country, or his church, 50
 'Twas but to humour his own cynical
 Contempt of doctrines Jacobinical;
 To his own conscience only hearty,
 'Twas but by chance he serv'd the party;—
 The self-same things had said and writ, 55
 Had Pitt been Fox, and Fox been Pitt;
 Content his own applause to win,
 Would never dash thro' thick and thin,
 And he can make, so say the wise,
 No claim who makes no sacrifice;— 60
 And bard still less:—what claim had he,

Who swore it vex'd his soul to see
 So grand a cause, so proud a realm,
 With Goose and Goody at the helm;
 Who long ago had fall'n asunder
 But for their rivals' baser blunder,
 The coward whine and Frenchified
 Slaver and slang of the other side?—

Thus, his own whim his only bribe,
 Our Bard pursued his old A. B. C.
 Contented if he could subscribe
 In fullest sense his name Ἐστησε;
 ('Tis Punic Greek for 'he hath stood!')
 Whate'er the men, the cause was good;
 And therefore with a right good will,
 Poor fool, he fights their battles still.
 Tush! squeak'd the Bats;—a mere bravado
 To whitewash that base renegado;
 'Tis plain unless you're blind or mad,
 His conscience for the bays he barter;—
 And true it is—as true as sad—
 These circlets of green baize he had—
 But then, alas! they were his garters!
 Ah! silly Bard, unfed, untended,
 His lamp but glimmer'd in its socket;
 He lived unhonour'd and unfriended
 With scarce a penny in his pocket;—
 Nay—tho' he hid it from the many—
 With scarce a pocket for his penny!

THE TWO FOUNTS<sup>1</sup>

STANZAS ADDRESSED TO A LADY ON HER RECOVERY WITH UNBLEMISHED LOOKS, FROM A SEVERE ATTACK OF PAIN

'Twas my last waking thought, how it could be
That thou, sweet friend, such anguish should'st endure;
When straight from Dreamland came a Dwarf, and he Could tell the cause, forsooth, and knew the cure.

Methought he fronted me with peering look 5
Fix'd on my heart; and read aloud in game
The loves and griefs therein, as from a book:
And uttered praise like one who wished to blame.

In every heart (quoth he) since Adam's sin
Two Founts there are, of Suffering and of Cheer! 10
That to let forth, and this to keep within!
But she, whose aspect I find imaged here,

Of Pleasure only will to all dispense,
That Fount alone unlock, by no distress
Choked or turned inward, but still issue thence 15
Unconquered cheer, persistent loveliness.

As on the driving cloud the shiny bow,
That gracious thing made up of tears and light,
Mid the wild rack and rain that slants below
Stands smiling forth, unmoved and freshly bright; 20

As though the spirits of all lovely flowers,
Inweaving each its wreath and dewy crown,
Or ere they sank to earth in vernal showers,
Had built a bridge to tempt the angels down.

<sup>1</sup> First published in the Annual Register for 1827: reprinted in the Bijou for 1828: included in 1828, 1829, 1834. 'In Gilchrist's Life of Blake (1863, i. 337) it is stated that this poem was addressed to Mrs. Aders, the daughter of the engraver Raphael Smith.' P. W., 1892, p. 642.

16-17 In a MS. dated 1826, the following stanza precedes stanza 5 of the text:—

Was ne'er on earth seen beauty like to this,
A concentrated satisfying sight!
In its deep quiet, ask no further bliss—
At once the form and substance of delight.
19-20 Looks forth upon the troubled air below
Unmov'd, entire, inviolably bright. MS. 1826.

Even so, Eliza! on that face of thine, 25
 On that benignant face, whose look alone
 (The soul's translucence thro' her crystal shrine!)
 Has power to soothe all anguish but thine own,
 A beauty hovers still, and ne'er takes wing,
 But with a silent charm compels the stern 30
 And tort'ring Genius of the bitter spring,
 To shrink aback, and cower upon his urn.
 Who then needs wonder, if (no outlet found
 In passion, spleen, or strife) the Fount of Pain
 O'erflowing beats against its lovely mound, 35
 And in wild flashes shoots from heart to brain?
 Sleep, and the Dwarf with that unsteady gleam
 On his raised lip, that aped a critic smile,
 Had passed: yet I, my sad thoughts to beguile,
 Lay weaving on the tissue of my dream; 40
 Till audibly at length I cried, as though
 Thou hadst indeed been present to my eyes,
 O sweet, sweet sufferer; if the case be so,
 I pray thee, be less good, less sweet, less wise!
 In every look a barbéd arrow send, 45
 On those soft lips let scorn and anger live!
 Do any thing, rather than thus, sweet friend!
 Hoard for thyself the pain, thou wilt not give!

CONSTANCY TO AN IDEAL OBJECT<sup>1</sup>

SINCE all that beat about in Nature's range,
 Or veer or vanish; why should'st thou remain
 The only constant in a world of change,
 O yearning Thought! that liv'st but in the brain?
 Call to the Hours, that in the distance play, 5
 The faery people of the future day——

<sup>1</sup> There is no evidence as to date of composition. J. D. Campbell (1893, p. 635) believed that it 'was written at Malta'. Line 18 seems to imply that the poem was not written in England. On the other hand a comparison of ll. 9, 10 with a passage in the Allegoric Vision, which was re-written with large additions, and first published in 1817, suggests a much later date. The editors of 1852 include these lines among 'Poems written in Later Life', but the date (?1826) now assigned is purely conjectural. First published in 1828: included in 1829 and 1834.

Fond Thought! not one of all that shining swarm
 Will breathe on thee with life-enkindling breath,
 Till when, like strangers shelt'ring from a storm,<sup>1</sup>
 Hope and Despair meet in the porch of Death! 10
 Yet still thou haunt'st me; and though well I see,
 She is not thou, and only thou art she,
 Still, still as though some dear embodied Good,
 Some living Love before my eyes there stood
 With answering look a ready ear to lend, 15
 I mourn to thee and say—'Ah! loveliest friend!
 That this the meed of all my toils might be,
 To have a home, an English home, and thee!'
 Vain repetition! Home and Thou are one.
 The peacefull'st cot, the moon shall shine upon, 20
 Lulled by the thrush and wakened by the lark,
 Without thee were but a becalméd bark,
 Whose Helmsman on an ocean waste and wide
 Sits mute and pale his mouldering helm beside.

And art thou nothing? Such thou art, as when 25
 The woodman winding westward up the glen
 At wintry dawn, where o'er the sheep-track's maze
 The viewless snow-mist weaves a glist'ning haze,
 Sees full before him, gliding without tread,
 An image<sup>2</sup> with a glory round its head; 30
 The enamoured rustic worships its fair hues,
 Nor knows he makes the shadow, he pursues!

? 1826.

<sup>1</sup> With lines 9, 10 J. D. Campbell compares, 'After a pause of silence: even thus, said he, like two strangers that have fled to the same shelter from the same storm, not seldom do Despair and Hope meet for the first time in the porch of Death.' Allegoric Vision (1798-1817); vide Appendices of this edition.

<sup>2</sup> This phenomenon, which the Author has himself experienced, and of which the reader may find a description in one of the earlier volumes of the Manchester Philosophical Transactions, is applied figuratively to the following passage in the Aids to Reflection:—

'Pindar's fine remark respecting the different effects of Music, on different characters, holds equally true of Genius—as many as are not delighted by it are disturbed, perplexed, irritated. The beholder either recognises it as a projected form of his own Being, that moves before him with a Glory round its head, or recoils from it as a Spectre.'—Aids to Reflection [1825], p. 220.

THE PANG MORE SHARP THAN ALL<sup>1</sup>

AN ALLEGORY

I

HE too has flitted from his secret nest,
 Hope's last and dearest child without a name!—
 Has flitted from me, like the warmthless flame,
 That makes false promise of a place of rest
 To the tired Pilgrim's still believing mind;—
 Or like some Elfin Knight in kingly court,
 Who having won all guerdons in his sport,
 Glides out of view, and whither none can find!

II

Yes! he hath flitted from me—with what aim,
 Or why, I know not! 'Twas a home of bliss,
 And he was innocent, as the pretty shame
 Of babe, that tempts and shuns the menaced kiss,

10

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1834. With lines 36-43, and with the poem as a whole, compare the following fragments of uncertain date, which were first published in a note to the edition of 1893. Both the poem as completed and these fragments of earlier drafts seem to belong to the last decade of the poet's life. The water-mark of the scrap of paper on which these drafts are written is 1819, but the tone and workmanship of the verse suggest a much later date, possibly 1826.

'— into my Heart

The magic Child as in a magic glass
 Transfused, and ah! he left within my Heart
 A loving Image and a counterpart.'

'— into my Heart

As 'twere some magic Glass the magic child
 Transfused his Image and full counterpart;
 And then he left it like a Sylph beguiled
 To live and yearn and languish incomplete!
 Day following day, more rugged grows my path,
 There dwells a cloud before my heavy eyes;
 A Blank my Heart, and Hope is dead and buried,
 Yet the deep yearning will not die; but Love
 Clings on and cloathes the marrowless remains,
 Like the fresh moss that grows on dead men's bones,
 Quaint mockery! and fills its scarlet cups
 With the chill dewdamps of the Charnel House.
 O ask not for my Heart! my Heart is but
 The darksome vault where Hope lies dead and buried,
 And Love with Asbest Lamp bewails the Corse.'

From its twy-cluster'd hiding place of snow!
 Pure as the babe, I ween, and all aglow
 As the dear hopes, that swell the mother's breast— 15
 Her eyes down gazing o'er her claspéd charge;—
 Yet gay as that twice happy father's kiss,
 That well might glance aside, yet never miss,
 Where the sweet mark emboss'd so sweet a targe—
 Twice wretched he who hath been doubly blest! 20

III

Like a loose blossom on a gusty night
 He flitted from me—and has left behind
 (As if to them his faith he ne'er did plight)
 Of either sex and answerable mind
 Two playmates, twin-births of his foster-dame:— 25
 The one a steady lad (Esteem he hight)
 And Kindness is the gentler sister's name.
 Dim likeness now, though fair she be and good,
 Of that bright Boy who hath us all forsook;—
 But in his full-eyed aspect when she stood, 30
 And while her face reflected every look,
 And in reflection kindled—she became
 So like Him, that almost she seem'd the same!

IV

Ah! he is gone, and yet will not depart!—
 Is with me still, yet I from him exiled! 35
 For still there lives within my secret heart
 The magic image of the magic Child,
 Which there he made up-grow by his strong art,
 As in that crystal<sup>1</sup> orb—wise Merlin's feat,—
 The wondrous 'World of Glass,' wherein inisled 40
 All long'd-for things their beings did repeat;—
 And there he left it, like a Sylph beguiled,
 To live and yearn and languish incomplete!

V

Can wit of man a heavier grief reveal?
 Can sharper pang from hate or scorn arise?— 45
 Yes! one more sharp there is that deeper lies,
 Which fond Esteem but mocks when he would heal.

<sup>1</sup> Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 2, s. 19.

Yet neither scorn nor hate did it devise,
 But sad compassion and atoning zeal!
 One pang more blighting-keen than hope betray'd! 50
 And this it is my woeful hap to feel,
 When, at her Brother's hest, the twin-born Maid
 With face averted and unsteady eyes,
 Her truant playmate's faded robe puts on;
 And inly shrinking from her own disguise 55
 Enacts the faery Boy that's lost and gone.
 O worse than all! O pang all pangs above
 Is Kindness counterfeiting absent Love!

DUTY SURVIVING SELF-LOVE<sup>1</sup>

THE ONLY SURE FRIEND OF DECLINING LIFE

A SOLILOQUY

UNCHANGED within, to see all changed without,
 Is a blank lot and hard to bear, no doubt.
 Yet why at others' wanings should'st thou fret?
 Then only might'st thou feel a just regret,

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1828: included in 1829 and 1834. The MS. of the first draft, dated Sept. 2, 1826, is preceded by the following introductory note:—

'QUESTION, ANSWER, AND SOLILOQUY.

And are you (said Alia to Constantius, on whose head sickness and sorrow had antedated Winter, ere yet the time of Vintage had passed), Are you the happier for your Philosophy? And the smile of Constantius was as the light from a purple cluster of the vine, gleaming through snowflakes, as he replied, The Boons of Philosophy are of higher worth, than what you, O Alia, mean by Happiness. But I will not seem to evade the question—Am I the happier for my Philosophy? The calmer at least and the less unhappy, answered Constantius, for it has enabled me to find that selfless Reason is the best Comforter, and only sure friend of declining Life. At this moment the sounds of a carriage followed by the usual bravura executed on the brazen knocker announced a morning visit: and Alia hastened to receive the party. Meantime the grey-haired philosopher, left to his own musings, continued playing with the thoughts that Alia and Alia's question had excited, till he murmured them to himself in half audible words, which at first casually, and then for the amusement of his ear, he punctuated with rhymes, without however conceiting that he had by these means changed them into poetry.'

4 When thy own body first the example set. MS. S. T. C.

Hadst thou withheld thy love or hid thy light 5
 In selfish forethought of neglect and slight.
 O wiselier then, from feeble yearnings freed,
 While, and on whom, thou may'st—shine on! nor heed
 Whether the object by reflected light
 Return thy radiance or absorb it quite: 10
 And though thou notest from thy safe recess
 Old Friends burn dim, like lamps in noisome air,
 Love them for what they are; nor love them less,
 Because to thee they are not what they were.

HOMELESS<sup>1</sup>

'O! CHRISTMAS Day, Oh! happy day!
 A foretaste from above,
 To him who hath a happy home
 And love returned from love!'

O! Christmas Day, O gloomy day, 5
 The barb in Memory's dart,
 To him who walks alone through Life,
 The desolate in heart.

REFLECTION ON THE ABOVE

Lynx amid moles! had I stood by thy bed, 5
Be of good cheer, meek soul! I would have said:
I see a hope spring from that humble fear.
All are not strong alike through storms to steer
Right onward. What? though dread of threatened death
And dungeon torture made thy hand and breath 10
Inconstant to the truth within thy heart!
That truth, from which, through fear, thou twice didst start,
Fear haply told thee, was a learned strife,
Or not so vital as to claim thy life:
And myriads had reached Heaven, who never knew 15
Where lay the difference 'twixt the false and true!

Ye, who secure 'mid trophies not your own,
Judge him who won them when he stood alone,
And proudly talk of recreant Berengare—
O first the age, and then the man compare! 20
That age how dark! congenial minds how rare!
No host of friends with kindred zeal did burn!
No throbbing hearts awaited his return!
Prostrate alike when prince and peasant fell,
He only disenchanted from the spell, 25
Like the weak worm that gems the starless night,
Moved in the scanty circlet of his light:
And was it strange if he withdrew the ray
That did but guide the night-birds to their prey?

The ascending day-star with a bolder eye 30
Hath lit each dew-drop on our trimmer lawn!
Yet not for this, if wise, shall we decry
The spots and struggles of the timid Dawn;
Lest so we tempt th' approaching Noon to scorn
The mists and painted vapours of our Morn. 35

<sup>1</sup> First published in Literary Souvenir of 1827, as footnote to title of the Lines Suggested by the Last Words of Berengarius: included in Literary Remains, 1836, i. 60: first collected in 1844.

<sup>2</sup> This quatrain was prefixed as a motto to 'Prose in Rhyme; and Epigrams, Moralities, and Things without a Name', the concluding section of 'Poems' in the edition of 1828, 1829, vol. ii, pp. 75-117. It was prefixed to 'Miscellaneous Poems' in 1834, vol. ii, pp. 55-152, and to 'Poems written in Later Life', 1852, pp. 319-78.

The emendation ἐπιθανοῦς (i. e. moribund) was suggested by the Reader of Macmillan's edition of 1893. Other alternatives, e.g. ἐπιδευοῦς (the lacking), to the word as misprinted in the Literary Souvenir have been suggested, but there can be no doubt that what Coleridge intended to imply was that he was near his end.

Greek motto: Ἔρως ἀεὶ λάλος MS. S. T. C.

1-4 IN many ways I own do we reveal.

The Presence of the Love we would conceal,

But in how many more do we let know

The absence of the Love we found would show. MS. S. T. C.

Kate has a favour to ask of you, Sir ; it is that you will repeat the ballad<sup>1</sup> that Mr. — sang so sweetly.

Friend. It is in Moore's Irish Melodies ; but I do not recollect the words distinctly. The moral of them, however, I take to be this:—

Love would remain the same if true,
When we were neither young nor new ;
Yea, and in all within the will that came,
By the same proofs would show itself the same.

Eliz. What are the lines you repeated from Beaumont and Fletcher, which my mother admired so much ? It begins with something about two vines so close that their tendrils intermingle.

Fri. You mean Charles' speech to Angelina, in The Elder Brother<sup>2</sup>.

We'll live together, like two neighbour vines,
Circling our souls and loves in one another !
We'll spring together, and we'll bear one fruit ;
One joy shall make us smile, and one grief mourn ;
One age go with us, and one hour of death
Shall close our eyes, and one grave make us happy.

Kath. A precious boon, that would go far to reconcile one to old age—this love—if true ! But is there any such true love ?

Fri. I hope so.

Kath. But do you believe it ?

Eliz. (cagerly). I am sure he does.

Fri. From a man turned of fifty, Katharine, I imagine, expects a less confident answer.

Kath. A more sincere one, perhaps.

Fri. Even though he should have obtained the nick-name of Improvisatore, by perpetrating charades and extempore verses at Christmas times ?

Eliz. Nay, but be serious.

Fri. Serious ! Doubtless. A grave personage of my years giving a Love-lecture to two young ladies, cannot well be otherwise. The difficulty, I suspect, would be for them to remain so. It will be asked whether I am not the 'elderly gentleman' who sate 'despairing beside a clear stream', with a willow for his wig-block.

1828, but the italics in the prose dialogue were not reproduced. They have been replaced in the text of the present issue. The title may have been suggested by L. E. L.'s Improvisatrice published in 1824.

Eliz. Say another word, and we will call it downright affectation.

Kath. No! we will be affronted, drop a courtesy, and ask pardon for our presumption in expecting that Mr. — would waste his sense on two insignificant girls.

Fri. Well, well, I will be serious. Hem! Now then commences the discourse; Mr. Moore's song being the text. Love, as distinguished from Friendship, on the one hand, and from the passion that too often usurps its name, on the other—

Lucius (Eliza's brother, who had just joined the trio, in a whisper to the Friend). But is not Love the union of both?

Fri. (aside to Lucius). He never loved who thinks so.

Eliz. Brother, we don't want you. There! Mrs. H. cannot arrange the flower vase without you. Thank you, Mrs. Hartman.

Luc. I'll have my revenge! I know what I will say!

Eliz. Off! Off! Now, dear Sir,—Love, you were saying—

Fri. Hush! Preaching, you mean, Eliza.

Eliz. (impatiently). Pshaw!

Fri. Well then, I was saying that Love, truly such, is itself not the most common thing in the world: and mutual love still less so. But that enduring personal attachment, so beautifully delineated by Erin's sweet melodist, and still more touchingly, perhaps, in the well-known ballad, 'John Anderson, my Jo, John,' in addition to a depth and constancy of character of no every-day occurrence, supposes a peculiar sensibility and tenderness of nature; a constitutional communicativeness and utterancy of heart and soul; a delight in the detail of sympathy, in the outward and visible signs of the sacrament within—to count, as it were, the pulses of the life of love. But above all, it supposes a soul which, even in the pride and summer-tide of life—even in the lustihood of health and strength, had felt oftenest and prized highest that which age cannot take away and which, in all our lovings, is the Love;—

Eliz. There is something here (pointing to her heart) that seems to understand you, but wants the word that would make it understand itself.

Kath. I, too, seem to feel what you mean. Interpret the feeling for us.

Fri. — I mean that willing sense of the insufficingness of the self for itself, which predisposes a generous nature to see, in the total being of another, the supplement and completion of its own ;—that quiet perpetual seeking which the presence of the beloved object modulates, not suspends, where the heart momentarily finds, and, finding, again seeks on ;—lastly, when ‘life’s changeful orb has pass’d the full’, a confirmed faith in the nobleness of humanity, thus brought home and pressed, as it were, to the very bosom of hourly experience ; it supposes, I say, a heartfelt reverence for worth, not the less deep because divested of its solemnity by habit, by familiarity, by mutual infirmities, and even by a feeling of modesty which will arise in delicate minds, when they are conscious of possessing the same or the correspondent excellence in their own characters. In short, there must be a mind, which, while it feels the beautiful and the excellent in the beloved as its own, and by right of love appropriates it, can call Goodness its Playfellow ; and dares make sport of time and infirmity, while, in the person of a thousand-foldly endeared partner, we feel for aged Virtue the caressing fondness that belongs to the Innocence of childhood, and repeat the same attentions and tender courtesies which had been dictated by the same affection to the same object when attired in feminine loveliness or in manly beauty.

Eliz. What a soothing—what an elevating idea !

Kath. If it be not only an idea.

Fri. At all events, these qualities which I have enumerated, are rarely found united in a single individual. How much more rare must it be, that two such individuals should meet together in this wide world under circumstances that admit of their union as Husband and Wife. A person may be highly estimable on the whole, nay, amiable as neighbour, friend, housemate—in short, in all the concentric circles of attachment save only the last and inmost ; and yet from how many causes be estranged from the highest perfection in this ! Pride, coldness, or fastidiousness of nature, worldly cares, an anxious or ambitious disposition, a passion for display, a sullen temper,—one or the other—too often proves ‘the dead fly in the compost of spices’, and any one is enough to unfit it for the precious balm of unction. For some mighty good sort of people, too, there is not seldom a sort of solemn saturnine, or, if you will, ursine vanity, that keeps itself alive by sucking the paws of its own self-importance. And as this high sense, or rather sensation of their own value is, for the most part, grounded on negative qualities, so they have no better means of preserving the same but by negatives—that is, by not doing or saying any thing, that might be put down for fond, silly, or nonsensical;—or (to use their own phrase) by never forgetting themselves, which some of their acquaintance are uncharitable enough to think the most worthless object they could be employed in remembering.

Eliz. (in answer to a whisper from Katharine). To a hair! He must have sate for it himself. Save me from such folks! But they are out of the question.

Fri. True! but the same effect is produced in thousands by the too general insensibility to a very important truth; this, namely, that the MISERY of human life is made up of large masses, each separated from the other by certain intervals. One year, the death of a child; years after, a failure in trade; after another longer or shorter interval, a daughter may have married unhappily;—in all but the singularly unfortunate, the integral parts that compose the sum total of the unhappiness of a man's life, are easily counted, and distinctly remembered. The HAPPINESS of life, on the contrary, is made up of minute fractions—the little, soon-forgotten charities of a kiss, a smile, a kind look, a heartfelt compliment in the disguise of playful raillery, and the countless other infinitesimals of pleasurable thought and genial feeling.

Kath. Well, Sir; you have said quite enough to make me despair of finding a 'John Anderson, my Jo, John', with whom to totter down the hill of life.

Fri. Not so! Good men are not, I trust, so much scarcer than good women, but that what another would find in you, you may hope to find in another. But well, however, may that boon be rare, the possession of which would be more than an adequate reward for the rarest virtue.

Eliz. Surely, he, who has described it so well, must have possessed it?

Fri. If he were worthy to have possessed it, and had believingly anticipated and not found it, how bitter the disappointment!

(Then, after a pause of a few minutes),

ANSWER, ex improvise

Yes, yes! that boon, life's richest treat
He had, or fancied that he had;
Say, 'twas but in his own conceit—
The fancy made him glad!

Crown of his cup, and garnish of his dish! 5
 The boon, prefigured in his earliest wish,
 The fair fulfilment of his poesy,
 When his young heart first yearn'd for sympathy!
 But e'en the meteor offspring of the brain
           Unnourished wane; 10
 Faith asks her daily bread,
 And Fancy must be fed!
 Now so it chanced—from wet or dry,
 It boots not how—I know not why—
 She missed her wonted food; and quickly 15
 Poor Fancy stagger'd and grew sickly.
 Then came a restless state, 'twixt yea and nay,
 His faith was fix'd, his heart all ebb and flow;
 Or like a bark, in some half-shelter'd bay,
 Above its anchor driving to and fro. 20

That boon, which but to have possess'd
 In a belief, gave life a zest—
 Uncertain both what it had been,
 And if by error lost, or luck;
 And what it was;—an evergreen 25
 Which some insidious blight had struck,
 Or annual flower, which, past its blow,
 No vernal spell shall e'er revive;
 Uncertain, and afraid to know,
       Doubts toss'd him to and fro: 30
 Hope keeping Love, Love Hope alive,
 Like babes bewildered in a snow,
 That cling and huddle from the cold
 In hollow tree or ruin'd fold.

Those sparkling colours, once his boast 35
       Fading, one by one away,
 Thin and hueless as a ghost,
       Poor Fancy on her sick bed lay;
 Ill at distance, worse when near,
 Telling her dreams to jealous Fear! 40
 Where was it then, the sociable sprite
 That crown'd the Poet's cup and deck'd his dish!
 Poor shadow cast from an unsteady wish,
 Itself a substance by no other right
 But that it intercepted Reason's light; 45

It dimm'd his eye, it darken'd on his brow,
A peevish mood, a tedious time, I trow!

Thank Heaven! 'tis not so now.

O bliss of blissful hours!

The boon of Heaven's decreeing, 50

While yet in Eden's bowers

Dwelt the first husband and his sinless mate!

The one sweet plant, which, piteous Heaven agreeing,

They bore with them thro' Eden's closing gate!

Of life's gay summer tide the sovran Rose! 55

Late autumn's Amaranth, that more fragrant blows

When Passion's flowers all fall or fade;

If this were ever his, in outward being,

Or but his own true love's projected shade,

Now that at length by certain proof he knows, 60

That whether real or a magic show,

Whate'er it was, it is no longer so;

Though heart be lonesome, Hope laid low,

Yet, Lady! deem him not unblest:

The certainty that struck Hope dead, 65

Hath left Contentment in her stead:

And that is next to Best!

TO MARY PRIDHAM<sup>1</sup>

[AFTERWARDS MRS. DERWENT COLERIDGE]

DEAR tho' unseen! tho' I have left behind
Life's gayer views and all that stirs the mind,
Now I revive, Hope making a new start,
Since I have heard with most believing heart,
That all my glad eyes would grow bright to see, 5
My Derwent hath found realiz'd in thee,

ALICE DU CLOS<sup>1</sup>

OR THE FORKED TONGUE

A BALLAD

'One word with two meanings is the traitor's shield and shaft: and a slit tongue be his blazon!'—Caucasian Proverb.

'THE Sun is not yet risen,
 But the dawn lies red on the dew:
 Lord Julian has stolen from the hunters away,
 Is seeking, Lady! for you.
 Put on your dress of green, 5
 Your buskins and your quiver;
 Lord Julian is a hasty man,
 Long waiting brook'd he never.
 I dare not doubt him, that he means
 To wed you on a day, 10
 Your lord and master for to be,
 And you his lady gay.
 O Lady! throw your book aside!
 I would not that my Lord should chide.'

Thus spake Sir Hugh the vassal knight 15
 To Alice, child of old Du Clos,

<sup>1</sup> First published in 1834. The date of composition cannot be ascertained. The MS., an early if not a first draft, is certainly of late date. The water-marks of the paper (Bath Post) are 1822 and 1828. There is a second draft (MS. b) of lines 97-112. Line 37, 'Dan Ovid's mazy tale of loves,' may be compared with line 100 of The Garden of Boccaccio, 'Peers Ovid's Holy Book of Love's sweet smart,' and it is probable that Alice Du Clos was written about the same time, 1828-9. In line 91 'Ellen' is no doubt a slip of the pen for 'Alice'.

Title] Alice Du Clos: or &amp;c. MS.

As spotless fair, as airy light
 As that moon-shiny doe,
 The gold star on its brow, her sire's ancestral crest
 For ere the lark had left his nest, 20
 She in the garden bower below
 Sate loosely wrapt in maiden white,
 Her face half drooping from the sight,
 A snow-drop on a tuft of snow!

O close your eyes, and strive to see 25
 The studious maid, with book on knee,—
 Ah! earliest-open'd flower;
 While yet with keen unblunted light
 The morning star shone opposite
 The lattice of her bower— 30
 Alone of all the starry host,
 As if in prideful scorn
 Of flight and fear he stay'd behind,
 To brave th' advancing morn.

O! Alice could read passing well, 35
 And she was conning then
 Dan Ovid's mazy tale of loves,
 And gods, and beasts, and men.

The vassal's speech, his taunting vein,
 It thrill'd like venom thro' her brain; 40
 Yet never from the book
 She rais'd her head, nor did she deign
 The knight a single look.

'Off, traitor friend! how dar'st thou fix
 Thy wanton gaze on me? 45
 And why, against my earnest suit,
 Does Julian send by thee?

19-25 Her sires had chosen for their Crest
 A star atwixt its brow,
 For she, already up and drest
 Sate in the garden bower below.
 For she enwrapt in } Maiden white

'Go, tell thy Lord, that slow is sure:
 Fair speed his shafts to-day!
 I follow here a stronger lure,
 And chase a gentler prey.'

50

She said: and with a baleful smile
 The vassal knight reel'd off—
 Like a huge billow from a bark
 Toil'd in the deep sea-trough,
 That shouldering sideways in mid plunge,
 Is travers'd by a flash.
 And staggering onward, leaves the ear
 With dull and distant crash.

55

And Alice sate with troubled mien
 A moment; for the scoff was keen,
 And thro' her veins did shiver!
 Then rose and donn'd her dress of green,
 Her buskins and her quiver.

60

There stands the flow'ring may-thorn tree!
 From thro' the veiling mist you see
 The black and shadowy stem;—
 Smit by the sun the mist in glee
 Dissolves to lightsome jewelry—
 Each blossom hath its gem!

With tear-drop glittering to a smile,
 The gay maid on the garden-stile
 Mimics the hunter's shout.
 'Hip! Florian, hip! To horse, to horse!
 Go, bring the palfrey out.

75

'My Julian's out with all his clan,
 And, bonny boy, you wis,
 Lord Julian is a hasty man,
 Who comes late, comes amiss.'

Now Florian was a stripling squire,
 A gallant boy of Spain,
 That toss'd his head in joy and pride,
 Behind his Lady fair to ride,
 But blush'd to hold her train.

80

The huntress is in her dress of green,—
 And forth they go; she with her bow,
 Her buskins and her quiver!—
 The squire—no younger e'er was seen—
 With restless arm and laughing een,
 He makes his javelin quiver.

85

90

And had not Ellen stay'd the race,
 And stopp'd to see, a moment's space,
 The whole great globe of light
 Give the last parting kiss-like touch
 To the eastern ridge, it lack'd not much,
 They had o'erta'en the knight.

95

It chanced that up the covert lane,
 Where Julian waiting stood,
 A neighbour knight prick'd on to join
 The huntsmen in the wood.

100

And with him must Lord Julian go,
 Tho' with an anger'd mind:
 Betroth'd not wedded to his bride,
 In vain he sought, 'twixt shame and pride,
 Excuse to stay behind.

 Alas! alas! and well-a-day!
 It grieves me sore to think, to say, 110
 That names so seldom meet with Love,
 Yet Love wants courage without a name!

Straight from the forest's skirt the trees
 O'er-branching, made an aisle,
 Where hermit old might pace and chaunt 115
 As in a minster's pile.

From underneath its leafy screen,
 And from the twilight shade,
 You pass at once into a green,
 A green and lightsome glade. 120

And there Lord Julian sate on steed;
 Behind him, in a round,
 Stood knight and squire, and menial train;
 Against the leash the greyhounds strain;
 The horses paw'd the ground. 125

When up the alley green, Sir Hugh Spurr'd in upon the sward,
 And mute, without a word, did he
 Fall in behind his lord.

Lord Julian turn'd his steed half round,— 130
 'What! doth not Alice deign
 To accept your loving convoy, knight?
 Or doth she fear our woodland sleight,
 And join us on the plain?'

With stifled tones the knight replied, 135
 And look'd askance on either side,—
 'Nay, let the hunt proceed!—
 The Lady's message that I bear,
 I guess would scantily please your ear,

In an unwelcome hour;
And found the daughter of Du Clos
Within the lattic'd bower.

'But hush! the rest may wait. If lost, 150
No great loss, I divine;
And idle words will better suit
A fair maid's lips than mine.'

'God's wrath! speak out, man,' Julian cried,
O'ermaster'd by the sudden smart;—
And feigning wrath, sharp, blunt, and rude, 155
The knight his subtle shift pursued.—
'Scowl not at me; command my skill,
To lure your hawk back, if you will,
But not a woman's heart.

"Go! (said she) tell him,—slow is sure; 160
Fair speed his shafts to-day!
I follow here a stronger lure,
And chase a gentler prey."

'The game, pardie, was full in sight,
That then did, if I saw aright, 165
The fair dame's eyes engage;
For turning, as I took my ways,
I saw them fix'd with steadfast gaze
Full on her wanton page.'

The last word of the traitor knight 170
It had but entered Julian's ear,—

As answering to a voice,
 That seems at once to laugh and chide—
 'Not mine, dear mistress,' still he cried,
 'Tis this mad filly's choice.' 180

With sudden bound, beyond the boy,
 See! see! that face of hope and joy,
 That regal front! those cheeks aglow!
 Thou needed'st but the crescent sheen,
 A quiver'd Dian to have been, 185
 Thou lovely child of old Du Clos!

Dark as a dream Lord Julian stood,
 Swift as a dream, from forth the wood,
 Sprang on the plighted Maid!
 With fatal aim, and frantic force, 190
 The shaft was hurl'd!—a lifeless corse,
 Fair Alice from her vaulting horse,
 Lies bleeding on the glade.

THE GARDEN OF BOCCACCIO <sup>1</sup>

OF late, in one of those most weary hours,
 When life seems emptied of all genial powers,
 A dreary mood, which he who ne'er has known
 May bless his happy lot, I sate alone;
 And, from the numbing spell to win relief, 5
 Call'd on the Past for thought of glee or grief.
 In vain! bereft alike of grief and glee,
 I sate and cow'r'd o'er my own vacancy!
 And as I watch'd the dull continuous ache,
 Which, all else slumb'ring, seem'd alone to wake; 10
 O Friend<sup>2</sup>! long wont to notice yet conceal,
 And soothe by silence what words cannot heal,
 I but half saw that quiet hand of thine
 Place on my desk this exquisite design.
 Boccaccio's Garden and its faery, 15
 The love, the joyaunce, and the gallantry!
 An Idyll, with Boccaccio's spirit warm,
 Framed in the silent poesy of form.

Like flocks adown a newly-bathéd steep
 Emerging from a mist: or like a stream 20
 Of music soft that not dispels the sleep,
 But casts in happier moulds the slumberer's dream,
 Gazed by an idle eye with silent might
 The picture stole upon my inward sight.
 A tremulous warmth crept gradual o'er my chest, 25
 As though an infant's finger touch'd my breast.
 And one by one (I know not whence) were brought
 All spirits of power that most had stirr'd my thought
 In selfless boyhood, on a new world tost
 Of wonder, and in its own fancies lost; 30
 Or charm'd my youth, that, kindled from above,
 Loved ere it loved, and sought a form for love;
 Or lent a lustre to the earnest scan
 Of manhood, musing what and whence is man!
 Wild strain of Scalds, that in the sea-worn caves 35
 Rehearsed their war-spell to the winds and waves;
 Or fateful hymn of those prophetic maids,

<sup>2</sup> Mrs. Gillman.

That call'd on Hertha in deep forest glades ;
 Or minstrel lay, that cheer'd the baron's feast ;
 Or rhyme of city pomp, of monk and priest, 40
 Judge, mayor, and many a guild in long array,
 To high-church pacing on the great saint's day :
 And many a verse which to myself I sang,
 That woke the tear, yet stole away the pang
 Of hopes, which in lamenting I renew'd : 45
 And last, a matron now, of sober mien,
 Yet radiant still and with no earthly sheen,
 Whom as a faery child my childhood woo'd
 Even in my dawn of thought—Philosophy ;
 Though then unconscious of herself, pardie, 50
 She bore no other name than Poesy ;
 And, like a gift from heaven, in life's glee,
 That had but newly left a mother's knee,
 Prattled and play'd with bird and flower, and stone,
 As if with elfin playfellows well known, 55
 And life reveal'd to innocence alone.

Thanks, gentle artist ! now I can descry
 Thy fair creation with a mastering eye,
 And all awake ! And now in fix'd gaze stand,
 Now wander through the Eden of thy hand ; 60
 Praise the green arches, on the fountain clear
 See fragment shadows of the crossing deer ;
 And with that serviceable nymph I stoop,
 The crystal, from its restless pool, to scoop.
 I see no longer ! I myself am there, 65
 Sit on the ground-sward, and the banquet share.
 'Tis I, that sweep that lute's love-echoing strings,
 And gaze upon the maid who gazing sings :
 Or pause and listen to the tinkling bells
 From the high tower, and think that there she dwells.
 With old Boccaccio's soul I stand possest, 71
 And breathe an air like life, that swells my chest.
 The brightness of the world, O thou once free,

49-56

And there was young Philosophy
 Unconscious of herself, pardie ;
 And now she hight poesy,
 And like a child in playful glee
 Prattles and plays with flower and stone,
 As youth's fairy playfellows
 Revealed to Innocence alone. MS. S. T. C.

And always fair, rare land of courtesy!
 O Florence! with the Tuscan fields and hills 75
 And famous Arno, fed with all their rills;
 Thou brightest star of star-bright Italy!
 Rich, ornate, populous,—all treasures thine,
 The golden corn, the olive, and the vine.
 Fair cities, gallant mansions, castles old, 80
 And forests, where beside his leafy hold
 The sullen boar hath heard the distant horn,
 And whets his tusks against the gnarléd thorn;
 Palladian palace with its storied halls;
 Fountains, where Love lies listening to their falls; 85
 Gardens, where flings the bridge its airy span,
 And Nature makes her happy home with man;
 Where many a gorgeous flower is duly fed
 With its own rill, on its own spangled bed,
 And wreathes the marble urn, or leans its head, 90
 A mimic mourner, that with veil withdrawn
 Weeps liquid gems, the presents of the dawn;—

<sup>2</sup> I know few more striking or more interesting proofs of the overwhelming influence which the study of the Greek and Roman classics exercised on the judgments, feelings, and imaginations of the literati of Europe at the commencement of the restoration of literature, than the passage in the Filicopo of Boccaccio, where the sage instructor, Racheo, as soon as the young prince and the beautiful girl Biancifiore had learned their letters, sets them to study the Holy Book, Ovid's Art of Love. 'Incominciò Racheo a mettere il suo [officio] in esecuzione con intera sollecitudine. E loro, in breve tempo, insegnato a conoscer le lettere, fece leggere il santo libro d'Ovvidio, [!! S. T. C.] nel quale il sommo poeta mostra, come i santi fuochi di Venere si debbano ne' freddi cuori con sollecitudine accendere.' O all-enjoying and all-blending sage,
 Long be it mine to con thy mazy page,
 Where, half conceal'd, the eye of fancy views
 Fauns, nymphs, and wingéd saints, all gracious to thy muse!

Still in thy garden let me watch their pranks, 105
 And see in Dian's vest between the ranks
 Of the trim vines, some maid that half believes
 The vestal fires, of which her lover grieves,
 With that sly satyr peeping through the leaves!

LOVE, HOPE, AND PATIENCE IN EDUCATION<sup>1</sup>

O'ER wayward childhood would'st thou hold firm rule,
 And sun thee in the light of happy faces;
 Love, Hope, and Patience, these must be thy graces,
 And in thine own heart let them first keep school.
 For as old Atlas on his broad neck places 5
 Heaven's starry globe, and there sustains it;—so
 Do these upbear the little world below
 Of Education,—Patience, Love, and Hope.

<sup>1</sup> First published in The Keepsake for 1830: included in P. W., 1834, iii. 331. An MS. version was forwarded to W. Sotheby in an unpublished letter of July 12, 1829. A second MS., dated July 1, 1829, is inscribed in an album now in the Editor's possession, which belonged to Miss Emily Trevenen (the author of Little Derwent's Breakfast, 1839). With regard to the variant of ll. 24–6, vide infra, Coleridge writes (Letter of July 12, 1829):—‘They were struck out by the author, not because he thought them bad lines in themselves (quamvis Della Cruscam fortasse nimis redolere videantur), but because they diverted and retarded the stream of the thought, and injured the organic unity of the composition. Più nel uno is Francesco de Sallaz' brief and happy definition of the beautiful, and the shorter the poem the more indispensable is it that the Più should not overlay the Uno, that the unity should be evident. But to sacrifice the gratification, the sting of pleasure, from a fine passage to the satisfaction, the sense of complacency arising from the contemplation of a symmetrical Whole is among the last conquests achieved by men of genial powers.’

Methinks, I see them group'd in seemly show,
 The straiten'd arms upraised, the palms aslope,

 Distinctly blend, like snow emboss'd in snow.

10

O part them never! If Hope prostrate lie,
 Love too will sink and die.

But Love is subtle, and doth proof derive
 From her own life that Hope is yet alive;
 And bending o'er, with soul-transfusing eyes,
 And the soft murmurs of the mother dove,
 Woos back the fleeting spirit, and half supplies;—
 Thus Love repays to Hope what Hope first gave to Love.

 When overtask'd at length

 Stands the mute sister, Patience, nothing loth,
 And both supporting does the work of both.

LINES<sup>1</sup>

WRITTEN IN COMMONPLACE BOOK OF MISS BARBOUR, DAUGHTER OF THE MINISTER OF THE U.S.A. TO ENGLAND

CHILD of my muse! in Barbour's gentle hand
Go cross the main: thou seek'st no foreign land:
'Tis not the clod beneath our feet we name
Our country. Each heaven-sanctioned tie the same,
Laws, manners, language, faith, ancestral blood, 5
Domestic honour, awe of womanhood:—
With kindling pride thou wilt rejoice to see
Britain with elbow-room and doubly free!
Go seek thy countrymen! and if one scar
Still linger of that fratricidal war, 10
Look to the maid who brings thee from afar;
Be thou the olive-leaf and she the dove,
And say, I greet thee with a brother's love!

LOVE AND FRIENDSHIP OPPOSITE<sup>1</sup>

HER attachment may differ from yours in degree,
 Provided they are both of one kind;
 But Friendship, how tender so ever it be,
 Gives no accord to Love, however refined.
 Love, that meets not with Love, its true nature revealing, 5
 Grows ashamed of itself, and demurs:
 If you cannot lift hers up to your state of feeling,
 You must lower down your state to hers.

NOT AT HOME<sup>2</sup>

THAT Jealousy may rule a mind
 Where Love could never be
 I know; but ne'er expect to find
 Love without Jealousy.

She has a strange cast in her ee,
 A swart sour-visaged maid—
 But yet Love's own twin-sister she
 His house-mate and his shade.

Ask for her and she'll be denied:—
 What then? they only mean
 Their mistress has lain down to sleep,
 And can't just then be seen.

A tender love so pure from earthly leaven,
 That I unneth the fancy might control,
 'Twas my own spirit newly come from heaven, 5
 Wooing its gentle way into my soul!
 But ah! the change—It had not stirr'd, and yet—
 Alas! that change how fain would I forget!
 That shrinking back, like one that had mistook!
 That weary, wandering, disavowing look! 10
 'Twas all another, feature, look, and frame,
 And still, methought, I knew, it was the same!

This riddling tale, to what does it belong?
 Is't history? vision? or an idle song?
 Or rather say at once, within what space 15
 Of time this wild disastrous change took place?

Call it a moment's work (and such it seems)

CHARITY IN THOUGHT<sup>1</sup>

To praise men as good, and to take them for such,

HUMILITY THE MOTHER OF CHARITY<sup>2</sup>

SELF-KNOWLEDGE <sup>2</sup>

—Ε coelo descendit γνῶθι σεαυτόν.—JUVENAL, xi. 27.

Γνῶθι σεαυτόν!—and is this the prime
And heaven-sprung adage of the olden time!—
Say, canst thou make thyself?—Learn first that trade;—
Haply thou mayst know what thyself had made.
What hast thou, Man, that thou dar’st call thine own?— 5
What is there in thee, Man, that can be known?—
Dark fluxion, all unfixable by thought,
A phantom dim of past and future wrought,
Vain sister of the worm,—life, death, soul, clod—
Ignore thyself, and strive to know thy God! 10

FORBEARANCE<sup>1</sup>

Beareth all things.—1 Cor. xiii. 7.

GENTLY I took that which ungently came,<sup>2</sup>
 And without scorn forgave:—Do thou the same.
 A wrong done to thee think a cat's-eye spark
 Thou wouldst not see, were not thine own heart dark.
 Thine own keen sense of wrong that thirsts for sin, 5
 Fear that—the spark self-kindled from within,
 Which blown upon will blind thee with its glare,
 Or smother'd stifle thee with noisome air.
 Clap on the extinguisher, pull up the blinds,
 And soon the ventilated spirit finds 10
 Its natural daylight. If a foe have kenn'd,
 Or worse than foe, an alienated friend,
 A rib of dry rot in thy ship's stout side,
 Think it God's message, and in humble pride
 With heart of oak replace it;—thine the gains— 15
 Give him the rotten timber for his pains!

<sup>3</sup> Lines 1-28 were first published in Friendship's Offering for 1834, signed and dated 'S. T. Coleridge, August 1833': included in P. W., 1834. Lines 29-32 were first added as 'L'Envoy' in 1852. J. D. Campbell in a note to this poem (1893, p. 644) prints an expanded version of these lines, which were composed on April 24, 1824, 'as Coleridge says, "without taking my pen off the paper"'. The same lines were sent in a letter to Allsop, April 27, 1824 (Letters, &c., 1836, ii. 174-5) with a single variant (line 3) 'uneclips'd' for 'unperturb'd'. In the draft of April 24, four lines were added, and of these an alternative version was published in P. W., 1834, with the heading 'Desire' (vide ante, p. 485). For an earlier draft in S. T. C.'s handwriting vide Appendices of this edition.

Who sits beside a ruin'd well,
 Where the shy sand-asps bask and swell;
 And now he hangs his agéd head aslant, 5
 And listens for a human sound—in vain!
 And now the aid, which Heaven alone can grant,
 Upturns his eyeless face from Heaven to gain;—
 Even thus, in vacant mood, one sultry hour,
 Resting my eye upon a drooping plant, 10
 With brow low-bent, within my garden-bower,
 I sate upon the couch of camomile;
 And—whether 'twas a transient sleep, perchance,
 Flitted across the idle brain, the while
 I watch'd the sickly calm with aimless scope, 15
 In my own heart; or that, indeed a trance,
 Turn'd my eye inward—thee, O genial Hope,
 Love's elder sister! thee did I behold,
 Drest as a bridesmaid, but all pale and cold,
 With roseless cheek, all pale and cold and dim, 20
 Lie lifeless at my feet!
 And then came Love, a sylph in bridal trim,
 And stood beside my seat;
 She bent, and kiss'd her sister's lips,
 As she was wont to do;— 25
 Alas! 'twas but a chilling breath
 Woke just enough of life in death
 To make Hope die anew.

H. Green*: (d) 'Epitaph in Hornsey Churchyard. Hic jacet S. T. C. Grew (1): (e) 'Etesi's (sic) Epitaph,' (and below (e)) 'Inscription on the Tombstone of one not unknown; yet more commonly known by the Initials of his Name than by the Name itself.' Grew (2): (f) 'Esteese's αυτοεπιτάφιον.' Note in Poole's Todtentanz.

From the letter to Mrs. Aders it appears that Coleridge did not contemplate the epitaph being inscribed on his tombstone, but that he intended it to be printed 'in letters of a distinctly visible and legible size' on the outline of a tombstone to be engraved as a vignette to be published in a magazine, or to illustrate the last page of his 'Miscellaneous Poems' in the second volume of his Poetical Works. It would seem that the artist, Miss Denman, had included in her sketch of the vignette the figure of a Muse, and to this Coleridge objects:—'A rude old yew-tree, or a mountain ash, with a grave or two, or any other characteristic of a village church-yard,—such a hint of a landscape was all I meant; but if any figure rather than of an elderly man, thoughtful with quiet tears upon his cheek.' Letters of S. T. C., 1895, ii. 770.

O'ER the raised earth the gales of evening sigh;
And, see, a daisy peeps upon its slope!
I wipe the dimming waters from mine eye;
Even on the cold grave lights the Cherub Hope.<sup>2</sup>

? 1787. First published in Poems, 1852 (p. 379, Note 1). First collected 1893.

<sup>1</sup> The following 'Fragments', numbered 1-63, consist of a few translations and versicles inserted by Coleridge in his various prose works, and a larger number of fragments, properly so called, which were published from MS. sources in 1893, or are now published for the first time. These fragments are taken exclusively from Coleridge's Notebooks (the source of Anima Poeta, 1895), and were collected, transcribed, and dated by the present Editor for publication in 1893. The fragments now published for the first time were either not used by J. D. Campbell in 1893, or had not been discovered or transcribed. The very slight emendations of the text are due to the fact that Mr. Campbell printed from copies, and that the collection as a whole has now for the second time been collated with the original MSS. Fragments numbered 64, 96, 98, 111, 113, in P. W., 1893, are quotations from the plays and poems of William Cartwright (1611-1643). They are not included in the present issue. Fragments 56, 58, 59, 61, 63, 67, 80, 81, 83, 88, 91, 93, 94, 117-120, are inserted in the text or among 'Jeux d'Esprit', or under other headings. The chronological order is for the most part conjectural, and differs from that suggested in 1893. It must be borne in mind that the entries in Coleridge's Notebooks are not continuous, and that the additional matter in prose or verse was inserted from time to time, wherever a page or half a page was not filled up. It follows that the context is an uncertain guide to the date of any given entry. Pains have been taken to exclude quotations from older writers, which Coleridge neither claimed nor intended to claim for his own, but it is possible that two or three of these fragments of verse are not original.

<sup>2</sup> This quatrain, described as 'The concluding stanza of an Elegy on a Lady who died in Early Youth', is from part of a memorandum in S. T. C.'s handwriting headed 'Relics of my School-boy Muse; i.e. fragments of poems composed before my fifteenth year'. It follows First Advent of Love, 'O fair is Love's first hope,' &c. (vide ante, p. 443), and is compared with Age—a stanza written forty years later than the preceding—'Dew-drops are the gems of morning,' &c. (p. 440).

ANOTHER VERSION.

O'er her piled grave the gale of evening sighs,
And flowers will grow upon its grassy slope,
I wipe the dimming waters from mine eye
Even on the cold grave dwells the Cherub Hope.

THE Moon, how definite its orb !
 Yet gaze again, and with a steady gaze—
 'Tis there indeed,—but where is it not ?—
 It is suffused o'er all the sapphire Heaven,
 Trees, herbage, snake-like stream, unwrinkled Lake,
 Whose very murmur does of it partake !

<sup>1</sup> These two lines, slightly altered, were afterwards included in Alice du Clos (ll. 111, 112), ante, p. 473.

And low and close the broad smooth mountain is more a thing of Heaven than when distinct by one dim shade, and yet undivided from the universal cloud in which it towers infinite in height.

A BECK IN WINTER<sup>1</sup>

OVER the broad, the shallow, rapid stream,
The Alder, a vast hollow Trunk, and ribb'd—
All mossy green with mosses manifold,
And ferns still waving in the river-breeze

<sup>1</sup> The lines are an attempt to reduce to blank verse one of many minute descriptions of natural objects and scenic effects. The concluding lines are illegible.

Sent out, like fingers, five projecting trunks—
 The shortest twice 6 (?) of a tall man's strides.—
 One curving upward in its middle growth
 Rose straight with grove of twigs—a pollard tree:—
 The rest more backward, gradual in descent—
 One in the brook and one befoamed its waters:
 One ran along the bank in the elk-like head
 And pomp of antlers—

FRAGMENT OF AN ODE ON NAPOLEON

O'ERHUNG with yew, midway the Muses mount
 From thy sweet murmurs far, O Hippocrene!
 Turbid and black upboils an angry fount
 Tossing its shatter'd foam in vengeful spleen—
 Phlegethon's rage Cocytus' wailings hoarse
 Alternate now, now mixt, made known its headlong course:
 Thither with terror stricken and surprise,
 (For sure such haunts were ne'er to Muse's choice)
 Euterpe led me. Mute with asking eyes
 I stood expectant of her heavenly voice.
 Her voice entranc'd my terror and made flow
 In a rude understrain the maniac fount below.
 'Whene'er (the Goddess said) abhorr'd of Jove
 Usurping Power his hands in blood imbrues—

His own fair countenance, his kingly forehead,
 His tender smiles, Love's day-dawn on his lips,
 Put on such heavenly, spiritual light,
 At the same moment in his steadfast eye
 Were Virtue's native crest, th' innocent soul's
 Unconscious meek self-heraldry,—to man
 Genial, and pleasant to his guardian angel.
 He suffer'd nor complain'd;—though oft with tears

He mourn'd th' oppression of his helpless brethren,—
 And sometimes with a deeper holier grief
 Mourn'd for the oppressor—but this in sabbath hours—
 A solemn grief, that like a cloud at sunset,
 Was but the veil of inward meditation
 Pierced thro' and saturate with the intellectual rays

[ARS POETICA]

IN the two following lines, for instance, there is nothing objectionable, nothing which would preclude them from forming, in their proper place, part of a descriptive poem:—

‘Behold yon row of pines, that shorn and bow’d
 Bend from the sea-blast, seen at twilight eve.’

But with a small alteration of rhythm, the same words would be equally in their place in a book of topography, or in a descriptive tour. The same image will rise into a semblance of poetry if thus conveyed:—

‘Yon row of bleak and visionary pines,
 By twilight-glimpse discerned, mark! how they flee
 From the fierce sea-blast, all their tresses wild
 Streaming before them.’

What God? what Hero?

What Man shall we celebrate?

Truly Pisa indeed is of Jove,

But the Olympiad (or the Olympic games) did Hercules

The first-fruits of the spoils of war.

But Theron for the four-horsed car

That bore victory to him.

TRANSLATION OF A FRAGMENT OF HERACLITUS<sup>1</sup>

Not hers

To win the sense by words of rhetoric,
 Lip-blossoms breathing perishable sweets;
 But by the power of the informing Word
 Roll sounding onward through a thousand years
 Her deep prophetic bodements.

1816. First published in Lit. Rem., iii. 418, 419. First collected P. and D. W., 1877, ii. 367.

'So the Sibyl was noted by Heraclitus as μαυνομένη στόματι γελαστά καὶ ἀκαλλώπιστα φθεγγομένη, as one speaking ridiculous and unseemly speeches with her furious mouth.' The fragment is misquoted and misunderstood: for γελαστά, etc., should be ἀμύριστα unperfumed, inornate lays, not redolent of art.—Render it thus:

Not her's, etc.

Στόματι μαυνομένη is 'with ecstatic mouth'.

J. D. Campbell in a note to this Fragment (P. W., 1893, pp. 464-5) quotes the 'following prose translation of the same passage', from Coleridge's Statesman's Manual (1816, p. 132): 'Multiscience (or a variety and quantity of acquired knowledge) does not test intelligence. But the Sibyll with wild enthusiastic mirth shrilling forth unmirthful, inornate and unperfumed truths, reaches to a thousand years with her voice through the power of God.'

The prose translation is an amalgam of two fragments. The first sentence is quoted by Diogenes Laertius, ix. 1: the second by Plutarch, de Pyth. orac. 6, p. 377.

I STAND alone, nor tho' my heart should break,

Here I stand, a hopeless man and sad,

And strange it were indeed, could I be glad
Remembering her, my soul's betrothed wife.

Was e'er to me so gracious and so good.
Her loss is to my Heart, like the Heart's blood.

I [S. T. C.] find the following lines among my papers, in my own writing, but whether an unfinished fragment, or a contribution to some friend's production, I know not:—

WHAT boots to tell how o'er his grave
 She wept, that would have died to save;
 Little they know the heart, who deem
 Her sorrow but an infant's dream
 Of transient love begotten;
 A passing gale, that as it blows
 Just shakes the ripe drop from the rose—
 That dies and is forgotten.

O Woman! nurse of hopes and fears,
 All lovely in thy spring of years,
 Thy soul in blameless mirth possessing,
 Most lovely in affliction's tears,

THE THREE SORTS OF FRIENDS

THOUGH friendships differ endless in degree,
 The sorts, methinks, may be reduced to three.
 Acquaintance many, and Conquaintance few;
 But for Inquaintance I know only two—
 The friend I've mourned with, and the maid I woo!

MY DEAR GILLMAN—The ground and matériel of this division of one's friends into ac, con and inquaintance, was given by Hartley Coleridge when he was scarcely five years old [1801]. On some one asking him if Anny Sealy (a little girl he went to school with) was an acquaintance of his, he replied, very fervently pressing his right hand on his heart, 'No, she is an inquaintance!' 'Well! 'tis a father's tale'; and the recollection soothes your old friend and inquaintance, S. T. COLERIDGE.

BARON GUELPH OF ADELSTAN. A FRAGMENT

For ever in the world of Fame
 We live and yet abide the same:
 Clouds may intercept our rays,
 Or desert Lands reflect our blaze.

The beauteous Month of May began,
 And all was Mirth and Sport;
 When Baron Guelph of Adelstan
 Took leave and left the Court.

From Fête and Rout and Opera far
 The full town he forsook,
 And changed his wand and golden star
 For Shepherd's Crown and Crook.

The knotted net of light and shade
 Beneath the budding tree,
 A sweeter day-bed for him made
 Than Couch and Canopy.

In copse or lane, as Choice or Chance
 Might lead him was he seen;
 And join'd at eve the village dance
 Upon the village green.

Nor endless—

1

AN EXPERIMENT FOR A METRE

I HEARD a voice pealing loud triumph to-day :
The voice of the Triumph, O Freedom, was thine !
Sumptuous Tyranny challeng'd the fray,<sup>2</sup>
'Drunk with Idolatry, drunk with wine.'
Whose could the Triumph be Freedom but thine ?
Stars of the Heaven shine to feed thee ;
Hush'd are the Whirl-blasts and heed thee ;—
By her depth, by her height, Nature swears thou art mine !

<sup>1</sup> 'He attributed in part, his writing so little, to the extreme care and labour which he applied in elaborating his metres. He said that when he was intent on a new experiment in metre, the time and labour he bestowed were inconceivable ; that he was quite an epicure in sound.' —Wordsworth on Coleridge (as reported by Mr. Justice Coleridge), Memoirs of W. Wordsworth, 1851, ii. 306.

In a letter to Poole dated March 16, 1801, Coleridge writes : 'I shall . . . immediately publish my Christabel, with the Essays on the "Preternatural", and on Metre' (Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 349). Something had been done towards the collection of materials for the first 'Essay', a great deal for the second. In a notebook (No. 22) which contains dated entries of 1805, 1815, &c., but of which the greater portion, as the context and various handwritings indicate, belongs to a much earlier date, there are some forty-eight numbered specimens of various metres derived from German and Italian sources. To some of these stanzas or strophes a metrical scheme with original variants is attached, whilst other schemes are exemplified by metrical experiments in English, headed 'Nonsense Verses'. Two specimens of these experiments, headed 'A Sunset' and 'What is Life', are included in the text of P. W., 1893 (pp. 172, 173), and in that of the present issue, pp. 393, 394. They are dated 1805 in accordance with the dates of Coleridge's own comments or afterthoughts, but it is almost certain that both sets of verses were composed in 1801. The stanza entitled 'An Angel Visitant' belongs to the same period. Ten other sets of 'Nonsense Verses' of uncertain but early date are now printed for the first time.

— u u, — u u, — u, —

Drunk with I—dolatry—drunk with, Wine.

A noble metre if I can find a metre to precede or follow.

Sūmptūōus Dālilā floatīng thīs wāy

[AN EXPERIMENT FOR A METRE]

YE fowls of ill presage,
 Go vanish into Night!
 Let all things sweet and fair
 Yield homage to the pair:

 Each Brow be smooth and bright,
 As Lake in evening light.
 To-day be Joy! and Sorrow
 Devoid of Blame

 Shall welcome be to-morrow.
 Thou, too, dull Night! may'st come unchid:

A METRICAL ACCIDENT

Curious instance of casual metre and rhyme in a prose narrative (The Life of Jerome of Prague). The metre is Amphibrach dimeter Catalectic  $\cup - \cup \mid \cup -$ , and the rhymes antistrophic.

NOTES BY PROFESSOR SAINTSBURY

1. I think most ears would take these as anapaestic throughout. But the introduction of Milton’s

Drunk with Idolatry, drunk with wine
 as a leit-motiv is of the first interest.

Description of it, l. 4, very curious. I should have thought no one could have run ‘drunk with wine’ together as one foot.

2. Admirable! I hardly know better trochaics.

3. Very interesting: but the terminology odd. The dochmius, a five-syllabled foot, is (in one form—there are about thirty!) an antispast  $\cup - - \cup$  plus a syllable. Catalectic means (properly) minus a syllable. But the verses as quantified are really dochmiac, and the only attempts I have seen. Shall I own I can't get any English Rhythm on them?

4. More ordinary: but a good arrangement and wonderful for the late.

5. Not nonsense at all: but, metrically, really his usual elegiac.

6. This, if early, is almost priceless. It is not only lovely in itself, but an obvious attempt to recover the zig-zag outline and varied cadence of seventeenth century born—the things that Shelley to some extent, Beddoes and Darley more, and Tennyson and Browning most were to master. I subscribe (most humbly) to his suggestions, especially his second.

7. Very like some late seventeenth-century (Dryden time) motives and a leetle 'Moorish'.

8. Like 6, and charming.

9. A sort of recurrence to Pindaric—again pioneer, as the soul of S. T. C. had to be always.

10 and 11. Ditto.

13. Again, I should say, anapaestic—but this anapaest and amphibrach quarrel is ἀσπονδος.

EFFUSION 35

Clevedon, August 20th, 1795.<sup>1</sup>

(First Draft)

MY pensive SARA! thy soft Cheek reclin'd
Thus on my arm, how soothing sweet it is Beside our Cot to sit, our Cot o'ergrown
With white-flow'r'd Jasmine and the blossom'd myrtle,
(Meet emblems they of Innocence and Love!) 5
And watch the Clouds, that late were rich with light,
Slow-sad'ning round, and mark the star of eve
Serenely brilliant, like thy polish'd Sense,
Shine opposite! What snatches of perfume
The noiseless gale from yonder bean-field wafts! 10
The stilly murmur of the far-off Sea
Tells us of Silence! and behold, my love!
In the half-closed window we will place the Harp,
Which by the desultory Breeze caress'd,
Like some coy maid half willing to be woo'd, 15
Utters such sweet upbraidings as, perforce,
Tempt to repeat the wrong! [MS. R.]

MY pensive SARA! thy soft Cheek reclin'd
Thus on my arm, most soothing sweet it is
To sit beside our Cot, our Cot o'ergrown
With white-flower'd Jasmin, and the broad-leav'd Myrtle

<sup>1</sup> Now first published from Cottle's MSS. preserved in the Library of Rugby School.

Slow-sadd'ning round, and mark the Star of eve
 Serenely brilliant (such should WISDOM be
 Shine opposite. How exquisite the Scents
 Snatch'd from yon Bean-field! And the world so hush'd!
 The stilly murmur of the far-off Sea
 Tells us of Silence! And that simplest Lute
 Plac'd lengthways in the clasping casement, hark!
 How by the desultory Breeze caress'd
 (Like some coy Maid half-yielding to her Lover)
 It pours such sweet Upbraidings, as must needs
 Tempt to repeat the wrong. And now it's strings
 Boldlier swept, the long sequacious notes
 Over delicious Surges sink and rise
 In æry voyage, Music such as erst
 Round rosy bowers (so Legendaries tell)
 To sleeping Maids came floating witchingly
 By wand'ring West winds stoln from Faery land;
 Where on some magic Hybla MELODIES
 Round many a newborn honey-dropping Flower
 Footless and wild, like Birds of Paradise,
 Nor pause nor perch, warbling on untir'd wing.

And thus, my Love! as on the midway Slope
 Of yonder Hill I stretch my limbs at noon
 And tranquil muse upon Tranquillity.
 Full many a Thought uncall'd and undetain'd
 And many idle flitting Phantasies
 Traverse my indolent and passive Mind
 As wild, as various, as the random Gales
 That swell or flutter on this subject Lute.
 And what if All of animated Life
 Be but as Instruments diversly fram'd
 That tremble into thought, while thro' them breathes
 One infinite and intellectual Breeze,
 And all in diff'rent Heights so aptly hung,
 That Murmurs indistinct and Bursts sublime,
 Shrill Discords and most soothing Melodies,
 Harmonious from Creation's vast concent—
 Thus God would be the universal Soul,

40-43 In diff'rent heights, so aptly hung, that all
 In half-heard murmurs and loud bursts sublime,
 Shrill discords and most soothing melodies,
 Raises one great concent—one concent formed,
 Thus God, the only universal Soul—

Alternative version, MS. R.

 These Shapings of the unregen'rate Soul, 50
 Bubbles, that glitter as they rise and break
 On vain Philosophy's aye-babbling Spring:
 Thou biddest me walk humbly with my God!
 Meek Daughter in the family of Christ.
 Wisely thou sayest, and holy are thy words! 55
 Nor may I unblam'd or speak or think of Him,
 Th' INCOMPREHENSIBLE! save when with Awe

RECOLLECTION<sup>1</sup>[Vide ante, pp. 53, 48]

As the tir'd savage, who his drowsy frame
 Had bask'd beneath the sun's unclouded flame
 Awakes amid the troubles of the air,
 The skiey deluge and white lightning's glare,
 Aghast he scours before the tempest's sweep, 5
 And sad recalls the sunny hour of sleep!
 So tost by storms along life's wild'ring way
 Mine eye reverted views that cloudless day,
 When by my native brook I wont to rove,
 While HOPE with kisses nurs'd the infant LOVE! 10

Dear native brook! like peace so placidly
 Smoothing thro' fertile fields thy current meek—
 Dear native brook! where first young POESY
 Star'd wildly eager in her noon-tide dream;

<sup>1</sup> First published in The Watchman, No. V, April 2, 1796: reprinted in Note 39 (p. 566) of P. W., 1892. The Editor (J. D. Campbell) points out that this poem as printed in The Watchman is made up of lines 71-86 of Lines on an Autumnal Evening (vide ante, p. 53), of lines 2-11 of Sonnet to the River Otter, and of lines 13, 14 of The Gentle Look, and Anna and Farland.

Where blameless Pleasures dimpled Quiet's cheek, 15
 As water-lilies ripple thy slow stream!
 How many various-fated years have past,
 What blissful and what anguish'd hours, since last
 I skimm'd the smooth thin stone along thy breast
 Numb'ring its light leaps! Yet so deep imprest 20
 Sink the sweet scenes of childhood, that mine eyes
 I never shut amid the sunny blaze,
 But strait, with all their tints, thy waters rise,
 The crossing plank, and margin's willowy maze,
 And bedded sand, that, vein'd with various dyes, 25
 Gleam'd thro' thy bright transparence to the gaze—
 Ah! fair tho' faint those forms of memory seem Like Heaven's bright bow on thy smooth evening stream.

[DRAFT I]

Auspicious Reverence! Hush all meaner song,
 Till we the deep prelusive strain have pour'd
 To the Great Father, only Rightful King,
 Eternal Father! king omnipotent;
 Beneath whose shadowing banners wide-unfurl'd 5
 Justice leads forth her tyrant-quelling Hosts.
 Such Symphony demands best Instrument.

Seize, then, my Soul, from Freedom's trophied dome
 The harp which hanging high between the shields
 Of Brutus and Leonidas, oft gives 10
 A fitful music, when with breeze-like Touch
 Great Spirits passing thrill its wings: the Bard
 Listens and knows, thy will to work by Fame.
 For what is Freedom, but the unfetter'd use
 Of all the powers which God for use had given? 15
 But chiefly this, him first to view, him last,
 Thro' shapes, and sounds, and all the world of sense,
 The change of empires, and the deeds of Man
 Translucent, as thro' clouds that veil the Light.
 But most, O Man! in thine in wasted Sense 20
 And the still growth of Immortality

Image of God, and his Eternity.

But some there are who deem themselves most wise
 When they within this gross and visible sphere
 Chain down the winged thought, scoffing ascent 25
 Proud in their meanness—and themselves they mock
 With noisy emptiness of learned phrase
 Their subtle fluids, impacts, essences,
 Self-working tools, uncaused effects, and all
 Those blind Omniscients, those Almighty Slaves, 30
 Untenanting Creation of its God!

But properties are God: the Naked Mass
 (If Mass there be, at best a guess obscure,)
 Acts only by its inactivity.
 Here we pause humbly. Others boldlier dream, 35
 That as one body is the Aggregate
 Of Atoms numberless, each organiz'd,
 So by a strange and dim similitude
 Infinite myriads of self-conscious minds
 Form one all-conscious Spirit, who controlls 40
 With absolute ubiquity of Thought
 All his component Monads: linked Minds,
 Each in his own sphere evermore evolving
 Its own entrusted powers—Howe'er this be,
 Whether a dream presumptuous, caught from earth 45
 And earthly form, or vision veiling Truth,
 Yet the Omnific Father of all Worlds
 God in God immanent, the eternal Word,
 That gives forth, yet remains—Sun, that at once
 Dawns, rises, sets and crowns the Height of Heaven, 50
 Great general Agent in all finite souls,
 Doth in that action put on finiteness,
 For all his Thoughts are acts, and every act
 A Being of Substance; God impersonal,
 Yet in all worlds impersonate in all, 55
 Absolute Infinite, whose dazzling robe
 Flows in rich folds, and darts in shooting Hues
 Of infinite Finiteness! he rolls each orb
 Matures each planet, and Tree, and spread thro' all
 Wields all the Universe of Life and Thought, 60
 [Yet leaves to all the Creatures meanest, highest,
 Angelic Right, self-conscious Agency—]

PASSAGES IN SOUTHEY'S Joan of Arc (FIRST EDITION, 1796)

“O France,” he cried, “my country”!

When soft as breeze that curls the summer clouds
 At close of day, stole on his ear a voice 35
 Seraphic.

<sup>1</sup> Over and above the contributions to the Second Book of the Joan of Arc, which Southey acknowledged, and which were afterwards embodied in the Destiny of Nations, Coleridge claimed a number of passages in Books I, III, and IV. The passages are marked by S. T. C. in an annotated copy of the First Edition 4<sup>o</sup>, at one time the property of Coleridge’s friend W. Hood of Bristol, and afterwards of John Taylor Brown. See North British Review, January, 1864.

 "The keen and icy wind that shivers thee
 "Shall brace thine arm, and with stern discipline

From a dark lowering cloud, the womb of tempests, 455
 A giant arm burst forth and dropt a sword
 That pierc'd like lightning thro' the midnight air.

Last evening lone in thought I wandered forth.
 Down in the dingle's depth there is a brook 485

 Murmuring hoarse murmurs. On an aged oak
 Whose root upturn by tempests overhangs
 The stream, I sat, and mark'd the deep red clouds
 Gather before the wind, while the rude dash 490
 Of waters rock'd my senses, and the mists
 Rose round: there as I gazed, a form dim-seen
 Descended, like the dark and moving clouds
 That in the moonbeam change their shadowy shapes.
 His voice was on the breeze; he bade me hail 495
 The missioned Maid! for lo! the hour was come.

THE RIME OF THE ANCYENT MARINERE<sup>1</sup>,
 IN SEVEN PARTS.

ARGUMENT

How a Ship having passed the Line was driven by Storms to the cold Country towards the South Pole; and how from thence she made her course to the Tropical Latitude of the Great Pacific Ocean; and of the strange things that befell; and in what manner the Ancyent Marinere came back to his own Country.

I.

It is an ancyent Marinere,
 And he stoppeth one of three:
 "By thy long grey beard and thy glittering eye
 "Now wherefore stoppest me?"

"The Bridegroom's doors are open'd wide,
 "And I am next of kin;
 "The Guests are met, the Feast is set,—
 "May'st hear the merry din.

But still he holds the wedding-guest—
 There was a Ship, quoth he—
 "Nay, if thou'st got a laughsome tale,
 "Marinere! come with me."

The text of the present issue has been collated with that of an early copy of Lyrical Ballads, 1798 (containing Leviti, pp. 63-7), presented by Coleridge to his sister-in-law, Miss Martha Fricker. The lines were not numbered in L. B., 1798.

He holds him with his skinny hand,
 Quoth he, there was a Ship—
 “Now get thee hence, thou grey-beard Loon! 15
 “Or my Staff shall make thee skip.

He holds him with his glittering eye—
 The wedding guest stood still
 And listens like a three year's child ;
 The Marinere hath his will. 20

The wedding-guest sate on a stone.
 He cannot chuse but hear:
 And thus spake on that ancyent man,
 The bright-eyed Marinere.

The Ship was cheer'd, the Harbour clear'd— 25
 Merrily did we drop
 Below the Kirk, below the Hill,
 Below the Light-house top.

The Sun came up upon the left,
 Out of the Sea came he: 30
 And he shone bright, and on the right
 Went down into the Sea.

Higher and higher every day,
 Till over the mast at noon—
 The wedding-guest here beat his breast, 35
 For he heard the loud bassoon.

The Bride hath pac'd into the Hall,
 Red as a rose is she ;
 Nodding their heads before her goes
 The merry Minstralsy. 40

The wedding-guest he beat his breast,
 Yet he cannot chuse but hear:
 And thus spake on that ancyent Man,
 The bright-eyed Marinere.

Listen, Stranger! Storm and Wind, 45
 A Wind and Tempest strong!
 For days and weeks it play'd us freaks—
 Like Chaff we drove along.

Listen, Stranger! Mist and Snow,
 And it grew wond'rous cauld: 50
 And Ice mast-high came floating by
 As green as Emerald.

And thro' the drifts the snowy cliffs
 Did send a dismal sheen;
 Ne shapes of men ne beasts we ken— 55
 The Ice was all between.

The Ice was here, the Ice was there,
 The Ice was all around:
 It crack'd and growl'd, and roar'd and howl'd— 60
 Like noises of a swound.

At length did cross an Albatross,
 Thorough the Fog it came;
 And an it were a Christian Soul,
 We hail'd it in God's name.

The Mariners gave it biscuit-worms, 65
 And round and round it flew:
 The Ice did split with a Thunder-fit,
 The Helmsman steer'd us thro'.

And a good south wind sprung up behind,
 The Albatross did follow; 70
 And every day for food or play
 Came to the Marinere's hollo!

In mist or cloud on mast or shroud,
 It perch'd for vespers nine,
 Whiles all the night thro' fog smoke-white, 75
 Glimmer'd the white moon-shine.

"God save thee, ancye[n]t Marinere!
 "From the fiends that plague thee thus—
 "Why look'st thou so?"—with my cross bow 80
 I shot the Albatross.

II.

The Sun came up upon the right,
 Out of the Sea came he;
 And broad as a weft upon the left
 Went down into the Sea.

And the good south wind still blew behind, 85
 But no sweet Bird did follow
 Ne any day for food or play
 Came to the Marinere's hollo!

63 And an] As if MS. corr. by S. T. C. fog-smoke white. 83 weft [S. T. C.]

75 Corrected in the Errata to

And I had done an hellish thing
 And it would work 'em woe: 90
 For all averr'd, I had kill'd the Bird
 That made the Breeze to blow.

Ne dim ne red, like God's own head,
 The glorious Sun uprist:
 Then all averr'd, I had kill'd the Bird 95
 That brought the fog and mist.
 'Twas right, said they, such birds to slay
 That bring the fog and mist.

The breezes blew, the white foam flew,
 The furrow follow'd free: 100
 We were the first that ever burst
 Into that silent Sea.

Down dropt the breeze, the Sails dropt down,
 'Twas sad as sad could be
 And we did speak only to break 105
 The silence of the Sea.

All in a hot and copper sky
 The bloody sun at noon,
 Right up above the mast did stand,
 No bigger than the moon. 110

Day after day, day after day,
 We stuck, ne breath ne motion,
 As idle as a painted Ship
 Upon a painted Ocean.

Water, water, every where, 115
 And all the boards did shrink;
 Water, water, everywhere,
 Ne any drop to drink.

The very deeps did rot: O Christ!
 That ever this should be! 120
 Yea, slimy things did crawl with legs
 Upon the slimy Sea.

About, about, in reel and rout,
 The Death-fires danc'd at night;
 The water, like a witch's oils, 125
 Burnt green and blue and white.

And some in dreams assured were
 Of the Spirit that plagued us so:
 Nine fathom deep he had follow'd us
 From the Land of Mist and Snow.

130

And every tongue thro' utter drouth
 Was wither'd at the root;
 We could not speak no more than if
 We had been choked with soot.

Ah wel-a-day! what evil looks
 Had I from old and young;
 Instead of the Cross the Albatross
 About my neck was hung.

135

III.

I saw a something in the Sky
 No bigger than my fist;
 At first it seem'd a little speck
 And then it seem'd 'a mist:
 It mov'd and mov'd, and took at last
 A certain shape, I wist.

140

A speck, a mist, a shape, I wist!
 And still it ner'd and ner'd;
 And, an it dodg'd a water-sprite,
 It plung'd and tack'd and veer'd.

145

With throat unslack'd, with black lips bak'd
 Ne could we laugh, ne wail:
 Then while thro' drouth all dumb they stood
 I bit my arm and suck'd the blood
 And cry'd, A sail! a sail!

150

With throat unslack'd, with black lips bak'd
 Agape they hear'd me call:
 Gramercy! they for joy did grin
 And all at once their breath drew in
 As they were drinking all.

155

She doth not tack from side to side—
 Hither to work us weal
 Withouten wind, withouten tide
 She steddies with upright keel.

160

The western wave was all a flame,
 The day was well nigh done!
 Almost upon the western wave 165
 Rested the broad bright Sun;
 When that strange shape drove suddenly
 Betwixt us and the Sun.

And strait the Sun was fleck'd with bars
 (Heaven's mother send us grace) 170
 As if thro' a dungeon grate he peer'd
 With broad and burning face.

Alas! (thought I, and my heart beat loud)
 How fast she neres and neres!
 Are those her Sails that glance in the Sun 175
 Like restless gossameres?

Are those her naked ribs, which fleck'd
 The sun that did behind them peer?
 And are those two all, all the crew,
 That woman and her fleshless Pheere? 180

His bones were black with many a crack,
 All black and bare, I ween;
 Jet-black and bare, save where with rust
 Of mouldy damps and charnel crust
 They're patch'd with purple and green. 185

Her lips are red, her looks are free,
Her locks are yellow as gold:
 Her skin is as white as leprosy,
 And she is far liker Death than he;
 Her flesh makes the still air cold. 190

The naked Hulk alongside came
 And the Twain were playing dice;
 "The Game is done! I've won, I've won!"
 Quoth she, and whistled thrice.

A gust of wind sterte up behind 195
 And whistled thro' his bones;
 Thro' the holes of his eyes and the hole of his mouth
 Half-whistles and half-groans.

With never a whisper in the Sea
 Off darts the Spectre-ship;
 While clombe above the Eastern bar
 The horned Moon, with one bright Star
 Almost atween the tips. 200

One after one by the horned Moon
 (Listen, O Stranger! to me)
 Each turn'd his face with a ghastly pang
 And curs'd me with his ee. 205

Four times fifty living men,
 With never a sigh or groan,
 With heavy thump, a lifeless lump
 They dropp'd down one by one. 210

Their souls did from their bodies fly,—
 They fled to bliss or woe;
 And every soul it pass'd me by,
 Like the whiz of my Cross-bow. 215

IV.

"I fear thee, ancyeut Marinere!
 "I fear thy skinny hand;
 "And thou art long, and lank, and brown,
 "As is the ribb'd Sea-sand.

"I fear thee and thy glittering eye
 "And thy skinny hand so brown—
 Fear not, fear not, thou wedding guest!
 This body dropt not down. 220

Alone, alone, all all alone
 Alone on the wide wide Sea;
 And Christ would take no pity on
 My soul in agony. 225

The many men so beautiful,
 And they all dead did lie!
 And a million million slimy things
 Liv'd on—and so did I. 230

I look'd upon the rotting Sea,
 And drew my eyes away;
 I look'd upon the eldritch deck,
 And there the dead men lay. 235

I look'd to Heav'n, and try'd to pray;
 But or ever a prayer had gusht,
 A wicked whisper came and made
 My heart as dry as dust.

I clos'd my lids and kept them close 240
 Till the balls like pulses beat;
 For the sky and the sea, and the sky
 Lay like a load on my weary eye,
 And the dead were at my feet.

The cold sweat melted from their limbs, 245
 Ne rot, ne reek did they;
 The look with which they look'd on me,
 Had never pass'd away.

An orphan's curse would drag to Hell
 A spirit from on high: 250
 But O! more horrible than that
 Is the curse in a dead man's eye!
 Seven days, seven nights I saw that curse,
 And yet I could not die.

The moving Moon went up the sky, 255
 And no where did abide:
 Softly she was going up
 And a star or two beside

Her beams bemock'd the sultry main
 Like morning frosts yspread; 260
 But where the ship's huge shadow lay,
 The charmed water burnt alway
 A still and awful red.

Beyond the shadow of the ship
 I watch'd the water-snakes: 265
 They mov'd in tracks of shining white;
 And when they rear'd, the elfish light
 Fell off in hoary flakes.

Within the shadow of the ship
 I watch'd their rich attire: 270
 Blue, glossy green, and velvet black
 They coil'd and swam; and every track
 Was a flash of golden fire.

O happy living things! no tongue
 Their beauty might declare: 275
 A spring of love gusht from my heart,
 And I bless'd them unaware!
 Sure my kind saint took pity on me,
 And I bless'd them unaware.

The self-same moment I could pray;
 And from my neck so free 280
 The Albatross fell off, and sank
 Like lead into the sea.

v.

O sleep, it is a gentle thing,
 Belov'd from pole to pole! 285
 To Mary-queen the praise be yeven
 She sent the gentle sleep from heaven
 That slid into my soul.

The silly buckets on the deck
 That had so long remain'd,
 I dreamt that they were fill'd with dew 290
 And when I awoke it rain'd.

My lips were wet, my throat was cold,
 My garments all were dank;
 Sure I had drunken in my dreams 295
 And still my body drank.

I mov'd and could not feel my limbs,
 I was so light, almost
 I thought that I had died in sleep,
 And was a blessed Ghost. 300

The roaring wind! it roar'd far off,
 It did not come anear;
 But with its sound it shook the sails
 That were so thin and sere.

The upper air bursts into life,
 And a hundred fire-flags sheen 305
 To and fro they are hurried about;
 And to and fro, and in and out
 The stars dance on between.

The coming wind doth roar more loud;
 The sails do sigh, like sedge: 310
 The rain pours down from one black cloud
 And the Moon is at its edge.

Hark! hark! the thick black cloud is cleft,
 And the Moon is at its side: 315
 Like waters shot from some high crag,
 The lightning falls with never a jag
 A river steep and wide.

The strong wind reach'd the ship: it roar'd
 And dropp'd down, like a stone! 320
 Beneath the lightning and the moon
 The dead men gave a groan.

They groan'd, they stirr'd, they all uprose,
 Ne spake, ne mov'd their eyes:
 It had been strange, even in a dream 325
 To have seen those dead men rise.

The helmsman steer'd, the ship mov'd on;
 Yet never a breeze up-blew;
 The Mariners all 'gan work the ropes,
 Where they were wont to do: 330
 They rais'd their limbs like lifeless tools—
 We were a ghastly crew.

The body of my brother's son
 Stood by me knee to knee:
 The body and I pull'd at one rope, 335
 But he said nought to me—
 And I quak'd to think of my own voice
 How frightful it would be!

The day-light dawn'd—they dropp'd their arms,
 And cluster'd round the mast: 340
 Sweet sounds rose slowly thro' their mouths
 And from their bodies pass'd.

Around, around, flew each sweet sound,
 Then darted to the sun:
 Slowly the sounds came back again 345
 Now mix'd, now one by one.

Sometimes a dropping from the sky
 I heard the Lavrock sing;
 Sometimes all little birds that are
 How they seem'd to fill the sea and air 350
 With their sweet jargoning.

And now 'twas like all instruments,
 Now like a lonely flute;
 And now it is an angel's song
 That makes the heavens be mute. 355

It ceas'd: yet still the sails made on
 A pleasant noise till noon,
 A noise like of a hidden brook
 In the leafy month of June,
 That to the sleeping woods all night 360
 Singeth a quiet tune.

Listen, O listen, thou Wedding-guest!
 "Marinere! thou hast thy will:
 "For that, which comes out of thine eye, doth make
 "My body and soul to be still." 365

Never sadder tale was told
 To a man of woman born:
 Sadder and wiser thou wedding-guest!
 Thou'lt rise to-morrow morn.

Never sadder tale was heard 370
 By a man of woman born:
 The Mariners all return'd to work
 As silent as before.

The Mariners all 'gan pull the ropes,
 But look at me they n'old: 375
 Thought I, I am as thin as air—
 They cannot me behold.

Till noon we silently sail'd on
 Yet never a breeze did breathe:
 Slowly and smoothly went the ship 380
 Mov'd onward from beneath.

Under the keel nine fathom deep
 From the land of mist and snow
 The spirit slid: and it was He
 That made the Ship to go. 385
 The sails at noon left off their tune
 And the Ship stood still also.

The sun right up above the mast
 Had fix'd her to the ocean:
 But in a minute she 'gan stir 390
 With a short uneasy motion—
 Backwards and forwards half her length
 With a short uneasy motion.

Then, like a pawing horse let go,
 She made a sudden bound: 395
 It flung the blood into my head,
 And I fell into a swoond.

How long in that same fit I lay,
 I have not to declare;
 But ere my living life return'd, 400
 I heard and in my soul discern'd
 Two voices in the air,

"Is it he?" quoth one, "Is this the man?
 "By him who died on cross,
 "With his cruel bow he lay'd full low 405
 "The harmless Albatross.

"The spirit who 'bideth by himself
 "In the land of mist and snow,
 "He lov'd the bird that lov'd the man
 "Who shot him with his bow. 410

The other was a softer voice,
 As soft as honey-dew:
 Quoth he the man hath penance done,
 And penance more will do.

VI.

FIRST VOICE.

"But tell me, tell me! speak again, 415
 "Thy soft response renewing—
 "What makes that ship drive on so fast?
 "What is the Ocean doing?

SECOND VOICE.

"Still as a Slave before his Lord,
 "The Ocean hath no blast: 420
 "His great bright eye most silently
 "Up to the moon is cast—

"If he may know which way to go,
 "For she guides him smooth or grim.
 "See, brother, see! how graciously
 "She looketh down on him.

425

FIRST VOICE.

"But why drives on that ship so fast
 "Withouten wave or wind?

SECOND VOICE.

"The air is cut away before,
 "And closes from behind.
 "Fly, brother, fly! more high, more high,
 "Or we shall be belated:
 "For slow and slow that ship will go,
 "When the Marinere's trance is abated."

430

I woke, and we were sailing on
 As in a gentle weather:
 'Twas night, calm night, the moon was high;
 The dead men stood together.

435

All stood together on the deck,
 For a charnel-dungeon fitter:
 All fix'd on me their stony eyes
 That in the moon did glitter.

440

The pang, the curse, with which they died,
 Had never pass'd away:
 I could not draw my een from theirs
 Ne turn them up to pray.

445

And in its time the spell was snapt,
 And I could move my een:
 I look'd far-forth, but little saw
 Of what might else be seen.

450

Like one, that on a lonely road
 Doth walk in fear and dread,
 And having once turn'd round, walks on
 And turns no more his head:
 Because he knows, a frightful fiend
 Doth close behind him tread.

455

But soon there breath'd a wind on me,
 Ne sound ne motion made:
 Its path was not upon the sea
 In ripple or in shade.

460

It rais'd my hair, it fann'd my cheek,
 Like a meadow-gale of spring—
 It mingled strangely with my fears,
 Yet it felt like a welcoming.

Swiftly, swiftly flew the ship, 465
 Yet she sail'd softly too:
 Sweetly, sweetly blew the breeze—
 On me alone it blew.

O dream of joy! is this indeed
 The light-house top I see? 470
 Is this the Hill? Is this the Kirk?
 Is this mine own countrée?

We drifted o'er the Harbour-bar,
 And I with sobs did pray—
 "O let me be awake, my God! 475
 "Or let me sleep alway!"

The harbour-bay was clear as glass,
 So smoothly it was strewn!
 And on the bay the moon light lay,
 And the shadow of the moon. 480

The moonlight bay was white all o'er,
 Till rising from the same,
 Full many shapes, that shadows were,
 Like as of torches came.

A little distance from the prow 485
 Those dark-red shadows were;
 But soon I saw that my own flesh
 Was red as in a glare.

I turn'd my head in fear and dread,
 And by the holy rood, 490
 The bodies had advanc'd, and now
 Before the mast they stood.

They lifted up their stiff right arms,
 They held them strait and tight;
 And each right-arm burnt like a torch, 495
 A torch that's borne upright.
 Their stony eye-balls glitter'd on
 In the red and smoky light.

- I pray'd and turn'd my head away
Forth looking as before. 500
There was no breeze upon the bay,
No wave against the shore.
- The rock shone bright, the kirk no less
That stands above the rock:
The moonlight steep'd in silentness 505
The steady weathercock.
- And the bay was white with silent light,
Till rising from the same
Full many shapes, that shadows were,
In crimson colours came. 510
- A little distance from the prow
Those crimson shadows were:
I turn'd my eyes upon the deck—
O Christ! what saw I there?
- Each corse lay flat, lifeless and flat;
And by the Holy rood 515
A man all light, a seraph-man,
On every corse there stood.
- This seraph-band, each wav'd his hand:
It was a heavenly sight:
They stood as signals to the land, 520
Each one a lovely light:
- This seraph-band, each wav'd his hand,
No voice did they impart—
No voice; but O! the silence sank,
Like music on my heart. 525
- Eftsones I heard the dash of oars,
I heard the pilot's cheer:
My head was turn'd perforce away
And I saw a boat appear. 530
- Then vanish'd all the lovely lights;
The bodies rose anew:
With silent pace, each to his place,
Came back the ghastly crew.
The wind, that shade nor motion made,
On me alone it blew. 535

The pilot, and the pilot's boy
 I heard them coming fast:
 Dear Lord in Heaven! it was a joy,
 The dead men could not blast. 540

I saw a third—I heard his voice:
 It is the Hermit good!
 He singeth loud his godly hymns
 That he makes in the wood.
 He'll shrieve my soul, he'll wash away 545
 The Albatross's blood.

VII.

This Hermit good lives in that wood
 Which slopes down to the Sea.
 How loudly his sweet voice he rears!
 He loves to talk with Marineres 550
 That come from a far Contrée.

He kneels at morn and noon and eve—
 He hath a cushion plump:
 It is the moss, that wholly hides
 The rotted old Oak-stump. 555

The Skiff-boat ne'rd: I heard them talk,
 "Why, this is strange, I trow!
 "Where are those lights so many and fair
 "That signal made but now?

"Strange, by my faith! the Hermit said— 560
 "And they answer'd not our cheer.

"The planks look warp'd, and see those sails
 "How thin they are and sere!

"I never saw aught like to them
 "Unless perchance it were 565

"The skeletons of leaves that lag
 "My forest-brook along:
 "When the Ivy-tod is heavy with snow,
 "And the Owlet whoops to the wolf below
 "That eats the she-wolf's young. 570

"Dear Lord! it has a fiendish look—
 (The Pilot made reply)

"I am afraid—"Push on, push on!
 "Said the Hermit cheerily.

The Boat came closer to the Ship,
 But I ne spake ne stirr'd! 575
 The Boat came close beneath the Ship.
 And strait a sound was heard!

Under the water it rumbled on,
 Still louder and more dread: 580
 It reach'd the Ship, it split the bay;
 The Ship went down like lead.

Stunn'd by that loud and dreadful sound,
 Which sky and ocean smote:
 Like one that had been seven days drown'd 585
 My body lay afloat:
 But, swift as dreams, myself I found
 Within the Pilot's boat.

Upon the whirl, where sank the Ship,
 The boat spun round and round: 590
 And all was still, save that the hill
 Was telling of the sound.

I mov'd my lips: the Pilot shriek'd
 And fell down in a fit.
 The Holy Hermit rais'd his eyes 595
 And pray'd where he did sit.

I took the oars: the Pilot's boy,
 Who now doth crazy go,
 Laugh'd loud and long, and all the while
 His eyes went to and fro, 600
 "Ha! ha!" quoth he—"full plain I see,
 "The devil knows how to row."

And now all in mine own Countrée
 I stood on the firm land!
 The Hermit stepp'd forth from the boat, 605
 And scarcely he could stand.

"O shrieve me, shrieve me, holy Man!
 The Hermit cross'd his brow—
 "Say quick," quoth he, "I bid thee say
 "What manner man art thou?" 610

Forthwith this frame of mine was wrench'd
 With a woeful agony,
 Which forc'd me to begin my tale
 And then it left me free.

Since then at an uncertain hour,
Now oftimes and now fewer,
That anguish comes and makes me tell
My ghastly aventure. 615

I pass, like night, from land to land;
I have strange power of speech;
The moment that his face I see 620
I know the man that must hear me;
To him my tale I teach.

What loud uproar bursts from that door!
The Wedding-guests are there;
But in the Garden-bower the Bride 625
And Bride-maids singing are:
And hark the little Vesper-bell
Which biddeth me to prayer.

O Wedding-guest! this soul hath been
Alone on a wide wide sea: 630
So lonely 'twas, that God himself
Scarce seemed there to be.

O sweeter than the Marriage-feast,
'Tis sweeter far to me
To walk together to the Kirk 635
With a goodly company.

To walk together to the Kirk
And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends, 640
Old men, and babes, and loving friends,
And Youths, and Maidens gay.

Farewell, farewell! but this I tell
To thee, thou wedding-guest!
He prayeth well who loveth well, 645
Both man and bird and beast.

He prayeth best who loveth best,
All things both great and small:
For the dear God, who loveth us,
He made and loveth all. 650

The Marinere, whose eye is bright,
Whose beard with age is hoar,
Is gone; and now the wedding-guest
Turn'd from the bridegroom's door.

He went, like one that hath been stunn'd
 And is of sense forlorn :
 A sadder and a wiser man
 He rose the morrow morn.

THE RAVEN

[As printed in the Morning Post, March 10, 1798.]

[Vide ante, p. 169.]

UNDER the arms of a goodly oak-tree,
 There was of Swine a large company.
 They were making a rude repast,
 Grunting as they crunch'd the mast.
 Then they trotted away : for the wind blew high—
 One acorn they left, ne more mote you spy.
 Next came a Raven, who lik'd not such folly ;
 He belong'd, I believe, to the witch MELANCHOLY !
 Blacker was he than the blackest jet ;
 Flew low in the rain ; his feathers were wet.
 He pick'd up the acorn and buried it strait,
 By the side of a river both deep and great.
 Where then did the Raven go ?
 He went high and low—
 O'er hill, o'er dale did the black Raven go !
 Many Autumns, many Springs ;
 Travell'd he with wand'ring wings ;
 Many Summers, many Winters—
 I can't tell half his adventures.
 At length he return'd, and with him a she ;
 And the acorn was grown a large oak-tree.
 They built them a nest in the topmost bough,
 And young ones they had, and were jolly enow.
 But soon came a Woodman in leathern guise :
 His brow like a pent-house hung over his eyes.
 He'd an axe in his hand, and he nothing spoke,
 But with many a hem ! and a sturdy stroke,
 At last he brought down the poor Raven's own oak.
 His young ones were kill'd, for they could not depart,
 And his wife she did die of a broken heart !

The branches from off it the Woodman did sever!
 And they floated it down on the course of the River:
 They saw'd it to planks, and it's rind they did strip,
 And with this tree and others they built up a ship.
 The ship, it was launch'd; but in sight of the land, 35
 A tempest arose which no ship could withstand.
 It bulg'd on a rock, and the waves rush'd in fast—
 The auld Raven flew round and round, and caw'd to the blast.

He heard the sea-shriek of their perishing souls—
 They be sunk! O'er the top-mast the mad water rolls. 40
 The Raven was glad that such fate they did meet,
 They had taken his all, and REVENGE WAS SWEET!

[Add. MSS. 27,902.]

HIGH o'er the silver rocks I roved
 To forget the form I loved
 In hopes fond fancy would be kind
 And steal my Mary from my mind
 T'was twilight and the lunar beam 5
 Sailed slowly o'er Tamaha's stream
 As down its sides the water strayed
 Bright on a rock the moonbeam playe[d]
 It shone, half-sheltered from the view
 By pendent boughs of tressy yew 10
 True, true to love but false to rest,
 So fancy whispered to my breast,
 So shines her forehead smooth and fair
 Gleaming through her sable hair
 I turned to heaven—but viewed on high 15
 The languid lustre of her eye

<sup>1</sup> The first ten lines of MS. version (1) were first published in Note 44 of P. W., 1893, p. 518, and the MS. as a whole is included in Coleridge's Poems, A Facsimile Reproduction of The Proofs and MSS., &c., 1899, pp. 132-4. MSS. (2) and (3) are now printed for the first time.

The moons mild radiant edge I saw
 Peeping a black-arched cloud below
 Nor yet its faint and paly beam
 Could tinge its skirt with yellow gleam

20

I saw the white waves o'er and o'er
 Break against a curved shore
 Now disappearing from the sight
 Now twinkling regular and white
 Her mouth, her smiling mouth can shew
 As white and regular a row
 Haste Haste, some God indulgent prove
 And bear me, bear me to my love
 Then might—for yet the sultry hour
 Glows from the sun's oppressive power
 Then might her bosom soft and white
 Heave upon my swimming sight
 As yon two swans together heave
 Upon the gently-swelling wave
 Haste—haste some God indulgent prove
 And bear—oh bear me to my love.

INTRODUCTION TO THE TALE OF THE DARK LADIE<sup>1</sup>[Vide ante, p. 330.]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE MORNING POST.

SIR,

The following Poem is the Introduction to a somewhat longer one, for which I shall solicit insertion on your next open day. The use of the Old Ballad word, Ladie, for Lady, is the only piece of obsolescence in it; and as it is professedly a tale of ancient times, I trust, that 'the affectionate lovers of venerable antiquity' (as Camden says) will grant me their pardon, and perhaps may be induced to admit a force and propriety in it. A heavier objection may be adduced against the Author, that in these times of fear and expectation, when novelties explode around us in all directions, he should presume to offer to the public a silly tale of old fashioned love ; and, five years ago, I own, I should have allowed and felt the force of this objection. But, alas ! explosion has succeeded explosion so rapidly, that novelty itself ceases to appear new ; and it is possible that now, even a simple story, wholly uninspired [? inspired] with politics or personality, may find some attention amid the hubbub of Revolutions, as to those who have resided a long time by the falls of Niagara, the lowest whispering becomes distinctly audible.

S. T. COLERIDGE.

O leave the Elder-bloom, fair Maids !

A woeful Tale of Love I sing : 10
Hark, gentle Maidens, hark ! it sighs
And trembles on the string.

But most, my own dear Genevieve !
It sighs and trembles most for thee !
O come and hear the cruel wrongs 15
Befel the dark Ladie !

<sup>1</sup> Now first published from an MS. in the British Museum (Add. MSS. 34,225). The Triumph of Loyalty, 'a sort of dramatic romance' (see Letter to Poole, December 5, 1800; Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 343), was begun and left unfinished in the late autumn of 1800. An excerpt (ll. 277-358) was revised and published as 'A Night Scene. A Dramatic Fragment,' in Sibylline Leaves (1817), vide ante, pp. 421-3. The revision of the excerpt (ll. 263-349) with respect to the order and arrangement of its component parts is indicated by asterisks, which appear to be contemporary with the MS. I have, therefore, in printing the MS., followed the revised and not the original order of these lines. Again, in the hitherto unpublished portion of the MS. (ll. 1-263) I have omitted rough drafts of passages which were rewritten, either on the same page or on the reverse of the leaf.

<sup>2</sup> The words enclosed in brackets are not to be found in the text. They were either invented or adapted by Coleridge ad hoc. The text of the passage as a whole has been reconstructed by modern editors.

THE TRIUMPH OF LOYALTY

ACT I

SCENE I. A cultivated Plain, skirted on the Left by a Wood. The Pyrenees are visible in the distance. Small knots of Soldiers all in the military Dress of the middle Ages are seen passing across the Stage. Then

Enter EARL HENRY and SANDOVAL, both armed.

Sandoval. A delightful plain this, and doubly pleasant after so long and wearisome a descent from the Pyrenees [sic]. Did you not observe how our poor over wearied horses mended their pace as soon as they reached it? 4

Earl Henry. I must entreat your forgiveness, gallant Castilian! I ought ere this to have bade you welcome to my native Navarre.

Sandoval. Cheerily, General! Navarre has indeed but ill repaid your services, in thus recalling you from the head of an army which you yourself had collected and disciplined. But the wrongs and insults which you have suffered— 11

Earl Henry. Deserve my thanks, Friend! In the sunshine of Court-favor I could only believe that I loved my Queen and my Country: now I know it. But why name I my Country or my Sovereign? I owe all my wrongs to the private enmity of the Chancellor. 16

Sandoval. Heaven be praised, you have atchieved [sic] a delicious revenge upon him!—that the same Courier who brought the orders for your recall carried back with him the first tidings of your Victory—it was exquisite good fortune! 20

Earl Henry. Sandoval! my gallant Friend! Let me not deceive you. To you I have vowed an undisguised openness. The gloom which overcast me, was occasioned by causes of less public import. 24

Sandoval. Connected, I presume, with that Mansion, the spacious pleasure grounds of which we noticed as we were descending from the mountain. Lawn and Grove, River and Hillock—it looked within these high walls, like a World of itself. 29

Earl Henry. This Wood scarcely conceals these high walls from us. Alas! I know the place too well. . . . Nay, why too well?—But wherefore spake you, Sandoval, of this Mansion? What know you? 33

Sandoval. Nothing. Therefore I spake of it. On our descent from the mountain I pointed it out to you and asked to whom it belonged—you became suddenly absent, and answered me only by looks of Disturbance and Anxiety.

Earl Henry. That Mansion once belonged to Manric [sic], Lord of Valdez. 39

Sandoval. Alas, poor Man! the same, who had dangerous claims to the Throne of Navarre.

Earl Henry. Claims?—Say rather, pretensions—plausible only to the unreasoning Multitude.

Sandoval. Pretensions then (with bitterness). 44

Earl Henry. Bad as these were, the means he employed to give effect to them were still worse. He trafficked with France against the independence of his Country. He was a traitor, my Friend! and died a traitor's death. His two sons suffered with him, and many, (I fear, too many) of his adherents. 49

Sandoval. Earl Henry! (a pause) If the sentence were just, why was not the execution of it public. . . . It is reported, that they were—but no! I will not believe it—the honest soul of my friend would not justify so foul a deed.

Earl Henry. Speak plainly—what is reported? 54

Sandoval. That they were all assassinated by order of the new Queen.

Earl Henry. Accursed be the hearts that framed and the tongues that scattered the Calumny!—The Queen was scarcely seated on her throne; the Chancellor, who had been her Guardian, exerted a pernicious influence over her judgement—she was taught to fear dangerous commotions in the Capital, she was intreated to prevent the bloodshed of the deluded citizens, and thus overawed she reluctantly consented to permit the reinforcement of an obsolete law, and——

Sandoval. They were not assassinated then?—— 65

Earl Henry. Why these bitter tones to me, Sandoval? Can a law assassinate? Don Manrique [sic] and his accomplices drank the sleepy poison adjudged by that law in the State Prison at Pampilona. At that time I was with the army on the frontiers of France. 70

Sandoval. Had you been in the Capital——

Earl Henry. I would have pledged my life on the safety of a public Trial and a public Punishment. 73

Sandoval. Poisoned! The Father and his Sons!—And this, Earl Henry, was the first act of that Queen, whom you idolize!

Earl Henry. No, Sandoval, No! This was not her act. She roused herself from the stupor of alarm, she suspended in opposition to the advice of her council, all proceedings against the inferior partisans of the Conspiracy; she facilitated the escape of Don Manrique's brother, and to Donna Oropeza, his daughter and only surviving child, she restored all her father's possessions, nay became herself her Protectress and Friend. These were the acts, these the first acts of my royal Mistress.

Sandoval. And how did Donna Oropeza receive these favors?

Earl Henry. Why ask you that? Did they not fall on her, like heavenly dews? 86

Sandoval. And will they not rise again, like an earthly mist? What is Gratitude opposed to Ambition, filial revenge, and Woman's rivalry—what is it but a cruel Curb in the mouth of a fiery Horse, maddening the fierce animal whom it cannot restrain? Forgive me, Earl Henry! I meant not to move you so deeply. 92

Earl Henry. Sandoval, you have uttered that in a waking hour which having once dreamt, I feared the return of sleep lest I should dream it over again. My Friend (his Voice trembling) I woo'd the daughter of Don Manrique, but we are interrupted. 97

Sandoval. It is Fernandez.

Earl Henry (struggling with his emotions). A true-hearted old fellow—— 100

Sandoval. As splenetic as he is brave.

Enter FERNANDEZ.

Earl Henry. Well, my ancient! how did you like our tour through the mountains. (EARL HENRY sits down on the seat by the woodside.) 104

Fernandez. But little, General! and my faithful charger Liked it still less.

The field of battle in the level plain
By Fontarabia was more to our taste.

Earl Henry. Where is my brother, Don Curio! Have you Seen him of late?

After 88 in which all her wrongs will appear twofold — (or) in a mist of which her Wrongs will wander, magnified into giant shapes. MS. erased.

Fernandez.

Scarcely, dear General!

110

For by my troth I have been laughing at him
 Even till the merry tears so filled my eyes
 That I lost sight of him.

Sandoval.

But wherefore, Captain.

Fernandez. He hath been studying speeches with fierce gestures ;

Speeches brimfull of wrath and indignation, 115

The which he hopes to vent in open council:

And, in the heat and fury of this fancy

He grasp'd your groom of the Chamber by the throat

Who squeaking piteously, Ey! quoth your brother,

I cry you Mercy, Fool! Hadst been indeed 120

The Chancellor, I should have strangled thee.

Sandoval. Ha, ha! poor Barnard!

Fernandez.

What you know my Gentleman,

My Groom of the Chamber, my Sieur Barnard, hey?

Sandoval. I know him for a barren-pated coxcomb.

Fernandez. But very weedy, Sir! in worthless phrases, 125
 A sedulous eschewer of the popular

And the colloquial—one who seeketh dignity

I' th' paths of circumlocution! It would have

Surpris'd you tho', to hear how nat'rally

He squeak'd when Curio had him by the throat. 130

Sandoval. I know him too for an habitual scorner
 Of Truth.

Fernandez. And one that lies more dully than Old Women dream, without pretence of fancy,
 Humour or mirth, a most disinterested,
 Gratuitous Liar.

Earl Henry. Ho! enough, enough! 135

Spare him, I pray you, were't but from respect
 To the presence of his Lord.

Sandoval.

I stand reprov'd.

Fernandez. I too, but that I know our noble General
 Maintains him near his person, only that

If he should ever go in jeopardy 140

Of being damn'd (as he's now persecuted)

For his virtue and fair sense, he may be sav'd

By the supererogation of this Fellow's

Folly and Worthlessness.—

110 After General! And yet I have not stirred from his side. That is to say— MS. erased.

Earl Henry.

Hold, hold, good Ancient!

Do you not know that this Barnard saved my life?

145

Well, but my brother——

Fernandez.

He will soon be here.

I swear by this, my sword, dear General,

I swear he has a Hero's soul—I only

Wish I could communicate to him

My gift of governing the spleen.—Then he 150

Has had his colors, the drums too of the Regiment

All put in cases—O, that stirs the Soldiery.

Earl Henry. Impetuous Boy!

Fernandez.

Nay, Fear not for them, General.

The Chancellor, no doubt, will take good care

To let their blood grow cool on garrison duty.

155

Sandoval. Earl Henry! Frown not thus upon Fernandez;

'Tis said, and all the Soldiery believe it,

That the five Regiments who return with you

Will be dispers'd in garrisons and castles,

160

And other Jails of honourable name.

So great a crime it is to have been present

In duty and devotion to a Hero!

Fernandez. What now? What now? The politic Chancellor is

The Soldier's friend, and rather than not give

Snug pensions to brave Men, he'll overlook

165

All small disqualifying circumstances

Of youth and health, keen eye and muscular limb,

He'll count our scars, and set them down for maims.

And gain us thus all privileges and profits

Of Invalids and superannuate veterans.

170

Earl Henry. 'Tis but an idle rumour—See! they come.

*Enter BARNARD and a number of Soldiers, their Colours wound up, and the Drums in Cases, and after them DON CURIO.
All pay the military Honors to the General. During this time FERNANDEZ has hurried up in front of the Stage.*

Enter DON CURIO.

Don Curio (advancing to EARL HENRY). Has Barnard told
you?

Insult on insult! by mine honor, Brother!

(BARNARD goes beside CURIO) And by our Father's soul they mean to saint you,

Having first prov'd your Patience more than mortal.

175

Earl Henry. Take heed, Don Curio! lest with greater right
They scoff my Brother for a choleric boy.
What insult then?

Don Curio. Our Friend, the Chancellor,
Welcomes you home, and shares the common joy
In the most happy tidings of your Victory: 180
But as to your demand of instant audience
From the Queen's Royal Person,—'tis rejected!

Sandoval. Rejected?

Barnard (making a deep obeisance). May it please the Earl!

Earl Henry. Speak, Barnard.

Barnard. The noble Youth, your very valiant brother,
And wise as valiant (bowing to DON CURIO who puffs at him)
rightly doth insinuate 185

Fortune deals nothing singly—whether Honors
Or Insults, whether it be Joys or Sorrows,
They crowd together on us, or at best
Drop in in quick succession.

Fernandez (mocking him). 'Ne'er rains it, but it pours,' or,
at the best, 190

'More sacks upon the mill.' This fellow's a Perpetual plagiarist from his Grandmother, and How slyly in the parcel wraps [he] up
The stolen goods!

Earl Henry. Be somewhat briefer, Barnard.

Barnard. But could I dare insinuate to your Brother 195
A fearless Truth, Earl Henry—it were this:
Even Lucifer, Prince of the Air, hath claims
Upon our justice.

Fernandez. Give the Devil his Due!

Why, thou base Lacquerer of worm-eaten proverbs,
[And] wherefore dost thou not tell us at once 200
What the Chancellor said to thee?

Barnard (looking round superciliously at FERNANDEZ).
The Queen hath left the Capital affecting

Rural retirement, but 'I will hasten'
(Thus said the Chancellor) 'I myself will hasten'
And lay before her Majesty the Tidings 205
Both of Earl Henry's Victory and return.
She will vouchsafe, I doubt not, to re-enter
Her Capital, without delay, and grant
The wish'd for Audience with all public honour.'

Don Curio. A mere Device, I say, to pass a slight on us.

Fernandez (to himself). To think on't. Pshaw! A fellow, that must needs

211

Have been decreed an Ass by acclamation,
Had he not looked so very like an Owl.

And he to—— (turns suddenly round, and faces BARNARD who had even then come close beside him).

Boo!—Ah! is it you, Sieur Barnard!

Barnard. No other, Sir!

Fernandez.

And is it not reported,

215

That you once sav'd the General's life?

Barnard.

'Tis certain!

Fernandez. Was he asleep? And were the hunters coming
And did you bite him on the nose?

Barnard.

What mean you?

Fernandez. That was the way in which the Flea i' th' Fable
Once sav'd the Lion's life.

Earl Henry.

'Tis well.

220

The Sun hath almost finish'd his Day's Travels;
We too will finish ours. Go, gallant Comrades,
And at the neighbouring Mansion, for us all,
Claim entertainment in your General's name.

Exeunt Soldiers, &c. As they are leaving the Stage.

Fernandez (to BARNARD). A word with you! You act the Chancellor

Incomparably well.

225

Barnard.

Most valiant Captain,

Vouchsafe a manual union.

Fernandez (gripping [sic] his hand with affected fervor). 'Tis no wonder,

Don Curio should mistook [sic] you for him.

Barnard.

Truly,

The Chancellor, and I, it hath been notic'd
Are of one stature.

Fernandez.

And Don Curio's Gripe too

Had lent a guttural Music to vour voice,

230

Before 211.

Fortune! Plague take her for a blind old Baggage!

That such a patch as Barnard should have had

The Honour to have sav'd our General's life.

That Barnard! that mock-man! that clumsy forgery

Of Heaven's Image. Any other heart

But mine own would have turn'd splenetic to think of it.

M.S. erased.

A sort of bagpipe Buz, that suited well
Your dignity of utterance.

Barnard (simpering courteously). Don Fernandez,
Few are the storms that bring unmingled evil. 234
Fernandez (mocking him). 'Tis an ill wind, that blows no good, Sieur Barnard! [Exit.

DON CURIO lingering behind.

Don Curio. I have offended you, my brother.

Earl H. Yes!

For you've not learnt the noblest part of valour,
To suffer and obey. Drums put in cases,
Colours wound up—what means this Mummery?
We are sunk low indeed, if wrongs like our's 240
Must seek redress in impotent Freaks of Anger.
(This way, Don Sandoval) of boyish anger——

(Walks with SANDOVAL to the back of the Stage.)

Don Curio (to himself). Freaks! freaks! But what if they have sav'd from bursting

The swelling heart of one, whose Cup of Hope
Was savagely dash'd down—even from his lips?— 245
Permitted just to see the face of War,
Then like a truant boy, scourgd home again
One Field my whole Campaign! One glorious Battle
To madden one with Hope!—Did he not pause
Twice in the fight, and press me to his breastplate, 250
And cry, that all might hear him, Well done, brother!
No blessed Soul, just naturalized in Heaven,
Pac'd ever by the side of an Immortal
More proudly, Henry! than I fought by thine— 254
Shame on these tears!—this, too, is boyish anger! [Exit.

EARL HENRY and SANDOVAL return to the front of the stage.

Earl Henry. I spake more harshly to him, than need was.

Sandoval. Observ'd you how he pull'd his beaver down—
Doubtless to hide the tears, he could not check.

Earl Henry. Go, sooth [sic] him, Friend!—And having reach'd the Castle
Gain Oropeza's private ear, and tell her 260
Where you have left me.

(As SANDOVAL is going)

Nay, stay awhile with me.

I am too full of dreams to meet her now.

Sandoval. You lov'd the daughter of Don Manrique?

Earl Henry.

Loved?

Sandoval. Did you not say, you woo'd her?

Earl Henry.

Once I lov'd

Her whom I dar'd not woo!—

Sandoval.

And woo'd perchance 265

One whom you lov'd not!

Earl Henry.

O I were most base

Not loving Oropeza. True, I woo'd her

Hoping to heal a deeper wound: but she

Met my advances with an empassion'd Pride

That kindled Love with Love. And when her Sire 270

Who in his dream of Hope already grasp'd

The golden circlet in his hand, rejected

My suit, with Insult, and in memory

Of ancient Feuds, pour'd Curses on my head,

Her Blessings overtook and baffled them. 275

But thou art stern, and with unkindling Countenance
Art inly reasoning whilst thou listenest to me.

Sandoval. Anxiously, Henry! reasoning anxiously.

But Oropeza—

Earl Henry. Blessings gather round her!

Within this wood there winds a secret passage, 280

Beneath the walls, which open out at length

Into the gloomiest covert of the Garden.—

The night ere my departure to the Army,

She, nothing trembling, led me through that gloom,

And to the covert by a silent stream, 285

Which, with one star reflected near its marge,

Was the sole object visible around me.

The night so dark, so close, the umbrage o'er us!

No leaflet stirr'd;—yet pleasure hung upon us,

The gloom and stillness of the balmy night-air. 290

A little further on an arbor stood,

Fragrant with flowering Trees—I well remember

What an uncertain glimmer in the Darkness

Their snow-white Blossoms made—thither she led me,

To that sweet bower! Then Oropeza trembled—
I heard her heart beat—if 'twere not my own. 295

Sandoval. A rude and scaring note, my friend!

Earl Henry. Oh! no!

I have small memory of aught but pleasure.
The inquietudes of fear, like lesser Streams
Still flowing, still were lost in those of Love: 300
So Love grew mightier from the Fear, and Nature,
Fleeing from Pain, shelter'd herself in Joy.
The stars above our heads were dim and steady,
Like eyes suffus'd with rapture. Life was in us:
We were all life, each atom of our Frames 305
A living soul—I vow'd to die for her:
With the faint voice of one who, having spoken,
Relapses into blessedness, I vow'd it:
That solemn Vow, a whisper scarcely heard,
A murmur breath'd against a lady's Cheek. 310
Oh! there is Joy above the name of Pleasure,
Deep self-possession, an intense Repose.
No other than as Eastern Sages feign,
The God, who floats upon a Lotos Leaf,
Dreams for a thousand ages; then awaking, 315
Creates a world, and smiling at the bubble,
Relapses into bliss. Ah! was that bliss
Fear'd as an alien, and too vast for man?
For suddenly, intolerant of its silence,
Did Oropeza, starting, grasp my forehead. 320
I caught her arms; the veins were swelling on them.
Thro' the dark Bower she sent a hollow voice;—
'Oh! what if all betray me? what if thou?'
I swore, and with an inward thought that seemed

Sandoval (alone). O Henry! always striv'st thou to be great
 By thine own act—yet art thou never great
 But by the Inspiration of great Passion.
 The Whirl-blast comes, the desert-sands rise up
 And shape themselves; from Heaven to Earth they stand
 As though they were the Pillars of a Temple, 340
 Built by Omnipotence in its own honour!
 But the Blast pauses, and their shaping spirit
 Is fled: the mighty Columns were but sand,
 And lazy Snakes trail o'er the level ruins!
 I know, he loves the Queen. I know she is 345
 His Soul's first love, and this is ever his nature—
 To his first purpose, his soul toiling back
 Like the poor storm-wreck'd [sailor] to his Boat,
 Still swept away, still struggling to regain it. [Exit.

Herreras. He dies, that stirs! Follow me this instant. 350 (First Conspirator takes his arrow, snaps it, and throws it on the ground. The two others do the same.)

Herreras. Accursed cowards! I'll go myself, and make sure work (drawing his Dagger).

(HERRERAS strides towards the arbor, before he reaches it, stops and listens and then returns hastily to the front of the stage, as he turns his Back to the Arbor, EARL HENRY appears, watching the Conspirators, and enters the Arbor unseen.)

First Conspirator. Has she seen us think you?

The Mask. No! she has not seen us; but she heard us distinctly. 354

Herreras. There was a rustling in the wood—go, all of you, stand on the watch—towards the passage.

A Voice from the Arbor. Mercy! Mercy! Tell me, why you murder me.

Herreras. I'll do it first. (Strides towards the Arbor, EARL HENRY rushes out of it.)

The Mask. Jesu Maria. (They all three fly, EARL HENRY attempts to seize HERRERAS, who defending himself retreats into the Covert follow'd by the EARL. THE QUEEN comes from out the arbor, veiled—stands listening a moment, then lifts up her veil, with folded hands assumes the attitude of Prayer, and after a momentary silence breaks into audible soliloquy.)

The Queen. I pray'd to thee, All-wonderful! And thou
 Didst make my very Prayer the Instrument, 362
 By which thy Providence sav'd me. Th' armed Murderer
 Who with suspended breath stood listening to me,
 Groan'd as I spake thy name. In that same moment, 365
 O God! thy Mercy shot the swift Remorse
 That pierc'd his Heart. And like an Elephant
 Gor'd as he rushes to the first assault,
 He turn'd at once and trampled his Employers.
 But hark! (drops her veil)—O God in Heaven! they come again. 370

(EARL HENRY returns with the Dagger in his hand.)

Earl Henry (as he is entering). The violent pull with which I seiz'd his Dagger
 Unpois'd me and I fell.

CHAMOUNY; THE HOUR BEFORE SUNRISE

A HYMN

[Vide ante, p. 376.][As published in The Morning Post, Sept. 11, 1802]

HAST thou a charm to stay the morning star
 In his steep course—so long he seems to pause
 On thy bald awful head, O Chamouny!
 The Arvè and Arveiron at thy base
 Rave ceaselessly; but thou, dread mountain form,
 Resist from forth thy silent sea of pines
 How silently! Around thee, and above,
 Deep is the sky, and black: transpicuous, deep,
 An ebon mass! Methinks thou piercest it
 As with a wedge! But when I look again,
 It seems thy own calm home, thy crystal shrine,
 Thy habitation from eternity.
 O dread and silent form! I gaz'd upon thee,
 Till thou, still present to my bodily eye,
 Did'st vanish from my thought. Entranc'd in pray'r,
 I worshipp'd the INVISIBLE alone.
 Yet thou, meantime, wast working on my soul,
 E'en like some deep enchanting melody,
 So sweet, we know not, we are list'ning to it.
 But I awoke, and with a busier mind,
 And active will self-conscious, offer now
 Not, as before, involuntary pray'r
 And passive adoration!—

Hand and voice,
 Awake, awake! and thou, my heart, awake!
 Awake ye rocks! Ye forest pines, awake!
 Green fields, and icy cliffs! All join my hymn!
 And thou, O silent mountain, sole and bare,
 O blacker, than the darkness, all the night,
 And visited, all night, by troops of stars.
 Or when they climb the sky, or when they sink—
 Companion of the morning star at dawn,
 Thyself Earth's rosy star, and of the dawn
 Co-herald! Wake, O wake, and utter praise!
 Who sank thy sunless pillars deep in earth?
 Who fill'd thy countenance with rosy light?
 Who made thee father of perpetual streams?
 And you, ye five wild torrents, fiercely glad,

Who call'd you forth from Night and utter Death?
 From darkness let you loose, and icy dens,
 Down those precipitous, black, jagged rocks 40
 For ever shatter'd, and the same for ever!
 Who gave you your invulnerable life,
 Your strength, your speed, your fury, and your joy,
 Unceasing thunder, and eternal foam!
 And who commanded, and the silence came— 45
 'Here shall the billows stiffen, and have rest?'

Ye ice-falls! ye that from yon dizzy heights
 Adown enormous ravines steeply slope,
 Torrents, methinks, that heard a mighty voice,
 And stopp'd at once amid their maddest plunge! 50
 Motionless torrents! silent cataracts!
 Who made you glorious, as the gates of Heav'n,
 Beneath the keen full moon? Who bade the sun
 Clothe you with rainbows? Who with lovely flow'rs
 Of living blue spread garlands at your feet? 55
 God! God! The torrents like a shout of nations,
 Utter! The ice-plain bursts, and answers God!
 God, sing the meadow-streams with gladsome voice,
 And pine groves with their soft, and soul-like sound,
 The silent snow-mass, loos'ning, thunders God! 60
 Ye dreadless flow'rs! that fringe th' eternal frost!
 Ye wild goats, bounding by the eagle's nest!
 Ye eagles, playmates of the mountain blast!
 Ye lightnings, the dread arrows of the clouds!
 Ye signs and wonders of the element, 65
 Utter forth, God! and fill the hills with praise!

And thou, O silent Form, alone and bare,
 Whom, as I lift again my head bow'd low
 In adoration, I again behold,
 And to thy summit upward from thy base 70
 Sweep slowly with dim eyes suffus'd by tears,
 Awake, thou mountain form! rise, like a cloud!
 Rise, like a cloud of incense, from the earth!
 Thou kingly spirit thron'd among the hills,
 Thou dread ambassador from Earth to Heav'n— 75
 Great hierarch, tell thou the silent sky,
 And tell the stars, and tell the rising sun,
 Earth with her thousand voices calls on God!

DEJECTION: AN ODE<sup>1</sup>[Vide ante, p. 362.][As first printed in the Morning Post, October 4, 1802.]

 "We shall have a deadly storm."<sup>2</sup>

BALLAD OF SIR PATRICK SPENCE.

DEJECTION:

AN ODE, WRITTEN APRIL 4, 1802.

I

WELL! If the Bard was weather-wise, who made
 The grand Old ballad of SIR PATRICK SPENCE,
 This night, so tranquil now, will not go hence
 Unrous'd by winds, that ply a busier trade
 Than those, which mould yon cloud, in lazy flakes,
 Or the dull sobbing draft, that drones and rakes
 Upon the strings of this Æolian lute,
 Which better far were mute.
 For lo! the New Moon, winter-bright!
 And overspread with phantom light,

<sup>1</sup> Collated with the text of the poem as sent to W. Sotheby in a letter dated July 19, 1802 (Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 379-84).

<sup>2</sup> In the letter of July 19, 1802, the Ode is broken up and quoted in parts or fragments, illustrative of the mind and feelings of the writer. 'Sickness,' he explains, 'first forced me into downright metaphysics. For I believe that by nature I have more of the poet in me. In a poem written during that dejection, to Wordsworth, I thus expressed the thought in language more forcible than harmonious.' Then follow lines 76-87 of the text, followed by lines 87-93 of the text first published in Sibylline Leaves ('For not to think of what I needs must feel,' &c.). He then reverts to the 'introduction of the poem':—'The first lines allude to a stanza in the Ballad of Sir Patrick Spence: "Late, late yestreen I saw the new moon with the old one in her arms: and I fear, I fear, my master dear, there will be a deadly Storm."' This serves as a motto to lines 1-75 and 129-39 of the first draft of the text. Finally he 'annexes as a fragment a few lines (ll. 88-119) on the "Æolian Lute", it having been introduced in its dronings in the first stanzas.'

 And O! that even now the gust were swelling, 15
 And the slant night-show'r driving loud and fast!
 Those sounds which oft have rais'd me, while they aw'd,
 And sent my soul abroad,
 Might now perhaps their wonted impulse give,
 Might startle this dull pain, and make it move and live! 20

A grief without a pang, void, dark, and drear,
 A stifled, drowsy, unimpassion'd grief,
 Which finds no nat'ral outlet, no relief,
 In word, or sigh, or tear—
 O EDMUND! in this wan and heartless mood, 25
 To other thoughts by yonder throstle woo'd,
 All this long eve, so balmy and serene,
 Have I been gazing on the Western sky,
 And its peculiar tint of yellow-green:
 And still I gaze—and with how blank an eye! 30
 And those thin clouds above, in flakes and bars,
 That give away their motion to the stars;
 Those stars, that glide behind them, or between,
 Now sparkling, now bedimm'd, but always seen;
 Yon crescent moon, as fix'd as if it grew, 35
 In its own cloudless, starless lake of blue,
 A boat becalm'd! a lovely sky-canoe!
 I see them all so excellently fair—
 I see, not feel how beautiful they are!

This William, well thou knowest,
 Is that sore evil which I dread the most,
 And oftneft suffer. In this heartless mood,
 To other thoughts by yonder throstle woo'd,
 That pipes within the larch-tree, not unseen,
 The larch, that pushes out in tassels green
 Its bundled leafits, woo'd to mild delights,
 By all the tender sounds and gentle sights,
 Of this sweet primrose-month, and vainly woo'd!
 O dearest Poet, in this heartless mood. Letter to S.

III

My genial spirits fail;
 And what can these avail,
 To lift the smoth'ring weight from off my breast?
 It were a vain endeavour,
 Though I should gaze for ever
 On that green light that lingers in the west: 40
 I may not hope from outward forms to win 45
 The passion and the life, whose fountains are within.

IV

O EDMUND! we receive but what we give,
 And in our life alone does Nature live:
 Ours is her wedding-garment, ours her shroud! 50
 And would we aught behold, of higher worth,
 Than that inanimate cold world, allow'd
 To the poor loveless ever-anxious crowd,
 Ah! from the soul itself must issue forth,
 A light, a glory, a fair luminous cloud 55
 Enveloping the earth—
 And from the soul itself must there be sent
 A sweet and potent voice, of its own birth,
 Of all sweet sounds the life and element!
 O pure of heart! Thou need'st not ask of me 60
 What this strong music in the soul may be?
 What, and wherein it doth exist,
 This light, this glory, this fair luminous mist,
 This beautiful and beauty-making pow'r?
 Joy, virtuous EDMUND! joy that ne'er was given, 65
 Save to the pure, and in their purest hour,
 Joy, EDMUND! is the spirit and the pow'r,
 Which wedding Nature to us gives in dow'r,
 A new Earth and new Heaven,
 Undream'd of by the sensual and the proud— 70
 Joy is the sweet voice, Joy the luminous cloud—
 We, we ourselves rejoice!
 And thence flows all that charms or ear or sight,
 All melodies the echoes of that voice,
 All colours a suffusion from that light. 75

Yes, dearest EDMUND, yes!

There was a time that, tho' my path was rough,

This joy within me dallied with distress,
And all misfortunes were but as the stuff

Whence fancy made me dreams of happiness: 80

For hope grew round me, like the twining vine,
And fruits, and foliage, not my own, seem'd mine.

But now afflictions bow me down to earth:

Nor care I, that they rob me of my mirth,

But oh! each visitation 85

Suspends what nature gave me at my birth,

My shaping spirit of imagination.

Of agony, by torture, lengthen'd out,

That lute sent forth! O wind, that rav'st without,

Bare crag, or mountain-tairn<sup>1</sup>, or blasted tree, 95

Or pine-grove, whither woodman never clomb,

Or lonely house, long held the witches' home,

Methinks were fitter instruments for thee,

Of dark-brown gardens, and of peeping flow'rs,

LINES COMPOSED, FOR THE GREATER PART ON THE NIGHT,
 ON WHICH HE FINISHED THE RECITATION OF HIS POEM
 (IN THIRTEEN BOOKS) CONCERNING THE GROWTH
 AND HISTORY OF HIS OWN MIND

JAN<sup>R</sup><sub>Y</sub>, 1807. COLE-ORTON, NEAR ASHEY DE LA ZOUCH.

O FRIEND! O Teacher! God's great Gift to me!
 Into my heart have I receiv'd that Lay,
 More than historic, that prophetic Lay,
 Wherein (high theme by Thee first sung aright)
 Of the Foundations and the Building-up
 Of thy own Spirit, thou hast lov'd to tell
 What may be told, to th' understanding mind
 Revealable; and what within the mind
 May rise enkindled. Theme as hard as high!
 Of Smiles spontaneous, and mysterious Feard;
 (The First-born they of Reason, and Twin-birth)
 Of Tides obedient to external Force,
 And currents self-determin'd, as might seem,
 Or by interior Power: of Moments awful,
 Now in thy hidden Life; and now abroad,
 Mid festive Crowds, thy Brows too garlanded,
 A Brother of the Feas: of Fancies fair,
 Hyblean Murmurs of poetic Thought,
 Industrious in its Joy, by liliated Streams
 Native or outland, Lakes and famous Hills!

Now first printed from an original MS. in the possession of Mr. Gordon Wordsworth.

Of more than Fancy, of the Hope of Man
 Amid the tremor of a Realm aglow—
 Where France in all her Towns lay vibrating,
 Ev'n as a Bark becalm'd on sultry seas
 Beneath the voice from Heaven, the bursting Crash 25
 Of Heaven's immediate thunder! when no Cloud
 Is visible, or Shadow on the Main!
 Ah! soon night roll'd on night, and every Cloud
 Open'd its eye of Fire: and Hope aloft
 Now flutter'd, and now toss'd upon the Storm 30
 Floating! Of Hope afflicted, and struck down,
 Thence summon'd homeward—homeward to thy Heart,
 Oft from the Watch-tower of Man's absolute Self,
 With Light unwaning on her eyes, to look
 Far on—herself a Glory to behold, 35
 The Angel of the Vision! Then (last strain!)
 Of Duty, chosen Laws controlling choice,
 Virtue and Love! An Orphic Tale indeed,
 A Tale divine of high and passionate Thoughts
 To their own music chaunted!

Ah great Bard!

Ere yet that last Swell dying aw'd the Air,
 With stedfast ken I view'd thee in the Choir
 Of ever-enduring Men. The truly Great
 Have all one Age, and from one visible space
 Shed influence: for they, both power and act, 45
 Are permanent, and Time is not with them,
 Save as it worketh for them, they in it.
 Nor less a sacred Roll, than those of old,
 And to be plac'd, as they, with gradual fame
 Among the Archives of mankind, thy Work 50
 Makes audible a linked Song of Truth,
 Of Truth profound a sweet continuous Song
 Not learnt, but native, her own natural Notes!
 Dear shall it be to every human Heart,
 To me how more than dearest! Me, on whom 55
 Comfort from Thee and utterance of thy Love
 Came with such heights and depths of Harmony
 Such sense of Wings uplifting, that the Storm
 Scatter'd and whirl'd me, till my Thoughts became
 A bodily Tumult! and thy faithful Hopes,
 Thy Hopes of me, dear Friend! by me unfelt 60

Were troublous to me, almost as a Voice
 Familiar once and more than musical
 To one cast forth, whose hope had seem'd to die,
 A Wanderer with a worn-out heart, [sic] 65
 Mid Strangers pining with untended Wounds!

O Friend! too well thou know'st, of what sad years
 The long suppression had benumb'd my soul,
 That even as Life returns upon the Drown'd,
 Th' unusual Joy awoke a throng of Pains— 70
 Keen Pangs of LOVE, awakening, as a Babe,
 Turbulent, with an outcry in the Heart:
 And Fears self-will'd, that shunn'd the eye of Hope,
 And Hope, that would not know itself from Fear:
 Sense of pass'd Youth, and Manhood come in vain; 75
 And Genius given, and knowledge won in vain;
 And all, which I had cull'd in Wood-walks wild,
 And all, which patient Toil had rear'd, and all,
 Commune with Thee had open'd out, but Flowers
 Strew'd on my Corse, and borne upon my Bier, 80
 In the same Coffin, for the self-same Grave!

That way no more! and ill beseems it me,
 Who came a Welcomer in Herald's guise
 Singing of Glory and Futurity,
 To wander back on such unhealthful Road 85
 Plucking the Poisons of Self-harm! and ill
 Such Intertwine beseems triumphal wreaths
 Strew'd before thy Advancing! Thou too, Friend!
 O injure not the memory of that Hour
 Of thy communion with my nobler mind 90
 By pity or grief, already felt too long!
 Nor let my words import more blame than needs.
 The Tumult rose and ceas'd: for Peace is nigh
 Where Wisdom's Voice has found a list'ning Heart.
 Amid the howl of more than wintry Storms 95
 The Halcyon hears the voice of vernal Hours,
 Already on the wing!

Eve following eve,
 Dear tranquil Time, when the sweet sense of Home
 Becomes most sweet! hours for their own sake hail'd,
 And more desir'd, more precious, for thy song! 100
 In silence list'ning, like a devout Child,
 My soul lay passive; by thy various strain

Driven as in surges now, beneath the stars,
 With momentary Stars of my own Birth,
 Fair constellated Foam still darting off 105
 Into the darkness! now a tranquil Sea
 Outspread and bright, yet swelling to the Moon!

And when O Friend! my Comforter! my Guide!
 Strong in thyself and powerful to give strength!
 Thy long sustained Lay finally clos'd, 110
 And thy deep Voice had ceas'd (yet thou thyself
 Wert still before mine eyes, and round us both
 That happy Vision of beloved Faces!
 All, whom I deepliest love, in one room all!),
 Scarce conscious and yet conscious of it's Close, 115
 I sate, my Being blended in one Thought,
 (Thought was it? or aspiration? or Resolve?)
 Absorb'd, yet hanging still upon the sound:
 And when I rose, I found myself in Prayer!

ALLEGORIC VISION <sup>1</sup>

A FEELING of sadness, a peculiar melancholy, is wont to take possession of me alike in Spring and in Autumn. But in Spring it is the melancholy of Hope: in Autumn it is the melancholy of Resignation. As I was journeying on foot through the Appennine, I fell in with a pilgrim in whom the Spring and 5 the Autumn and the Melancholy of both seemed to have combined. In his discourse there were the freshness and the colours of April:

Qual ramiceil a ramo,
Tal da pensier pensiero
In lui germogliava.

<sup>1</sup> First published in The Courier, Saturday, August 31, 1811: included in 1829, 1834-5, &c. (3 vols.), and in 1844 (1 vol.). Lines 1-56 were first published as part of the 'Introduction' to A Lay Sermon, &c., 1817, pp. xix-xxxi.

The 'Allegoric Vision' dates from August, 1795. It served as a kind of preface or prologue to Coleridge's first Theological Lecture on 'The Origin of Evil. The Necessity of Revelation deduced from the Nature of Man. An Examination and Defence of the Mosaic Dispensation' (see Cottle's Early Recollections, 1837, i. 27). The purport of these Lectures was to uphold the golden mean of Unitarian orthodoxy as opposed to the Church on the one hand, and infidelity or materialism on the other. 'Superstition' stood for and symbolized the Church of England. Sixteen years later this opening portion of an unpublished Lecture was rewritten and printed in The Courier (Aug. 31, 1811), with the heading 'An Allegoric Vision: Superstition, Religion, Atheism'. The attack was now diverted from the Church of England to the Church of Rome. 'Men clad in black robes,' intent on gathering in their Tenth, become 'men clothed in ceremonial robes, who with menacing countenances drag some reluctant victim to a vast idol, framed of iron bars intercrossed which formed at the same time an immense cage, and yet represented the form of a human Colossus. At the base of the Statue I saw engraved the words "To Dominic holy and merciful, the preventer and avenger of soul-murder".' The vision was turned into a political jeu d'esprit levelled at the aiders and abettors of Catholic Emancipation, a measure to which Coleridge was more or less opposed as long as he lived. See Constitution of Church and State, 1830, passim. A third adaptation of the 'Allegorical Vision' was affixed to the Introduction to A Lay Sermon: Addressed to the Higher and Middle Classes, which was published in 1817. The first fifty-six lines, which contain a description of Italian mountain scenery, were entirely new, but the rest of the 'Vision' is an amended and softened reproduction of the preface to the Lecture of 1795. The moral he desires to point is the 'falsehood of extremes'. As Religion is the golden mean between Superstition and Atheism, so the righteous government of a righteous people is the mean between a selfish and oppressive aristocracy, and seditious and unbridled

But as I gazed on his whole form and figure, I bethought me of the not unlovely decays, both of age and of the late season, in the stately elm, after the clusters have been plucked from its entwining vines, and the vines are as bands of dried withies around its trunk and branches. Even so there was a memory on his smooth and ample forehead, which blended with the dedication of his steady eyes, that still looked—I know not, whether upward, or far onward, or rather to the line of meeting where the sky rests upon the distance. But how may I express that dimness of abstraction which lay on the lustre of the pilgrim's eyes like the flitting tarnish from the breath of a sigh on a silver mirror! and which accorded with their slow and reluctant movement, whenever he turned them to any object on the right hand or on the left? It seemed, methought, as if there lay upon the brightness a shadowy presence of disappointments now unfelt, but never forgotten. It was at once the melancholy of hope and of resignation.

We had not long been fellow-travellers, ere a sudden tempest of wind and rain forced us to seek protection in the vaulted door-way of a lone chapelry; and we sate face to face each on the stone bench alongside the low, weather-stained wall, and as close as possible to the massy door.

After a pause of silence: even thus, said he, like two strangers that have fled to the same shelter from the same storm, not seldom do Despair and Hope meet for the first time in the porch of Death! All extremes meet, I answered; but yours was a strange and visionary thought. The better then doth it beseech both the place and me, he replied. From a Visionary wilt thou hear a Vision? Mark that vivid flash through this torrent of rain! Fire and water. Even here thy adage holds true, and its truth is the moral of my Vision. I entreated him to proceed. Sloping his face toward the arch and yet averting his eye from it, he seemed to seek and prepare his words: till listening to the wind that echoed within the hollow edifice, and to the rain without,

In the present issue the text of 1834 has been collated with that of 1817 and 1829, but not (exhaustively) with the MS. (1795), or at all with the Courier version of 1811.

he gradually sank away, alike from me and from his own purpose, and amid the gloom of the storm and in the duskiness of that 50 place, he sate like an emblem on a rich man's sepulchre, or like a mourner on the sodded grave of an only one—an aged mourner, who is watching the waned moon and sorroweth not. Starting at length from his brief trance of abstraction, with courtesy and an atoning smile he renewed his discourse, and commenced his 55 parable.

During one of those short furloughs from the service of the body, which the soul may sometimes obtain even in this its militant state, I found myself in a vast plain, which I immediately knew to be the Valley of Life. It possessed an 60 astonishing diversity of soils: here was a sunny spot, and there a dark one, forming just such a mixture of sunshine and shade, as we may have observed on the mountains' side in an April day, when the thin broken clouds are scattered over heaven. Almost in the very entrance of the valley stood 65 a large and gloomy pile, into which I seemed constrained to enter. Every part of the building was crowded with tawdry ornaments and fantastic deformity. On every window was portrayed, in glaring and inelegant colours, some horrible tale, or preternatural incident, so that not a ray of light could enter, 70 untinged by the medium through which it passed. The body of the building was full of people, some of them dancing, in and out, in unintelligible figures, with strange ceremonies and antic merriment, while others seemed convulsed with horror, or pining in mad melancholy. Intermingled with these, I observed 75 a number of men, clothed in ceremonial robes, who appeared now to marshal the various groups, and to direct their movements; and now with menacing countenances, to drag some reluctant victim to a vast idol, framed of iron bars intercrossed, which formed at the same time an immense cage, and the shape of a human Colossus.

I stood for a while lost in wonder what these things might mean; when lo! one of the directors came up to me, and with a stern and reproachful look bade me uncover my head, for that the place into which I had entered was the temple of the only true Religion, in the holier recesses of which the great Goddess personally resided. Himself too he bade me reverence, as the consecrated minister of her rites. Awestruck by the name of Religion, I bowed before the priest, and humbly and earnestly intreated him to conduct me into her presence. He assented. Offerings he took from me, with mystic sprinklings of water and with salt he purified, and with strange sufflations he exorcised me; and then led me through many a dark and winding alley, the dew-damps of which chilled my flesh, and the hollow echoes under my feet, mingled, methought, with moanings, affrighted me. At length we entered a large hall, without window, or spiracle, or lamp. The asylum and dormitory it seemed of perennial night—only that the walls were brought to the eye by a number of self-luminous inscriptions in letters of a pale sepulchral light, which held strange neutrality with the darkness, on the verge of which it kept its rayless vigil. I could read them, methought; but though each of the words taken separately I seemed to understand, yet when I took them in sentences, they were riddles and incomprehensible. As I stood meditating on these hard sayings, my guide thus addressed me—‘Read and believe: these are mysteries!’—At the extremity of the vast hall the Goddess was placed. Her features, blended with darkness, rose out to my view, terrible, yet vacant. I prostrated myself before her, and then retired with my guide, soul-withered, and wondering, and dissatisfied.

As I re-entered the body of the temple I heard a deep buzz as of discontent. A few whose eyes were bright, and either

It was made half visible by the wan phosphoric rays which proceeded from inscriptions on the walls, in letters of the same pale and sepulchral light. piercing or steady, and whose ample forehead, with the weighty bar, ridge-like, above the eyebrows, bespoke observation followed by meditative thought; and a much larger number, who were 115 enraged by the severity and insolence of the priests in exacting their offerings, had collected in one tumultuous group, and with a confused outcry of 'This is the Temple of Superstition!' after much contumely, and turmoil, and cruel mal-treatment on all sides, rushed out of the pile: and I, methought, joined them. 120

We speeded from the Temple with hasty steps, and had now nearly gone round half the valley, when we were addressed by a woman, tall beyond the stature of mortals, and with a something more than human in her countenance and mien, which yet could by mortals be only felt, not conveyed by words or 125 intelligibly distinguished. Deep reflection, animated by ardent feelings, was displayed in them: and hope, without its uncertainty, and a something more than all these, which I understood not, but which yet seemed to blend all these into a divine unity of expression. Her garments were white and matronly, and of 130 the simplest texture. We inquired her name. 'My name,' she replied, 'is Religion.'

The more numerous part of our company, affrighted by the very sound, and sore from recent impostures or sorceries, hurried onwards and examined no farther. A few of us, struck 135 by the manifest opposition of her form and manners to those of the living Idol, whom we had so recently abjured, agreed to follow her, though with cautious circumspection. She led us to an eminence in the midst of the valley, from the top of which we could command the whole plain, and observe the relation of 140 the different parts to each other, and of each to the whole, and of all to each. She then gave us an optic glass which assisted without contradicting our natural vision, and enabled us to see far beyond the limits of the Valley of Life; though our eye even thus assisted permitted us only to behold a light and 145 a glory, but what we could not descry, save only that it was, and that it was most glorious.

And now with the rapid transition of a dream, I had overtaken and rejoined the more numerous party, who had abruptly left us, indignant at the very name of religion. They journed 150 on, goading each other with remembrances of past oppressions, and never looking back, till in the eagerness to recede from the Temple of Superstition they had rounded the whole circle of the valley. And lo! there faced us the mouth of a vast cavern, at the base of a lofty and almost perpendicular rock, the interior 155 side of which, unknown to them and unsuspected, formed the extreme and backward wall of the Temple. An impatient crowd, we entered the vast and dusky cave, which was the only perforation of the precipice. At the mouth of the cave sate

 160 two figures ; the first, by her dress and gestures, I knew to be Sensuality ; the second form, from the fierceness of his demeanour, and the brutal scornfulness of his looks, declared himself to be the monster Blasphemy. He uttered big words, and yet ever and anon I observed that he turned pale at his own
 165 courage. We entered. Some remained in the opening of the cave, with the one or the other of its guardians. The rest, and I among them, pressed on, till we reached an ample chamber, that seemed the centre of the rock. The climate of the place was unnaturally cold.

170 In the furthest distance of the chamber sate an old dim-eyed man, poring with a microscope over the torso of a statue which had neither basis, nor feet, nor head ; but on its breast was carved Nature ! To this he continually applied his glass, and seemed enraptured with the various inequalities which it
 175 rendered visible on the seemingly polished surface of the marble.—Yet evermore was this delight and triumph followed by expressions of hatred, and vehement railing against a Being, who yet, he assured us, had no existence. This mystery suddenly recalled to me what I had read in the holiest recess
 180 of the temple of Superstition. The old man spake in divers tongues, and continued to utter other and most strange mysteries. Among the rest he talked much and vehemently concerning an infinite series of causes and effects, which he explained to be—a string of blind men, the last of whom 185 caught hold of the skirt of the one before him, he of the next, and so on till they were all out of sight ; and that they all walked infallibly straight, without making one false step though all were alike blind. Methought I borrowed courage from surprise, and asked him—Who then is at the head to 190 guide them ? He looked at me with ineffable contempt, not unmixed with an angry suspicion, and then replied, ‘No one.’ The string of blind men went on for ever without any beginning ; for although one blind man could not move without stumbling, yet infinite blindness supplied the want of sight. I burst into 195 laughter, which instantly turned to terror—for as he started forward in rage, I caught a glimpse of him from behind ; and lo ! I beheld a monster bi-form and Janus-headed, in the hinder face and shape of which I instantly recognised the dread countenance of Superstition—and in the terror I awoke.

APOLOGETIC PREFACE TO 'FIRE, FAMINE, AND SLAUGHTER'<sup>1</sup>

At the house of a gentleman<sup>2</sup> who by the principles and corresponding virtues of a sincere Christian consecrates a cultivated genius and the favourable accidents of birth, opulence, and splendid connexions, it was my good fortune to meet, in a dinner-party, with more men of celebrity in science or polite literature than are commonly found collected round the same table. In the course of conversation, one of the party reminded an illustrious poet [Scott], then present, of some verses which he had recited that morning, and which had appeared in a newspaper under the name of a War-Eclogue, in which Fire, 5
Famine, and Slaughter were introduced as the speakers. The gentleman so addressed replied, that he was rather surprised that none of us should have noticed or heard of the poem, as it had been, at the time, a good deal talked of in Scotland. It may be easily supposed that my feelings were at this moment 15 not of the most comfortable kind. Of all present, one only [Sir H. Davy] knew, or suspected me to be the author; a man who would have established himself in the first rank of England's living poets<sup>3</sup>, if the Genius of our country had not decreed that

<sup>1</sup> First published in Sibylline Leaves in 1817: included in 1828, 1829, and 1834. The 'Apologetic Preface' must have been put together in 1815, with a view to publication in the volume afterwards named Sibylline Leaves, but the incident on which it turns most probably took place in the spring of 1803, when both Scott and Coleridge were in London. Davy writing to Poole, May 1, 1803, says that he generally met Coleridge during his stay in town, 'in the midst of large companies, where he was the image of power and activity,' and Davy, as we know, was one of Sotheby's guests. In a letter to Mrs. Fletcher dated Dec. 18, 1830 (?), Scott tells the story in his own words, but throws no light on date or period. The implied date (1809) in Morritt's report of Dr. Howley's conversation (Lockhart's Life of Scott, 1837, ii. 245) is out of the question, as Coleridge did not leave the Lake Country between Sept. 1808 and October 1810. Coleridge set great store by 'his own stately account of this lion-show' (ibid.). In a note in a MS. copy of Sibylline Leaves presented to his son Derwent he writes:—'With the exception of this slovenly sentence' (ll. 109-19) I hold this preface to be my happiest effort in prose composition.'

<sup>2</sup> William Sotheby (1756-1833), translator of Wieland's Oberon and the Georgics of Virgil. Coleridge met him for the first time at Keswick in July, 1802.

<sup>3</sup> 'The compliment I can witness to be as just as it is handsomely recorded,' Sir W. Scott to Mrs. Fletcher, Fragmentary Remains of Sir H. Davy, 1858, p. 113.

20 he should rather be the first in the first rank of its philosophers and scientific benefactors. It appeared the general wish to hear the lines. As my friend chose to remain silent, I chose to follow his example, and Mr. . . . . [Scott] recited the poem. This he could do with the better grace, being known to have
 25 ever been not only a firm and active Anti-Jacobin and Anti-Gallican, but likewise a zealous admirer of Mr. Pitt, both as a good man and a great statesman. As a poet exclusively, he had been amused with the Eclogue; as a poet he recited it; and in a spirit which made it evident that he would have read
 30 and repeated it with the same pleasure had his own name been attached to the imaginary object or agent.

After the recitation our amiable host observed that in his opinion Mr. . . . . had over-rated the merits of the poetry; but had they been tenfold greater, they could not have com-
 35 pensated for that malignity of heart which could alone have prompted sentiments so atrocious. I perceived that my illustrious friend became greatly distressed on my account; but fortunately I was able to preserve fortitude and presence of mind enough to take up the subject without exciting even 40 a suspicion how nearly and painfully it interested me.

What follows is the substance of what I then replied, but dilated and in language less colloquial. It was not my intention, I said, to justify the publication, whatever its author's feelings might have been at the time of composing it. That they are 45 calculated to call forth so severe a reprobation from a good man, is not the worst feature of such poems. Their moral deformity is aggravated in proportion to the pleasure which they are capable of affording to vindictive, turbulent, and unprincipled readers. Could it be supposed, though for a moment, that the
 50 author seriously wished what he had thus wildly imagined, even the attempt to palliate an inhumanity so monstrous would be an insult to the hearers. But it seemed to me worthy of consideration, whether the mood of mind and the general state of sensations in which a poet produces such vivid and fantastic
 55 images, is likely to co-exist, or is even compatible with, that gloomy and deliberate ferocity which a serious wish to realize them would pre-suppose. It had been often observed, and all my experience tended to confirm the observation, that prospects of pain and evil to others, and in general all deep feelings of 60 revenge, are commonly expressed in a few words, ironically tame, and mild. The mind under so direful and fiend-like an influence seems to take a morbid pleasure in contrasting the intensity of its wishes and feelings with the slightness or levity of the expressions by which they are hinted ; and indeed feelings so intense and solitary, if they were not precluded (as in almost all cases they would be) by a constitutional activity of fancy and association, and by the specific joyousness combined with it, would assuredly themselves preclude such activity. Passion, in its own quality, is the antagonist of action ; though in an ordinary and natural degree the former alternates with the latter, and thereby revives and strengthens it. But the more intense and insane the passion is, the fewer and the more fixed are the correspondent forms and notions. A rooted hatred, an inveterate thirst of revenge, is a sort of madness, and still eddies round its favourite object, and exercises as it were a perpetual tautology of mind in thoughts and words which admit of no adequate substitutes. Like a fish in a globe of glass, it moves restlessly round and round the scanty circumference, which it cannot leave without losing its vital element.

There is a second character of such imaginary representations as spring from a real and earnest desire of evil to another, which we often see in real life, and might even anticipate from the nature of the mind. The images, I mean, that a vindictive man places before his imagination, will most often be taken from the realities of life : they will be images of pain and suffering which he has himself seen inflicted on other men, and which he can fancy himself as inflicting on the object of his hatred. I will suppose that we had heard at different times two common sailors, each speaking of some one who had wronged or offended him : that the first with apparent violence had devoted every part of his adversary's body and soul to all the horrid phantoms and fantastic places that ever Quevedo dreamt of, and this in a rapid flow of those outrageous and wildly combined execrations, which too often with our lower classes serve for escape-valves to carry off the excess of their passions, as so much superfluous steam that would endanger the vessel if it were retained. The other, on the contrary, with that sort of calmness of tone which is to the ear what the paleness of anger is to the eye, shall simply say, 'If I chance to be made boatswain, as I hope I soon shall, and can but once get that fellow under my hand (and I shall be upon the watch for him), I'll tickle his pretty skin ! I won't hurt him ! oh no ! I'll only cut the — — to the liver !' I dare appeal to all present, which of the two they would regard as the least deceptive symptom of deliberate malignity ? nay, whether it would surprise them to see the first fellow, an hour or two afterwards, cordially shaking hands with the very man the fractional parts of whose body and soul he had been so charitably disposing of ; or even perhaps risking his life for him ? What language Shakespeare 110 considered characteristic of malignant disposition we see in the speech of the good-natured Gratiano, who spoke 'an infinite deal of nothing more than any man in all Venice' ;

—Too wild, too rude and bold of voice !

the skipping spirit, whose thoughts and words reciprocally ran 115 away with each other ;

—O be thou damn'd, inexorable dog !
 And for thy life let justice be accused !

and the wild fancies that follow, contrasted with Shylock's tranquil 'I stand here for Law'.

120 Or, to take a case more analogous to the present subject, should we hold it either fair or charitable to believe it to have been Dante's serious wish that all the persons mentioned by him (many recently departed, and some even alive at the time,) should actually suffer the fantastic and horrible punishments to 125 which he has sentenced them in his Hell and Purgatory ? Or what shall we say of the passages in which Bishop Jeremy Taylor anticipates the state of those who, vicious themselves, have been the cause of vice and misery to their fellow-creatures ? Could we endure for a moment to think that a spirit, like
 130 Bishop Taylor's, burning with Christian love ; that a man constitutionally overflowing with pleasurable kindliness ; who scarcely even in a casual illustration introduces the image of woman, child, or bird, but he embalms the thought with so rich a tenderness, as makes the very words seem beauties and
 135 fragments of poetry from Euripides or Simonides ;—can we endure to think, that a man so natured and so disciplined, did at the time of composing this horrible picture, attach a sober feeling of reality to the phrases ? or that he would have described in the same tone of justification, in the same luxuriant
 140 flow of phrases, the tortures about to be inflicted on a living individual by a verdict of the Star-Chamber ? or the still more atrocious sentences executed on the Scotch anti-prelatists and schismatics, at the command, and in some instances under the very eye of the Duke of Lauderdale, and of that wretched bigot
 145 who afterwards dishonoured and forfeited the throne of Great Britain ? Or do we not rather feel and understand, that these violent words were mere bubbles, flashes and electrical apparitions, from the magic cauldron of a fervid and ebullient fancy, constantly fuelled by an unexampled opulence of language ?
 150 Were I now to have read by myself for the first time the poem in question, my conclusion, I fully believe, would be, that the writer must have been some man of warm feelings and active fancy; that he had painted to himself the circumstances that accompany war in so many vivid and yet fantastic forms, as proved that neither the images nor the feelings were the result of observation, or in any way derived from realities. I should judge that they were the product of his own seething imagination, and therefore impregnated with that pleasurable exultation which is experienced in all energetic exertion of intellectual power; that in the same mood he had generalized the causes of the war, and then personified the abstract and christened it by the name which he had been accustomed to hear most often associated with its management and measures. I should guess that the minister was in the author's mind at the moment of composition as completely ἀπαθής, ἀναιμόσαρκος, as Anacreon's grasshopper, and that he had as little notion of a real person of flesh and blood,

Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb,

[Paradise Lost, II. 668.]

as Milton had in the grim and terrible phantom (half person, half allegory) which he has placed at the gates of Hell. I concluded by observing, that the poem was not calculated to excite passion in any mind, or to make any impression except on poetic readers; and that from the culpable levity betrayed at the close of the eclogue by the grotesque union of epigrammatic wit with allegoric personification, in the allusion to the most fearful of thoughts, I should conjecture that the 'rantin' Bardie', instead of really believing, much less wishing, the fate spoken of in the last line, in application to any human individual, would shrink from passing the verdict even on the Devil himself, and exclaim with poor Burns,

But fare ye weel, auld Nickie-ben!

Oh! wad ye tak a thought an' men!

Ye aiblins might—I dinna ken—

Still hae a stake—

I'm wae to think upon yon den,

Ev'n for your sake!

I need not say that these thoughts, which are here dilated, were in such a company only rapidly suggested. Our kind host smiled, and with a courteous compliment observed, that the defence was too good for the cause. My voice faltered a little, for I was somewhat agitated; though not so much on my own account as for the uneasiness that so kind and friendly a man would feel from the thought that he had been the occasion of distressing me. At length I brought out these words:

195 'I must now confess, sir! that I am author of that poem. It was written some years ago. I do not attempt to justify my past self, young as I then was; but as little as I would now write a similar poem, so far was I even then from imagining that the lines would be taken as more or less than a sport
200 of fancy. At all events, if I know my own heart, there was never a moment in my existence in which I should have been more ready, had Mr. Pitt's person been in hazard, to interpose my own body, and defend his life at the risk of my own.'

I have prefaced the poem with this anecdote, because to have 205 printed it without any remark might well have been understood as implying an unconditional approbation on my part, and this after many years' consideration. But if it be asked why I republished it at all, I answer, that the poem had been attributed at different times to different other persons; and what I had
210 dared beget, I thought it neither manly nor honourable not to dare father. From the same motives I should have published perfect copies of two poems, the one entitled The Devil's Thoughts, and the other, The Two Round Spaces on the Tombstone, but that the three first stanzas of the former, which 215 were worth all the rest of the poem, and the best stanza of the remainder, were written by a friend [Southey] of deserved celebrity; and because there are passages in both which might have given offence to the religious feelings of certain readers. I myself indeed see no reason why vulgar superstitions and 220 absurd conceptions that deform the pure faith of a Christian should possess a greater immunity from ridicule than stories of witches, or the fables of Greece and Rome. But there are those who deem it profaneness and irreverence to call an ape an ape, if it but wear a monk's cowl on its head; and I would rather 225 reason with this weakness than offend it.

The passage from Jeremy Taylor to which I referred is found in his second Sermon on Christ's Advent to Judgment; which is likewise the second in his year's course of sermons. Among many remarkable passages of the same character in those 230 discourses, I have selected this as the most so. 'But when this Lion of the tribe of Judah shall appear, then Justice shall strike, and Mercy shall not hold her hands; she shall strike sore strokes, and Pity shall not break the blow. As there are treasures of good things, so hath God a treasure of wrath and fury, and 235 scourges and scorpions; and then shall be produced the shame of Lust and the malice of Envy, and the groans of the oppressed and the persecutions of the saints, and the cares of Covetousness and the troubles of Ambition, and the insolencies of traitors and the violences of rebels, and the rage of anger and the uneasiness of impatience, and the restlessness of unlawful desires ; and by this time the monsters and diseases will be numerous and intolerable, when God's heavy hand shall press the sanies and the intolerableness, the obliquity and the unreasonableness, the amazement and the disorder, the smart and the sorrow, the guilt and the punishment, out from all our sins, and pour them into one chalice, and mingle them with an infinite wrath, and make the wicked drink off all the vengeance, and force it down their unwilling throats with the violence of devils and accursed spirits.'

That this Tartarean drench displays the imagination rather than the discretion of the compounder ; that, in short, this passage and others of the same kind are in a bad taste, few will deny at the present day. It would, doubtless, have more behoved the good bishop not to be wise beyond what is written on a subject in which Eternity is opposed to Time, and a Death threatened, not the negative, but the positive Opposite of Life ; a subject, therefore, which must of necessity be indescribable to the human understanding in our present state. But I can neither find nor believe that it ever occurred to any reader to ground on such passages a charge against Bishop Taylor's humanity, or goodness of heart. I was not a little surprised therefore to find, in the Pursuits of Literature and other works, so horrible a sentence passed on Milton's moral character, for a passage in his prose writings, as nearly parallel to this of Taylor's as two passages can well be conceived to be. All his merits, as a poet, forsooth—all the glory of having written the Paradise Lost, are light in the scale, nay, kick the beam, compared with the atrocious malignity of heart, expressed in the offensive paragraph. I remembered, in general, that Milton had concluded one of his works on Reformation, written in the fervour of his youthful imagination, in a high poetic strain, that wanted metre only to become a lyrical poem. I remembered that in the former part he had formed to himself a perfect ideal of human virtue, a character of heroic, disinterested zeal and devotion for Truth, Religion, and public Liberty, in act and in suffering, in the day of triumph and in the hour of martyrdom. Such spirits, as more excellent than others, he describes as having a more excellent reward, and as distinguished by a transcendant glory : and this reward and this glory he displays and particularizes with an energy and brilliance that announced the

Paradise Lost as plainly, as ever the bright purple clouds in the east announced the coming of the Sun. Milton then passes to the gloomy contrast, to such men as from motives of selfish ambition and the lust of personal aggrandizement should, against 285 their own light, persecute truth and the true religion, and wilfully abuse the powers and gifts entrusted to them, to bring vice, blindness, misery and slavery, on their native country, on the very country that had trusted, enriched and honoured them. Such beings, after that speedy and appropriate removal from
 290 their sphere of mischief which all good and humane men must of course desire, will, he takes for granted by parity of reason, meet with a punishment, an ignominy, and a retaliation, as much severer than other wicked men, as their guilt and its consequences were more enormous. His description of this
 295 imaginary punishment presents more distinct pictures to the fancy than the extract from Jeremy Taylor; but the thoughts in the latter are incomparably more exaggerated and horrific. All this I knew; but I neither remembered, nor by reference and careful re-perusal could discover, any other meaning, either
 300 in Milton or Taylor, but that good men will be rewarded, and the impenitent wicked punished, in proportion to their dispositions and intentional acts in this life; and that if the punishment of the least wicked be fearful beyond conception, all words and descriptions must be so far true, that they must fall short
 305 of the punishment that awaits the transcendantly wicked. Had Milton stated either his ideal of virtue, or of depravity, as an individual or individuals actually existing? Certainly not! Is this representation worded historically, or only hypothetically? Assuredly the latter! Does he express it as his own
 310 wish that after death they should suffer these tortures? or as a general consequence, deduced from reason and revelation, that such will be their fate? Again, the latter only! His wish is expressly confined to a speedy stop being put by Providence to their power of inflicting misery on others! But did he name
 315 or refer to any persons living or dead? No! But the calumniators of Milton daresay (for what will calumny not dare say?) that he had Laud and Strafford in his mind, while writing of remorseless persecution, and the enslavement of a free country from motives of selfish ambition. Now what if a stern anti-320 prelatist should daresay, that in speaking of the insolencies of traitors and the violences of rebels, Bishop Taylor must have individualised in his mind Hampden, Hollis, Pym, Fairfax, Ireton, and Milton? And what if he should take the liberty of concluding, that, in the after-description, the Bishop was feeding and feasting his party-hatred, and with those individuals before the eyes of his imagination enjoying, trait by trait, horror after horror, the picture of their intolerable agonies? Yet this bigot would have an equal right thus to criminate the one good and great man, as these men have to criminate the other.

Milton has said, and I doubt not but that Taylor with equal truth could have said it, 'that in his whole life he never spake against a man even that his skin should be grazed.' He asserted this when one of his opponents (either Bishop Hall or his nephew) had called upon the women and children in the streets to take up stones and stone him (Milton). It is known that Milton repeatedly used his interest to protect the royalists;
but even at a time when all lies would have been meritorious against him, no charge was made, no story pretended, that he had ever directly or indirectly engaged or assisted in their persecution. Oh! methinks there are other and far better feelings which should be acquired by the perusal of our great elder writers. When I have before me, on the same table, the works of Hammond and Baxter; when I reflect with what joy and dearness their blessed spirits are now loving each other; it seems a mournful thing that their names should be perverted to an occasion of bitterness among us, who are enjoying that happy mean which the human too-much on both sides was perhaps necessary to produce. 'The tangle of delusions which stifled and distorted the growing tree of our well-being has been torn away; the parasite-weeds that fed on its very roots have been plucked up with a salutary violence. To us there remain only quiet duties, the constant care, the gradual improvement, the cautious unhazardous labours of the industrious though contented gardener—to prune, to strengthen, to engraft, and one by one to remove from its leaves and fresh shoots the slug and the caterpillar. But far be it from us to undervalue with light and senseless detraction the conscientious hardihood of our predecessors, or even to condemn in them that vehemence, to which the blessings it won for us leave us now neither temptation nor pretext. We antedate the feelings, in order to criminate the authors, of our present liberty, light and toleration.' (The Friend, No. IV. Sept. 7, 1809.) [1818, i. 105.]

If ever two great men might seem, during their whole lives, to have moved in direct opposition, though neither of them has at any time introduced the name of the other, Milton and Jeremy Taylor were they. The former commenced his career by attacking the Church-Liturgy and all set forms of prayer.
The latter, but far more successfully, by defending both.
Milton's next work was against the Prelacy and the then

370 existing Church-Government—Taylor's in vindication and support of them. Milton became more and more a stern republican, or rather an advocate for that religious and moral aristocracy which, in his day, was called republicanism, and which, even more than royalism itself, is the direct antipode of modern jacobinism.

375 Taylor, as more and more sceptical concerning the fitness of men in general for power, became more and more attached to the prerogatives of monarchy. From Calvinism, with a still decreasing respect for Fathers, Councils, and for Church-antiquity in general, Milton seems to have ended in an indifference, if not a dislike, to all forms of ecclesiastic government, and to have retreated wholly into the inward and spiritual church-communion of his own spirit with the Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world. Taylor, with a growing reverence for authority, an increasing sense of the insufficiency of

385 the Scriptures without the aids of tradition and the consent of authorized interpreters, advanced as far in his approaches (not indeed to Popery, but) to Roman-Catholicism, as a conscientious minister of the English Church could well venture. Milton would be and would utter the same to all on all occasions: he

390 would tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Taylor would become all things to all men, if by any means he might benefit any; hence he availed himself, in his popular writings, of opinions and representations which stand often in striking contrast with the doubts and convictions expressed in his more philosophical works. He appears, indeed,

395 not too severely to have blamed that management of truth (istam falsitatem dispensativam) authorized and exemplified by almost all the fathers: Integrum omnino doctoribus et coetus Christiani antistitibus esse, ut dolos versent, falsa veris inter-

400 misceant et imprimis religionis hostes fallant, dummodo veritatis commodis et utilitati inserviant.

The same antithesis might be carried on with the elements of their several intellectual powers. Milton, austere, condensed, imaginative, supporting his truth by direct enunciation of lofty

405 moral sentiment and by distinct visual representations, and in the same spirit overwhelming what he deemed falsehood by moral denunciation and a succession of pictures appalling or repulsive. In his prose, so many metaphors, so many allegorical miniatures. Taylor, eminently discursive, accumulative,

410 and (to use one of his own words) agglomerative; still more rich in images than Milton himself, but images of fancy, and presented to the common and passive eye, rather than to the eye of the imagination. Whether supporting or assailing, he makes his way either by argument or by appeals to the affections, unsurpassed even by the schoolmen in subtlety, 415 agility, and logic wit, and unrivalled by the most rhetorical of the fathers in the copiousness and vividness of his expressions and illustrations. Here words that convey feelings, and words that flash images, and words of abstract notion, flow together, and whirl and rush onward like a stream, at once rapid and full 420 of eddies; and yet still interfused here and there we see a tongue or islet of smooth water, with some picture in it of earth or sky, landscape or living group of quiet beauty.

Differing then so widely and almost contrariantly, wherein did these great men agree? wherein did they resemble each 425 other? In genius, in learning, in unfeigned piety, in blameless purity of life, and in benevolent aspirations and purposes for the moral and temporal improvement of their fellow-creatures! Both of them wrote a Latin Accidence, to render education 430 more easy and less painful to children; both of them composed hymns and psalms proportioned to the capacity of common congregations; both, nearly at the same time, set the glorious example of publicly recommending and supporting general toleration, and the liberty both of the Pulpit and the press! In the writings of neither shall we find a single sentence, like 435 those meek deliverances to God's mercy, with which Laud accompanied his votes for the mutilations and loathsome dungeoning of Leighton and others!—nowhere such a pious prayer as we find in Bishop Hall's memoranda of his own life, concerning the subtle and witty atheist that so grievously perplexed 440 and gruelled him at Sir Robert Drury's till he prayed to the Lord to remove him, and behold! his prayers were heard: for shortly afterward this Philistine-combatant went to London, and there perished of the plague in great misery! In short, nowhere shall we find the least approach, in the lives and 445 writings of John Milton or Jeremy Taylor, to that guarded gentleness, to that sighing reluctance, with which the holy brethren of the Inquisition deliver over a condemned heretic to the civil magistrate, recommending him to mercy, and hoping that the magistrate will treat the erring brother with 450 all possible mildness!—the magistrate who too well knows what would be his own fate if he dared offend them by acting on their recommendation.

The opportunity of diverting the reader from myself to characters more worthy of his attention, has led me far beyond my first intention; but it is not unimportant to expose the false zeal which has occasioned these attacks on our elder patriots. It has been too much the fashion first to personify the Church of England, and then to speak of different individuals, who in different ages have been rulers in that church, as if in some strange way they constituted its personal identity. Why should a clergyman of the present day feel interested in the defence of Laud or Sheldon? Surely it is sufficient for the warmest partisan of our establishment that he can assert with truth,—when our Church persecuted, it was on mistaken principles held in common by all Christendom; and at all events, far less culpable was this intolerance in the Bishops, who were maintaining the existing laws, than the persecuting spirit afterwards shewn by their successful opponents, who had no such excuse, and who should have been taught mercy by their own sufferings, and wisdom by the utter failure of the experiment in their own case. We can say that our Church, apostolical in its faith, primitive in its ceremonies, unequalled in its liturgical forms; that our Church, which has kindled and displayed more bright and burning lights of genius and learning than all other protestant churches since the reformation, was (with the single exception of the times of Laud and Sheldon) least intolerant, when all Christians unhappily deemed a species of intolerance their religious duty; that Bishops of our church were among the first that contended against this error; and finally, that since the reformation, when tolerance became a fashion, the Church of England in a tolerating age, has shewn herself eminently tolerant, and far more so, both in spirit and in fact, than many of her most bitter opponents, who profess to deem toleration itself an insult on the rights of mankind! As to myself, who not only know the Church-Establishment to be tolerant, but who see in it the greatest, if not the sole safe bulwark of toleration, I feel no necessity of defending or palliating oppressions under the two Charleses, in order to exclaim with a full and fervent heart, Esto perpetua!

Braving the cry. O the Vanity and self-dotage of Authors! I, yet, after a reperusal of the preceding Apol. Preface, now some 20 years since its first publication, dare deliver it as my own judgement that both in style and thought it is a work creditable to the head and heart of the Author, tho' he happens to have been the same person, only a few stone lighter and with chesnut instead of silver hair, with his Critic and Eulogist.

A wind that with Aurora hath abiding . . . . .	508
Ah! cease thy tears and sobs, my little Life . . . . .	91
Ah! not by Cam or Isis, famous streams . . . . .	424
All are not born to soar—and ah! how few . . . . .	26
All look and likeness caught from earth . . . . .	393
All Nature seems at work. Slugs leave their lair . . . . .	447
All thoughts, all passions, all delights . . . . .	330
Almost awake? Why, what is this, and whence . . . . .	211
An Ox, long fed with musty hay . . . . .	299
And in Life's noisiest hour . . . . .	499
And my heart mantles in its own delight . . . . .	499
And this place our forefathers made for man . . . . .	185
And this reft house is that the which he built . . . . .	211
Are there two things, of all which men possess . . . . .	361
As I am a Rhymers . . . . .	477
As late each flower that sweetest blows . . . . .	45
As late I journey'd o'er the extensive plain . . . . .	11
As late I lay in Slumber's shadowy vale . . . . .	80
As late, in wreaths, gay flowers I bound . . . . .	33
As late on Skiddaw's mount I lay supine . . . . .	350
As oft mine eye with careless glance . . . . .	104
As some vast Tropic tree, itself a wood . . . . .	498
As the shy hind, the soft-eyed gentle Brute . . . . .	510
As the tir'd savage, who his drowsy frame . . . . .	521
As when a child on some long Winter's night . . . . .	85
As when far off the warbled strains are heard . . . . .	82
As when the new or full Moon urges . . . . .	502
At midnight by the stream I roved . . . . .	253
Auspicious Reverence! Hush all meaner song . . . . .	131, 522
Away, those cloudy looks, that labouring sigh . . . . .	90
 'Be, rather than be called, a child of God' . . . . .	 312
Behold yon row of pines, that shorn and bow'd . . . . .	503
Beneath the blaze of a tropical sun . . . . .	396
Beneath this thorn when I was young . . . . .	269
Beneath yon birch with silver bark . . . . .	293

Benign shooting stars, ecstatic delight . . . . .	512
Bright cloud of reverence, sufferably bright . . . . .	495
Britons! when last ye met, with distant streak . . . . .	150
Charles! my slow heart was only sad, when first . . . . .	154
Child of my muse! in Barbour's gentle hand . . . . .	483
Come, come thou bleak December wind . . . . .	498
Come hither, gently rowing . . . . .	311
Cupid, if storying Legends tell aright . . . . .	46
Dear Charles! whilst yet thou wert a babe, I ween . . . . .	158
Dear native Brook! wild Streamlet of the West . . . . .	48
Dear tho' unseen! tho' I have left behind . . . . .	468
Deep in the gulph of Vice and Woe . . . . .	12
Depart in joy from this world's noise and strife . . . . .	177
Dim Hour! that sleep'st on pillowing clouds afar . . . . .	96
Do you ask what the birds say? The Sparrow, the Dove . . . . .	386
Dormi, Jesu! Mater ridet . . . . .	417
Each crime that once estranges from the virtues . . . . .	508
Earth! thou mother of numberless children, the nurse and the mother . . . . .	327
Edmund! thy grave with aching eye I scan . . . . .	76
Encinctured with a twine of leaves . . . . .	287
Ere on my bed my limbs I lay (1803) . . . . .	389
Ere on my bed my limbs I lay (1806) . . . . .	401
Ere Sin could blight or Sorrow fade . . . . .	68
Ere the birth of my life, if I wished it or no . . . . .	419
Farewell, parental scenes! a sad farewell . . . . .	29
Farewell, sweet Love! yet blame you not my truth . . . . .	402
Fear no more, thou timid Flower . . . . .	356
'Fie, Mr. Celeridge!—and can this be you? . . . . .	441
Flowers are lovely, Love is flower-like . . . . .	583, 584
For ever in the world of Fame . . . . .	510
Frail creatures are we all! To be the best . . . . .	486
Friend, Lover, Husband, Sister, Brother . . . . .	392
Friend of the wise! and Teacher of the Good . . . . .	403
Friend pure of heart and fervent! we have learnt . . . . .	505
From his brimstone bed at break of day . . . . .	319
Gently I took that which ungently came . . . . .	488
Γυνῶθι σεαυτὸν!—and is this the prime . . . . .	487
Go little Pipe! for ever I must leave thee . . . . .	513
God be with thee, gladsome Ocean . . . . .	359
Gōd is oŭr Strēngth and oŭr Rēfuge . . . . .	326
God's child in Christ adopted,—Christ my all . . . . .	490

Hear, sweet Spirit, hear the spell . . . . .	420
Heard'st thou yon universal cry . . . . .	10
Hence, soul-dissolving Harmony . . . . .	28
Hence that fantastic wantonness of woe . . . . .	157
Hence! thou fiend of gloomy sway . . . . .	34
Her attachment may differ from yours in degree . . . . .	484
Here lies a Poet; or what once was he . . . . .	587
High o'er the rocks at night I rov'd . . . . .	548, 549
High o'er the silver rocks I rov'd . . . . .	547
His native accents to her stranger's ear . . . . .	508
His own fair countenance, his kingly forehead . . . . .	502
How long will ye round me be swelling . . . . .	39
How seldom, friend! a good great man inherits . . . . .	381
'How sweet, when crimson colours dart . . . . .	353
How warm this woodland wild Recess . . . . .	409
Hush! ye clamorous Cares! be mute . . . . .	92
I ask'd my fair one happy day . . . . .	318
I from the influence of thy Looks receive . . . . .	496
I have experienced the worst the world can wreak on me . . . . .	501
I have heard of reasons manifold . . . . .	418
I heard a voice from Etna's side . . . . .	347
I heard a voice pealing loud triumph to-day . . . . .	511
I know it is dark; and though I have lain . . . . .	382
I know 'tis but a dream, yet feel more anguish . . . . .	195
I mix in life, and labour to seem free . . . . .	202
I never saw the man whom you describe . . . . .	182
I note the moods and feelings men betray . . . . .	448
I sigh, fair injur'd stranger! for thy fate . . . . .	152
I stand alone, nor tho' my heart should break . . . . .	507
I stood on Brocken's sovran height, and saw . . . . .	315
I too a sister had! too cruel Death . . . . .	21
I wish on earth to sing . . . . .	514
If dead, we cease to be; if total gloom . . . . .	425
If fair by Nature . . . . .	509
If I had but two little wings . . . . .	313
If Love be dead . . . . .	475
If Pegasus will let thee only ride him . . . . .	21
If thou wert here, these tears were tears of light . . . . .	386
